Sport Briefs

GUELPH (CP) — Kitchener Panthers swept the Senior Intersstraight games with a 7-1 win over Guelph C-Joys Wednesday night.

* * *

BRANTFORD (CP) — Ron McNeil scored three goals Wednesday night to lead Brantford Warriors to a 13-4 win over Peterborough Lakes, clinching the Eastern Canada Senior A lacrosse championship.

The Warriors, who downed the Lakers 4-2 in the series, will meet either New Westminster or Coquitlam, both of British Columbia, for the Mann Cup.

TORONTO (CP) — A chestnut colt by the sire of Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Canonero II brought the highest price at the second night of the Canadian Thoroughbred Horse Society summer yearling sale Wednesday night.

The colt, by Pretender out of Bubbles O'Tudor, was consigned by former OTHS president Donald McClelland and purchased by J. C. (Jerry) Meyer for $36,000.

OTTAWA (CP) — Bearded and bronzed, three lean canoeists paddled into the waters of the Britannia Yacht Club Wednesday, 114 days and 3,350 miles from the start of their trip.

They were to leave this morning for Montreal, the end of their journey that began at Rocky Mountain House, Alta.

None had much previous experience canoeing.

They estimated the trip cost them $400 apiece.

TORONTO (CP) — Bobbie Pattie rode six winners in nine races at Woodbine racetrack Wednesday, including the seventh, the Colonel Sam Purse, named in honor of Ontario businessman R. S. McLaughlin who celebrated his 100th birthday Tuesday.

Game Club Members Making Winter Plans

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Snowmobiling will be placed on the sports agenda of the Belleville and district 97ish and Game Club this winter.

Directors approved the formation of a snowmobile club at a meeting on Wednesday night.

Membership will be confined to members only. Special club crests will be provided.

Also approved was a turkey shoot scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 17, on the Fred Hoskings property on the third concession of Sydney, two miles north and west of the junction of Highway 401.

President George Hammett announced all general meetings for the coming year will be held in the new Royal Canadian Legion Building.

The first meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 21 on the first floor. All meetings will be held on the third Tuesday of the month. Seasonal films will be shown.

Special fund - raising projects for the coming season were approved by directors.

The Napanee office of the department of lands and forests advised the club of a special service to the public in the district.

It will be on duty for emergency calls on holiday weekends, Saturdays, etc. after regular hours 8 - 5. The number is 613-354-5691. Calls from Picton, Belleville, Trenton, Kingston or Brighton to be placed through Zenith 42810.

Hyde Manages Bowlers

If there's one thing that Gerry Hyde is recognized for it's managing. The former Belleville mayor held the position of personal officer, purchasing agent and building maintenance supervisor in that city until April of 1970, when he accepted a similar position in St. Thomas, Ontario.

Mr. Hyde's experience will stand him in good stead in his most recent position, manager of the five-pin bowling team that will represent Canada in the World Lawn Bowls Championship at Worthing, England next June.

The Belleville native was elected to the post at the Canadian Lawn Bowling Championships held in Oshawa two weeks ago. Besides winning the provincial singles championship in 1968, his bowling experience includes serving as president of the Canadian Bowling Council and the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association.

Team Defends Title

Phil Dyble and Harold Emerson are hoping to have a ball again this year in the Bay of Quinte's Mens Pin Ball Tournament. The twosome will be defending the title they won last season this Saturday against a field of 43 other challenging teams.

Alberta Socreds Hold Parley To Consider Future of Party

CALGARY (CP) — A back-room meeting was to be held here today to discuss the future of the Social Credit party in Alberta following its shattering defeat in the Aug. 30 general election.

The meeting, similar to one in Edmonton last week, was called to plan a political course by which some observers believe will be unsuccessful.

Defeated Premier Harry Strom and candidates, organizers and key workers from the 18 Calgary constituencies were to attend.

"We've got to get started now," a Social Credit spokesman said. "If we hold off for a year, then goodbye Social Credit."

Editorial writers and political opponents feel nothing will help. They predict Social Credit, which governed the province for 36 years, will slide into oblivion.

Social Credit spokesmen rationally disagree but concede some rebuilding is needed.

Bill Johnson, president of the Alberta Social Credit League, said the party will have to reassess vigorously its outlook to meet the voters' cry for change.

That cry elected 49 Progressive Conservatives Aug. 30. Social Credit salvaged 25 seats in the 75-seat legislature and Grant Notley, the 32-year-old leader of the New Democratic Party, took the other.

"We must be a constructive opposition, something new and different for us, but we must show the voter we are still the alternative," Mr. Johnson said.

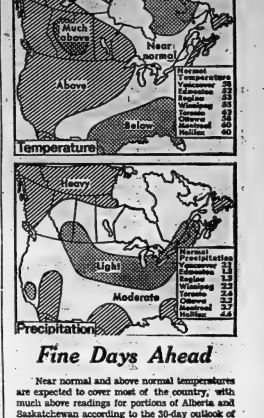
Mr. Notley said the Conservative victory was the first step towards the funda[illegible]ental realignment that is necessary in Alberta.

"This, of course, means the end for Social Credit."

He predicted the Social Credit party will split into three groups — the opportunists who will defect to the Conservatives; the hardcore members who will join the federal party; and "the old hardtd" who will hang around Mr. Strom until he retires.

The inability of Social Credit to win urban support was a topic at the Calgary meeting. They lost 29 of 38 urban seats, including all 18 in Edmonton and nine of 13 in Calgary.

"We were crusading for people who were around 25 years ago but now are in hospitals and nursing homes," one party member said. "These people can't swing an election anymore."



The position of Mr. Strom, a 57-year-old farmer, as party leader may be challenged but one Social Credit MLA said "it would be better to wait and get the first legislature session over with before we do anything about the leadership.

"We've got the nucleus of a good opposition group, and our first job will be to get that organized."

The Calgary Albertan, in an editorial, said the election not only dislodged Social Credit from power after 36 years, it also produced some large questions about the future of all four of the province's political parties.

The editorial said one problem facing the Social Credit party is that, as a small-c conservative entity, it is fundamentally undistinguishable from the Conservative party which toppled it from power.

"It poses for the Social Credit party the challenge of demonstrating in its new role as the official Opposition, that it is a credible alternative to the Tories—which means credible in terms of personalities and styles. If it cannot do that during the next four years it may indeed go into irreversible decline."

Fine Days Ahead

Near normal and above normal temperatures are expected to cover most of the country, with much above readings for portions of Alberta and Saskatchewan according to the 30-day outlook of the United States Weather Bureau. Light to moderate precipitation for most of the country, except for British Columbia which will receive heavy. This is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. (CP Photo)

Liberal Wants Legislature To Discuss Surtax Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday Treasurer Darcy McKeough should either call an election or recall the legislature to discuss the provincial government's approach to United States economic restrictions on imports.

Mr. Nixon told a commission meeting of the Downsview Liberal Association that Mr. Davis announced on Tuesday controls on the economic restrictions lacked details.

Mr. Davis announced a ten per cent surcharge on imports, but exempted from the program available to firms not qualifying for federal assistance but did not say how much money the provincial government was willing to lend.

"It's fine . . . as far as it goes but we need to know how much money will be spent, which programs could be involved," said Mr. Nixon. "And we want to know why the delay before the Conservative government came up with any comment on the program."

He said Mr. Davis should call for an immediate election "on a new cabinet can work out a plan" or recall the legislature.

He said Mr. Davis did not say anything for workers whose jobs are in danger as a result of the supplementary duty imposed on imports by the U.S. "and still be does nothing beyond offer the dubious services of his ministers to expedite Ottawa's aid programs."

At the meeting, Vernon Singer, Liberal member of the legislature for Downsview, since 1959, was reconsidered by acclamation.

Uttar Pradesh Floods Claim Over 300 Lives

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Soldiers using floodlights battled through the night to build flood defences as the death toll from monsoon floods in the north Indian state of Uttar Pradesh reached 300.

Lashing rains hampered troops building or repairing embankments along the swelling Gomati River, a tributary of the Ganges.

More than 232,800 homes have been destroyed or damaged in 27,000 villages in 36 of the 54 districts of Uttar Pradesh, India's most populous state.

More than 4.5 million acres of farmland, accounting for one-fifth of the state's total crops have been hit by the floods.

About one-third of Lucknow, the Uttar Pradesh state capital, was under water as the Gomati rose 18 feet above the danger level.

Another 10,000 inhabitants of a total of 650,000 were evacuated Wednesday to government camps on higher ground, making a total of 35,000 who have been moved in the last three days.

The Ganges at Patna, capital of neighboring Bihar state, began rising again after gradually falling for a few days. Latest reports said the river was 13 inches above the danger mark.

Bihar and Uttar Pradesh are only two areas in a great arc of 12 states across 1,000 miles of northern and northeastern India affected by floods.

On the basis of figures avail[illegible] so far an overall total of at least 1,250 persons are estimated to have died.

Western Oils Gain

The Western Oils index was the only Index on the Toronto Stock Exchange to gain during August. Western Oils closed at 236.78 up 10.82 from July 30. Industrials fell 1.17 to close at 176.32, Golds dropped to 168.39 from last month's close of 193.30. Base metals were down 4.78 to finish the month at 89.08. (CP Newsmap)

Talks on Conduct at Sea Not Linked to China's Moves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The involved in waiting until U.S.-Soviet agreement to seek an end to harassment of each others' navy is not part of any Russian effort to offset China's increasingly active diplomacy, American officials say.

Nevertheless, some foreign diplomats are questioning why Moscow picked this week to approve an October visit by an American delegation to discuss ways of preventing what the state department described as "collisions and other incidents at sea."

The timing is only coincidence, high state department officials said, and has no direct relation to recent Soviet agreements easing tension with the United States and its European allies.

In fact, one source said, the Soviet Union agreed last November to the principle of seeking accords on joint naval matters. He denied any delay was

Motorcyclists Appear In Court at Lindsay

LINDSAY (CP) — Twenty-two persons charged following a raid on a nearby Omemee house Monday were remanded to Oct. 7 when they appeared in provincial court Wednesday to face 50 charges.

All but one are members of motorcycle gangs. Police said the other, William Allan Phillips, 50, of Omemee, was charged with permitting drunkenness.

One of the motorcyclists was charged with being drunk in a public place and 20 others in found-ins.

Later, 16 were charged with wilfully damaging the ceiling of jail cells at the provincial police detachment here. Six were charged with wilfully damaging the tail-light wiring of a police van, four with obstructing police by giving false names and two with attempting to escape custody.

All, including six women, were released on bail. Their ages ranged from 18 to 40.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: How about starting a one-man crusade against the public's bad driving habits to prevent the maiming and killing of hundreds of thousands every year? (Similar to what Nader did in his fight for safer vehicles by car manufacturers.)

Every day I drive it becomes more of an ordeal to stay alive and healthy due to mean and nasty people on the highways. — Mr. C.

COMMENT: I know how you feel. It is likely that I feel even more frustrated than you do.

If you have been a steady reader of my column, undoubtedly you may recall my recurring plea that something constructive be done to curtail the fiascos and deaths caused by this continuing cold war of auto versus man.

On many occasions I have made the suggestion that the national government should treat this continuing threat to our safety as a hot war rather than something that can be fought by cities and provinces alone.

In other words, make laws (and enforce them) that would apply equally to all people in all localities, including: universal driving regulations, actions against alcholic drivers, and strict judgments involving issuance of licenses and punishment of offenders.

Only in this way, I think, can we lessen the dangers you mention, Mr. C. You see, the solution requires more than a "one-man crusade". And no matter what action the government takes, "peace" depends upon each individual's willingness to do his part in this fight against slaughter on the streets.

For Mrs. F.: In some cases revaccination with smallpox vaccine has seemed to help stubborn aphthous ulcers in the mouth. I suppose it is worth trying, as your doctor seems to have had some good results with this treatment in some patients.

But I think patients should know that it is not a specific cure. As many who suffer from these pesky mouth sores, they often resist all kinds of treatment.

What helps one patient is ineffective in the other. For this reason it pays to keep trying until you find one that gives you relief.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 14 and have trouble with my sustan. It is fading in places and looks embarrassing. Will bleach cream help, or anything? — Miss S.

COMMENT: Coverup lotions often help. But rather than experiment, why not tell your parents about your problem? If they realize how much it is bothering you, they will put in a call to your family doctor — or make an appointment for you to see him.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I ha[ve] a low-acting thyroid. My [doc]tor has had me on four grai[ns] of thyroid extract a day. I have been taking it for a fe[w] months. Truthfully, I have not been back for a checkup in four months. I've been very nervous. Is it possible that I have been taking too much thyroid? — Mrs. F.

COMMENT: It is possible. It may be time for a change. In other words, a visit to your doctor with a recheck on your thyroid gland's efficiency may indicate you have been taking too much thyroid. If so, lessening the dosage may remove your nervous symptoms.

Ontario French Canadians Plan Fight

OTTAWA (CP) — L'Association Canadienne-Française de l'Ontario Wednesday night launched an "operation anti-assimilation" across Ontario, and asked all French Canada to support it.

The decision was taken at a meeting of the association's directors and is part of the group's fight to get French-language schools for Ontario's 600,000 French-speaking citizens.

The meeting was called following the refusal of Nipissing school authorities to approve a separate French-language school in Sturgeon Falls.

One of the directors at the ACFO meeting said the campaign will be a "fight to the finish."

The meeting produced a long statement which said that Sturgeon Falls, a town of about 7,000 "has become the St. Leonard of Franco-Ontarians."

The reference was to a Montreal suburb where the Roman Catholic school board three years ago set in motion machinery to eliminate English-language education.

"Let those who felt moved during the persecution of the Anglophones of St. Leonard rise up now to defend the rights of the Franco-Ontarians of Sturgeon Falls."

The statement was addressed to all French Canadians and particularly to French-speaking Quebecers.

The association said it will do everything in its power "to block the construction of an addition to the present secondary school in Sturgeon Falls, which has about 1,800 students, 1,200 of them French-speaking."

At least 250 students boycotted classes for the second day Wednesday to back demands for a separate French-language high school.

Students Continue to Strike

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — At least 250 students of Sturgeon Falls secondary school continued a strike Wednesday to back demands for a French-language high school in this predominantly - French-speaking community of 7,000.

The students ripped apart an effigy of Richard Tassi, a Nipissing board of education member who has opposed establishment of a separate French-language school.

Wednesday morning, students forcibly prevented some teachers and other staff from entering the school.

About 17 students engaged in shoving matches with staff and attempted to block all entrances. All members of the 165-member teaching staff wishing to enter the building were able to do so eventually.

The attempt to bar staff members led to two broken windows, some torn clothing and a bloody nose.

Edward Monkman, education director for the Nipissing board, visited the school Wednesday and said he will seek legal advice on how to guarantee free access to the school for students and staff. He suggested that he may try to obtain an injunction against the striking students.

The students made no attempt Wednesday to prevent other students from entering the school as demonstrators had done Tuesday.

members of the French-speakmebers of the French-speaking staff, remained outside the school Wednesday. The French-speaking staff has issued a statement supporting the students' demands.

Christian School Opens

TORONTO (CP) — Two hundred students daily are getting patriotism, discipline and morals mixed with standard school courses in the Peoples Christian School that opened this week.

The school was created by the Peoples Church, a fundamentalist congregation of 3,500 that already has a wide religious education program on Sundays.

Rev. Paul Smith says the day school was started as an alternative to an "atheist and agnostic" public system.

The fees provide a full day kindergarten, reading taught by phonetics rather than sight methods, firm discipline, chapel and religious teaching and a competitive curriculum.

Davis Suggests End to Curbs On Flow of Capital to Europe

TORONTO (CP) — Ottawa should revoke the commitment it made to the United States to block the flow of capital from Canada to Europe in light of the new U.S. import duties, Ontario Premier William Davis said Wednesday.

"This commitment was undertaken at the urging of the United States, which did not want Canada to serve as an easy, indirect conduit of U.S. capital into Europe," the premier told a luncheon of the Yonge-Bloor-Bay Association.

"It was a proper commitment for us to make at that time because the United States was facing a serious drain on its gold reserves. But with the introduction of the Nixon (President Richard Nixon) proposals, we are, as the saying goes, into a whole new ball game.

Mr. Davis was commenting on a confidential position paper Ontario presented this week in Ottawa to a meeting of provincial and federal trade ministers.

He released the paper to reporters to correct what he described as some public confusion over Ontario's proposals.

He said the province did not make the paper public during the meetings at the urging of federal Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin. But he said Mr. Pepin has agreed since that the paper should be released.

The five-page policy paper offers suggestions for possible federal measures to counteract the effects of the 10-per-cent U.S. supplementary duty on Canadian exports.

Pointing out that the initiative for corrective action is essentially a federal responsibility, the paper suggests rebates, interest-free loans or tax credits as means of providing direct, immediate assistance to industries hurt by the duties.

Rebates would be on all or a portion of the import duty, while the loans could be for 10 years, free of capital repayment for one year.

It suggests a tax credit to the amount of the new duty paid on corporation taxes.

The paper also says that because of the new U.S. policies Ottawa should reconsider a budget proposal to reduce corporation taxes to 46 from 50 per cent.

The paper also suggests a policy of lower interest rates and a more favorable exchange rate for the Canadian dollar.

It also urges Ottawa to forgo a plan to impose taxes on income earned abroad. Any measure that would tend to discourage Canadian investment abroad would not help prevent the dollar from appreciation, Mr. Davis said.

Joe Borowski Resigns

WINNIPEG (CP) — A sign on Joe Borowski's office wall when he was Manitoba's highways minister pictured a turtle and said simply: "He makes progress only when he sticks his neck out."

Both the sign and Mr. Borowski vacated the office Wednesday after the minister chose resignation over retreating from his stand on abortion which had made his position in the cabinet untenable.

Mr. Borowski's bitter anti-abortion campaign of recent weeks culminated with Premier Ed Schreyer's virtual ultimatum Tuesday that he stop criticizing government policy on the subject or resign.

Mr. Borowski said Wednesday in a letter of resignation to cabinet he could not "in good conscience" remain.

"While I appreciate the wide latitude and tolerance of my colleagues to allow me to speak out on most moral issues, often contrary to the majority view, I just cannot bury or abort my principle on this paramount and very basic issue. . . ."

Canada Preparing For Any U.S. Move

Nixon Sees New Trade Era

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is preparing "reactions" to any new U.S. developments similar to the import surtax, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Thursday.

But the government wasn't going to start announcing policies to meet contemplated or hypothetical economic threats.

He was replying to questions by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who noted that President Nixon has spoken of the U.S. entering a new era of international trade relations and apparently intends to establish a special international trading corporation.

He asked whether Canada has specific measures in mind to enable exporters to meet this sort of development.

The government has been studying many possible reactions, Mr. Trudeau replied. One, the $90 million grant package to help Canadian industry hurt by the 10-per-cent U.S. import surtax, was before the House. Others would be brought in if necessary.

The Conservative leader asked whether Canadians would continue to have to depend on simple assurances by the government rather than the government producing actual measures.

Mr. Trudeau said actual measures would be produced when their is an actual threat. But at present there were only "nonactual" threats.

Outside the House, Finance Minister Edgar Benson was asked whether he knew what President Nixon meant by "temporary" measures.

"Really, I don't," replied Mr. Benson.

He said some countries have labelled illegal a U.S. proposal to allow U.S. firms to set up tax-free subsidiaries to expand exports.

That could amount to subsidization of exports, barred by international trading rules.

Convicts Get Court To Ban Reprisals

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Convicts holding 31 guards as hostage in a rebellion over prison conditions obtained a federal court injunction today prohibiting prison officials from taking any "physical reprisals" against them.

The order was announced by State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald, who said it was signed by Judge John-T. Curtin of U.S. district court in Buffalo.

The convicts rioted Thursday, injuring 13 guards, seizing the hostages, and setting fire to three buildings.

Oswald met with some of them later in the day and his own promise that there would be no administrative reprisals led to an uneasy truce.

Prison officials said the hostages were apparently being treated well and had been provided with blankets. The night air was chilly.

He said the injunction requested would not prevent possible criminal charges.

The hostages, kept at a distance in the large portions of the red-brick, grey-stone and "riot-proof" prison that the rebels controlled, apparently "are in reasonably good shape," a doctor who saw them reported.

The rioters—about half the Attica population—based their stand in Cellblock D, where the hostages provided security against any direct confrontation with the heavily armed lawmen. The hard core of the rebels was said to number only 500.

A measure of calm appeared to return to the then-surrounded prison Thursday afternoon when Oswald met in the prison yard with rebel leaders, a few hours after state police chased them from three of four cellblocks they initially seized.

Hurricane Hits Texas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hurricane Fern zigzagged along the Texas coast today, spawning heavy rains, two tornadoes and lightning fires that destroyed six houses, alter her stronger sister, Edith, raked Honduras with winds up to 175 miles an hour.

Meteorologists said Fern was headed toward Freeport, Tex., after it dawdled near Galveston for 24 hours. Its winds dropped from 85 to 75 m.p.h. and it lost its centre, then it developed a new eye and intensified slightly.

Meanwhile, Fern's sister Edith lashed the Honduras coastline, then lost some punch as she struck the mountains of Honduras with winds of 100 m.p.h. Torrential rains posed the threat of flooding.

The National Hurricane Centre in Miami said Edith, "an extremely strong hurricane," was likely to cause considerable damage over a small area along the path of its centre. No damage reports were immediately available from the remote area.

New Wave Conservatives

Minister without portfolio in the Ontario cabinet, Dr. R. T. Potter (centre) was last night chosen to contest the next provincial election for Quinte riding. Sharing the platform and the speech-making with him were fellow cabinet members, Hon. George Kerr, minister of energy and resource management, (left) and Hon. Bert Lawrence, minister of health.

Potter Nominated

It's New Deal for PCs Says Quinte Candidate

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

With the unanimous choice of Dr. R. T. Potter as Progressive Conservative candidate for Quinte riding, the party last night struck the chord that will be the theme of the upcoming provincial election campaign.

"Programs for people" fostered by a "new wave" that refuses to stand on its record but looks forward to the future with bold new policies was the keynote of the Quinte Conservatives' nomination meeting at Centennial Secondary School.

"While the Progressive Conservatives have formed the government for the past 28 years — don't let anyone hoodwink you into believing it is the same old crowd," said Dr. Potter in his acceptance speech before about 600 members of the party. "We have had several governments over this period of time whose records we may be justly proud of. But the newest — our new Davis government — is something different again!"

"Seven new faces — my own among them — this alone should convince anyone that this is indeed a new deal," he concluded, to the laughter and applause of his listeners.

An outspoken back-bencher for 3½ years, Dr. Potter was made a minister without portfolio in the Davis cabinet six months ago and is chairman of the interdepartmental youth committee.

In outlining the progress on his 1967 election pledges, Dr. Potter said "most of it has been accomplished since the new Davis government assumed office."

He noted that OHSIP, OHSC and HIRB will be amalgamated into one program, with one premium, by July 1, 1972, nursing home care will be covered by OHSC and two experimental extended health care projects have been started in the province, one of them in Belleville with the taking over of the Queen's Motor Hotel for a convalescent hospital.

Inroads have been made on pollution control and more than $3 million worth of industrial assistance has been provided by the Ontario government to the Quinte area, the second highest assistance rating in the province. Seven new industries and the expansion of six established industries have provided an additional 513 new jobs, with an expected increase to 959 in the next four years.

"Our health program is well under way, and I want to be in a position to assist Bert Lawrence in expanding these facilities," said Dr. Potter.

He announced a six - plank platform for the next provincial election:

Establishment of district offices in all areas of the province to improve communications between the electors and government.

An enlarging of the role of the interdepartmental youth committee.

Increased interest in the recreational development and environmental preservation of the Quinte district.

Institution of a land - use study for the province.

Separate Schools Are Issue - - Nixon

PARIS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Liberal Party will make an election issue out of its belief in extending government aid to separate schools, party leader Robert Nixon said Sunday night.

Mr. Nixon told Liberals in Brant riding that the government's recent decision not to extend support to separate schools "makes this an issue of importance and sensitivity."

"A third of our student population attend separate schools and have an excellent standard of education with the religious background that the Catholic parents desire," Mr. Nixon said.

Premier William Davis has decided not to extend grants to separate schools beyond Grade 10.

Mr. Nixon said his government would support other schools "with religious or other bases"

Jubilant Joseph Cahill, Free in Dublin, Promises IRA Action

BELFAST (CP) — British forces in Northern Ireland prepared today for fresh violence following a warning by extremist underground leader Joseph Cahill that intensified efforts would be made to bring down the Ulster government.

A jubilant and confident Cahill gave the warning after being released from detention in Dublin Thursday night. He was held for more than 10 hours by Irish Republic police before being released and carried away shoulder-high by cheering supporters.

Snipers fired at British troops in Londonderry and saboteurs set off six bomb blasts in Belfast early today.

Security forces were on full alert for a major offensive promised by militant provisionals of the Irish Republican Army.

The snipers sprayed 50 bullets at an army post in Londonderry, where Roman Catholic troopers were running high over the death of a three-year-old boy, Gary Gormley, accidentally run down by a British armored car Thursday night.

After the accident, crowds gathered in the streets hurling gasoline bombs and rocks at the troops. Women shouted: "Hey, boy, British Army, how many children have you killed today?"

An army spokesman said the boy, playing with other children, had crossed into the path of two army vehicles. The driver was unable to avoid him, the spokesman said.

A match factory, a filling station and a supermarket were among buildings damaged in the Belfast explosions. No casualties were reported.

Cahill is leader of the IRA provisionals in Northern Ireland. They are seeking by violent and other means to undermine the Protestant-dominated Ulster government and bring about reunion with the Catholic republic to the south.

Irish Republic police held Cahill on suspicion of belonging to an illegal organization but he was not charged. Government sources in Dublin indicated he was set free because of lack of evidence.

He had earlier flown into Dublin from New York after being refused entry into the United States for an IRA fund-raising

Madoc Reeve Resigns Post

MADOC (Special) — Veteran of 17 years on Madoc village council and warden of Hastings County in 1964, Reeve Thomas Burnside is retiring from municipal office to accept a position as inspector with the Liquor Control Board of Ontario.

Reeve Burnside succeeds Verne McMurray as inspector of districts 9 and 10 and has tendered his resignation as reeve to the village council, effective September 20.

Mr. Burnside assumed his new duties as of the first of September. The area taken in Belleville and east to near Kingston and north to Madoc and Marmora.

With Mr. Burnside's retirement, council will elect one of its own members as reeve and then will appoint a citizen at large to fill out Mr. Burnside's term of office. Mrs. Burnside and Thomas Jr. will continue to run the Madoc Dairy which has been owned by Mr. Burnside since 1946.

During his term Mr. Burnside saw various projects completed toward the betterment of the Village. Among these, was the resurfacing of many village streets, the rebuilding of St. Lawrence and Russell Streets under a connecting link agreement, and the installation of waterworks in West St. Lawrence and Marmora Streets.

Film Society's Season to Begin

D. W. Griffiths' film, Intolerance, will initiate a series of nine movies to be presented by the Loyalist Colleges Community Film Society beginning Wednesday, September 15.

The society, opening its second year, will also show Hiroshima Mon Amour, Ulysses, The Blue Angel, Kon Tiki, Hour of the Wolf, #45, and The Carnival, in addition to a film that was never released to the public because of its extreme realism, The War Game, dealing with a nuclear attack on England.

Prizes for all nine shows are listed as $4 for students, $6 for single adults and $10 for a pair of adult tickets.

Membership in the society is available by contacting treasurer Jim Moore at PO Box 6200, Belleville, or attending the Lecture Theatre when the first film is viewed at 7:30 p.m.

For additional information, call 962-9501 or 968-7281.

Signs of the Times

Young Progressive Conservatives were much in evidence last night at the party's nomination meeting as party faithful began a campaign to get out the youth vote. The young people began preparing and distributing the lawn placards that will soon appear in area yards as the election campaign goes into high gear.

Election Rallying Cries Resound at Meeting

"Basically, we have two health ministers," he told the audience that saw Dr. R. T. Potter acclaimed Quinte riding candidate in the next election.

"I take on the interesting things, and take the credit," he said, to the amusement of his listeners. "Then Dick has to explain to me afterwards what I said, and stamp the province explaining to the people what I meant."

Mr. Lawrence and George Kerr, energy and resources management minister, both spoke in support of the Belleville physician at the meeting.

Taking the forward - looking approach, Mr. Lawrence told the audience what to watch for after the election. That will, he said, return the Conservative government to power in the province.

"You will watch the promotion in the ministry of your present member," he asserted.

In the health field, he said, the electorate will see the development of a totally integrated health plan with improvement in prevention, treatment and rehabilitation. There will be community health centres and services, changes in the hospital system and development of extended care, after care and home care. Increased attention will be paid to the handicapped and those with degenerative ills.

"The reason Dick and I get along is because neither of us enjoys mumbling or double talk," Mr. Lawrence said. "We will not sit around and look at problems until they overcome us."

Protection of the environment is "at the very top, if not the number one priority of the Ontario government," Mr. Kerr told the party members.

"A new ethic has developed in our society, a new concept of what the quality of life should be," he said, "Ontario leads the pack on pollution control and waste management."

Emphasizing the "programs for people" policy of the Conservative government, Mr. Kerr said the Davis cabinet is committed to "better health care, better protection of the environment and the provision of jobs for our young people".

Dick Potter has put the Belleville area on the provincial political map in large letters," said Mr. Kerr. "His appointment to the cabinet should have proved that Ontario is embarking on a new way."

But, warned the minister, "we have a tendency to be apathetic about elections. Unless we fight block by block and poll by poll, we may be in for a rude shock, probably about the end of October."

His words struck the keynote for the remaining speakers, led by George Hees, MP for Prince Edward Hastings.

In a rousing pep talk, Mr. Hees warned that "the people of Canada are in a very restless mood."

"Six provincial governments have been upset because they thought they had it made," he declared. "No one can stand on his record anymore. The election is on right now. Start talking Potter now and keep on until after the election."

Norris Whitney, MPP for Prince Edward Lennox, added that "the only way to win an election is to run scared".

Sharing the platform with the successful candidate were E. M. Parker, president of the riding association and chairman for the evening, F. B. Deacon, secretary, the two cabinet ministers, Mr. Hees, Mr. Whitney, Lt. Colin Mc-Millan, MPP for Hastings and Clarke Rollins, MPP for Hastings.

Two other names were placed in nomination with Dr. Potter's. They were former mayor Jack Ellis and Trenton businessman W. D. Whitley. Both said their chief reason for allowing their names to be placed in nomination was to move that Dr. Potter's candidacy be made unanimous. Both men sought the PC nomination four years ago at the meeting that saw the Belleville physician emerge as Conservative standard bearer.

"When I seriously contested for the nomination four years ago, one member of council demanded my resignation for daring to be in politics while still mayor," said Mr. Ellis. "The same man had trouble recently deciding whether or not to contest a similar nomination."

He said he wanted to refute "scandalous inaccuracies" and attacks made by the same man on Dr. Potter, particularly by changing the wording his job, particularly in health care.

"Everything he (Dr. Potter) has done was done with utmost concern for the people of the Quinte district and with a wealth of first-hand knowledge," said Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Whitley described Dr. Potter as a man who "shook the establishment" at Queen's Park after his election.

"His was always a positive approach and the government came to recognize it," he said.

"The fellow opposing us has lots of money and he's going to make some waves," marked Mr. Whitley, in urging Conservative election - campaign by party faithful. "But it's not a matter of winning an election, but by how much."

More Than 60 Appear in Court After Rock Festival Charges

More than a month and a half later, local court houses are still handling cases resulting from the Rock Mercy Peecee Festival held in Madoc early in August.

Judge R. C. Jackson, presiding over the Madoc court, heard more than 60 cases yesterday, ranging from violations of the petty trespass act to peddling narcotics.

"Because the court house is not the largest in the world, defendants were packed into the court room, lined down both the hall and the stairs and out into the street area in front of the building," said crown attorney Peter Girard.

Child Crushed

TWEED (Special) — A three - year - old Huntingdon township girl was killed yesterday in a farm accident, when she fell off a trailer and was crushed beneath its wheels.

Shari Lynn Sipes died in Belleville General Hospital two hours after the accident at 1:35 p.m. Thursday. She was riding on the home-made farm trailer behind a tractor driven by her step-father, Clifford Moore, on lot 10, concession 6 of Huntingdon township.

An autopsy on the child, who would have marked her fourth birthday Sept. 17, was held at Marie Lacey. The service was

At festival time it was felt by both observers and participants that alcohol consumption was far greater than drug usage, and although many drug (narcotics) charges were handled previously in Belleville, nine cases were set for trial in Madoc yesterday.

Mr .Girard, handling the drug cases which fall under federal regulations, said three of the nine defendants pleaded guilty to charges of possession of LSD and marijuana, leaving the rest to be remanded until late October. "Many of the charges are waiting out their remanded sentences in order to make sure they actually had drugs. Chemists are checking all samples of drugs confiscated from the youths to determine quantity and type," said Mr. Girard. "It is possible that a youth/could plead guilty to possession of LSD when, unknowingly, he had been sold sugar tablets in disguise."

It was reported at festival time that numerous cases of "phony or bad drugs" were turning up at the hospital tents.

Prosecution claims, the fifes were strictly set at $100 and generally the amounts of drugs confiscated were extremely small."

Also to come before Judge Jackson, and to be prosecuted by Assistant Crown Attorney Glen Deline, were approximately 20 cases of trespassing.

"The charges were not brought by the Quintins, but by neighboring farmers," said Mr. Deline. "Festival goers who couldn't afford admission cost resorted to the adjacent fields to enter the festival grounds, rather than using the more costly front entrance."

Under the petty trespass act, each could be fined, no less than $10 and no more than $100. Fines levied ranged around the $50 mark.

One youth is now out on bail, while the other remains in custody, facing two other unnamed charges. His case has been remanded until September 16 when proceedings "to have the matter spoken to by counsel," will occur. The other youth will be tried in October.

One young woman charged with selling alcohol on the festival site was fined $400 while a boy who was charged similarly and fined $300, returned to the judge. "I didn't know it was illegal to sell booze."

"Sit down," said Judge Jackson.

While some members of the Satan's Choice were remanded to appear yesterday, they had previously been detained by the Onemee police detachment.

Their leader did manage to appear before the judge on a charge of possession and was remanded until October.

Although the Quintins have recently retracted the claim, members of the Satan's Choice gang were called by the festival organizers as the biggest reason for the early closing of the event.

The long string of cases has not ended with the area court houses, at least not until Oct. 21 when yesterday's remands will once again have their day in court.

Man Jailed For Theft

TWEED (Staff) A Tweed man is serving 18 months in the Regional Detention Centre in Napanee after pleading guilty yesterday to theft of over $50 from the home of an elderly Tweed couple.

The theft took place on Aug. 19

Dufferin Dispute Was Trigger

Town Council, Utilities Commission Debate Not Settled Yet

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Clashes between municipal bodies, development companies, and a string of individuals and a continuing series of legal actions have characterized this town's grand feud over servicing Dufferin Developments.

Much is settled — the Public Utilities Commission has now signed a subdividers' agreement for the extension of water service to the new 300-home housing area to be built south-west of Trenton High School — but the PUC did not do this until seven months after town council had given similar approval.

The long process of debate and delay has increased the antipathy between council and the mayor and council and the PUC.

Mayor Duncan McDonald had been unable to rally town council to his thinking on the extension of services issue but did have success in the PUC where his plan for servicing Dufferin have been compatible with those of Commissioner Charles Hilton.

Payment Is Issue

Crux of the matter has been who should pay for new lines to carry water from the town system out to Dufferin developments. Council insisted that municipal taxpayers pay half the cost of extending the services, while the mayor has said the developer should pay all.

In May 1967, council had formally adopted the policy of 50-50 cost sharing and Hugh O'Neil, realtor and vice-president of Dufferin Development has maintained that in view of this policy his firm had assumed it would pay only half the cost.

The mayor has stressed that he has wanted subdividers to pay the full shot for over a year and, as far as the policy is concerned, says it has not been followed religiously — that some developers have had 50-50 agreements, some less favorable arrangements.

He refers to the cost sharing as a "give-away program" unparalleled in other communities. He likens it to incentives to industries schemes here that were disallowed by the Ontario Municipal Board.

However, council has been just as adamant in supporting the program in the Dufferin debates, especially on the grounds that 50-50 sharing conforms with the 1967 policy.

Began Jan. 14

The real trouble began Jan. 14 of this year when town council empowered Councillor Ted Parker to sign a subdividers' agreement with Dufferin Developments because Mayor McDonald flatly refused to sign it.

The mayor said he would not sign because he was not satisfied the 50-50 sharing was established policy, adding there was no urgency because it still had to be dealt with by the PUC.

About the same time, in an interview with The Intelligencer, he said "the agreement" means too much money to the town for me to bow out easily".

In a further council meeting Jan. 21, councillors dealt with two agreements because the Dufferin water extension. Decision was made to reduce the engineering fee section. D. charged against Dufferin and to set up 50-50 sharing for a line on Trigo Boulevard not covered in the subdividers agreement.

The same day, Trenton's newly elected Public Utilities Commission held its inaugural meeting, through elections. D. James McDonald the town's former mayor, had taken over from longtime commissioner Cliff Baker, as chairman of the PUC. The commission chair held by realtor Frank Berry was assumed by former commissioner Charles Hilton. Mayor Duncan McDonald, acclaimed to office for a second term, resumed the ex-officio commission seat he had held since January 1970 when he took over the mayor's job.

As the new three-man commission bonded into action, it did so without the assistance of a full-time PUC manager. Jim Page, who had held the job for over a decade, had handed in his resignation shortly after the Dec. 7 elections. The commission's secretary-treasurer, Doug Manlow, was appointed manager during a later administrative shuffle at the PUC offices.

Council Unanimous

(Composition of council had not changed so greatly through the elections. Councillors Ted Parker, Paul Tripp, George Greer and Stan Richardson were returned to office along with new-bloods, Peter Artz and George Brown. Incidentally, council in 1971 has been unanimous in its dealings with the Dufferin dispute, although this has been changing somewhat.)

The new PUC was immediately confronted with the Dufferin Developments subdividers agreement already approved by council, and that premiere meeting Jan. 21 delayed on a signing decision.

Standard practice in Trenton, as in other municipalities, is for both council and the PUC to sign subdividers' agreements with developers.

However, at a special meeting Feb. 18, utilities commissioners resolved not to sign the agreement on a 10-5 basis, although town solicitor, William Weston had told council it had the power to force the PUC to sign because the role of the commission is solely "control and management" of the town's water system.

Commissioner Charles Hilton took the position at the decisive Feb. 18 meeting that he had been elected to give stewardship to the water system and he would not "act as a rubber stamp" for council's decisions. At the same time, he moved fast into line with the mayor, opposing 50 - 50 sharing.

Together, Mayor McDonald and Commissioner Hilton formed a majority of the commission and the PUC balked at signing the agreement, signing of which had already been refused in council, but had been overruled by his council.

The PUC refusal to approve the agreement in February, took place despite the fact solicitor Weston had told council on Feb. 8 that courts of law would uphold any decision by council to order the commission to sign. Council subsequently ordered the PUC to approve the agreement.

It was during the PUC refusal meeting on the 18th that some remarkable information came to light—services planned to take water into Dufferin would be inadequate.

The new commission consulted the engineering firm, Gore and Storrie, before the meeting and was told the approved 600-foot water line that would carry water into Dufferin Developments from the north at a cost of $40,000 was insufficient. Gore and Storrie then recommended a $103,000 pipeline to take water overland from Dufferin Avenue on the east over a 4,850 foot course to the housing area.

It came to light at the same time that this recommendation was not new — Gore and Storrie had proposed this pipeline in a water service study in May of 1969 but this recommendation appears to have been neglected, or, at least for some reason, not taken into consideration.

One possibility was that due to a change of command at the PUC and a change of commissioners through elections, the awareness of the study was broken.

Clearly, Gore and Storrie had told the PUC in early 1969 that the Trenton water system needed $872,000 in-new capital works, one of which was the Dufferin Ave. overland pipeline.

In the days that followed, Dufferin Developments issued a press release explaining that their engineering consultants Proctor and Redfern, had sought specifications for the subdivision from the PUC and the commission had made no mention of the pipeline. These specifications were sought before the present PUC took office.

Plans for the subdivision had been approved by town council and provincial agencies, and a special meeting of various authorities was called to get to the bottom of the problem of adequate servicing.

At the all-powers conference Feb. 25 OWRC spokesmen told councillors and utilities commissioners, provincial authorities had approved the servicing scheme on the assumption the water system of the town was adequate.

System Inadequate

As consulting engineers and OWRC officials examined the Dufferin issue, it became clear the town system was grossly inadequate to provide water to so large a housing area as Dufferin Developments.

PUC Chairman MacDonald blamed the shortcomings of the system on 20 years of poor engineering. "It was not in May 1969 that we shifted to using consulting engineers," he said.

Gore and Storrie president John Powell stressed that his firm had told the PUC (in May 1969) to build the overland pipeline and indicated it would not just serve Dufferin Developments. "It will help everybody on the west side to some degree," he said.

During the same conference here, Mr. Powell also cautioned Dufferin Developments against servicing the first phase of the new housing area from McGill Street. He told High O'Neil "it would be 50 extra houses and an added strain on an already overtaxed water system."

Dufferin Developments began building houses in the first phase of the subdivision in April despite the Gore and Storrie cautioning. As well, several matters were still unsettled with Dufferin's neighboring subdivision built by Wasil Sidor.

Meanwhile, the proposal of Gore and Storrie to build the overland pipeline from Dufferin Avenue developed flaws, and the PUC decided to scrap it. The commission had pledged to build this pipeline at the end of the all-powers conference.

Rejection of the Dufferin pipeline came after further study by Gore and Storrie and this major water extension at its last meeting Aug. 19.

However, one still unresolved side issue opened to the spring as Dufferin began construction of its first phase at the top of McGill Street in April.

Wasil Sidor wanted compensation from Dufferin Developments for use of water mains which range from noncompliance with specifications (for the service) to nonpayment (by Sidor) of the cost of extending services." The commission bills Sidor for repairs to the water system in his subdivision.

Last December, the now retired group of utilities commissioners had been able to come to terms with Sidor and had decided to let the new commission try to settle the PUC account with the developer.

Sidor, at one point last year had agreed to settle with the PUC "if the commission would agree in writing that no other developers would be allowed to connect with the mains in his housing area." This was not agreed to.

The new PUC has also failed to come to terms with Mr. Sidor.

Mayor Overruled

Against the wishes of the mayor, council on Aug. 28 decided that in view of the long delays in the Dufferin agreement process, it would give up the policy of signing subdividers' agreements with the PUC. Council resolved that it would have its own agreements with subdividers and the PUC would be likewise.

Soon after, the commission's legal consultants, Fasken and Calvin, reported to council that provincial authorities would not accept this two-agreement method proposed by council.

Council by this time had accepted the 100 per cent cost to subdividers the mayor had supported, and gave tentative acceptance to barring the Fasken and Calvin opinion, to having joint signing once more.

However, in a recent letter to the PUC, the town's deputy clerk, Arden Royce, advised (on behalf of council) that the commission accept any financial securities that council may decide in future. Taking this communication as an indication council was in a shift from its now-established 100 per cent policy to one more favorable to subdividers the PUC decided it will work with council only on agreements in which the subdivider pays the total cost of extending services to subdivisions.

If the PUC has not come to terms with Sidor, Dufferin Developments has not either — but it is unclear legally whether Dufferin has to come to terms with its neighboring builder.

Dufferin says it, like the PUC has tried but terms have not been reached. Sidor has even questioned that Dufferin has tried to come to terms with him.

With homes rising in the first phase of the new subdivision, agents of Dufferin linked up with the water main on McGill Street in early July and Sidor called in the police to observe their activities.

Water Cut Off

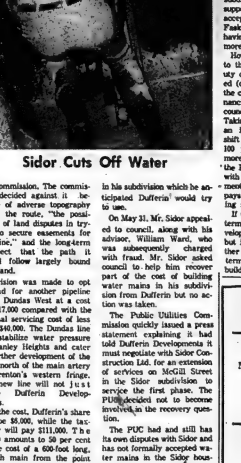
Then on July 7, Sidor, claiming ownership of the cos-foot reserve at the end of the street, moved in and severed the connection made by Dufferin.

The following evening, council met in special session and swiftly moved on the advice of town solicitor Weston to seek an interim injunction to prevent Sidor from tampering with the water mains at the top of McGill Street.

Mayor McDonald had told council it should wait a few days to make sure of its position before filing for an injunction but council moved on with word from Mr. Weston that "there is a wealth of law to substantiate an injunction".

Council also declared in a policy statement that McGill Street should be considered open to the west. Soon after, one of the PUC's legal advisors said, according to the mayor, that council should not have passed this resolution.

Meeting a week later, council issued an order to the PUC to reopen the line to the water into Dufferin Developments by a set deadline but the PUC did not meet the deadline. The commission's legal consultants had instructed the PUC to assure that council accept liability for opening the line and it took time to secure this acceptance.



While the council deadline expired at 10 a.m. on the 10th the PUC did not get the line, open until noon of the 18th.

After several delays, Judge W. S. Lass heard the town's case against Wasil Sidor Aug. 6 at Hastings County Court House, Belleville and refused Trenton an injunction that would stop Sidor from tampering with the water lines.

Subsequently, Sidor has cut off the water lines into Dufferin again and an attempt by Dufferin to take water into the subdivision along a footpath to the south has been halted.

A new round of legal actions is expected later this year. Sidor is seeking an injunction to prevent Dufferin from breaching the one-foot reserve at the end of McGill Street and the town is seeking a permanent Supreme Court injunction to stop Sidor from tampering with the town road allowance and watermains.

Despite these actions, the longterm future of Dufferin is assured now the PUC is signed the controversial subdividers' agreement. Construction will begin next month at Dufferin and the town installs it and is expected to be finished in December.

Next Question Please!

Are we any closer to an election?

If I knew the answer to that question I would not be here in Belleville. By the way your Zwick's Island is a really swinging place. That train and caboose though, don't you have a transport museum here?

As one who might be regarded as a member of the jet set what do you think of the traffic holdups at the Bay Bridge?

The what bridge?

Well, I was so busy shaking hands I must have missed it . . . but you mean to say there are still bridges like that in Canada?

Do you think your Government's subsidy program to assist exporters hit by the U.S. import surtax will work? After all it covers only about two-thirds of the surtax.

P.M. (disarmingly) — Yes.

At home doing the dishes. Or more likely resting.

There has been criticism of your trips overseas, that they are extravagant, that they have been, in part at least, at the taxpayer's expense. Have you anything to say to that?

Well, as you no doubt are aware I have been seeing a lot of Canada recently, and I would recommend that to anyone. What is past is past and I make no apology for getting away now and again from the Parliamentary grind.

Perhaps you have read of the president of the American Psychological Association and his talk of a drug to promote the moral and ethical propensities of man, and subordinate his primitive behavioral tendencies. Dr. Clark would have the drug administered first to power-hungry politicians, people holding the fate of millions of people in their hands for example?

Well on this continent we do have the failsafe thing and controls on fingers that could press any button. However, in general I think your question might properly be addressed to the leader of the Opposition.

Borowski Resigns

Whatever else may be said of resigning Manitoba Highways Minister Joe Borowski he is a man who knows his own mind, heeds his own counsel, and sticks by his principles to the end. Told by Premier Schreyer to get in line with Government policy or leave the cabinet he chose the latter. Society needs its Borowskis, even if governments find them embarrassing, and the member for the northern constituency of Thompson will be around as an MP until at least the next general election. After that he has indicated he will be up to his gonestituents. If he is too maverick for cabinet status, Mr. Borowski will have a freer hand as a backbencher.

A Child's Death

Dark, handsome Peter Gallagher of Belfast carried the coffin containing the body of his 18-month daughter Angela to the burial ground the other day, in a scene so poignant that if it had the power to stay the hand of evil men there might, ultimately, be cause for rejoicing in Ireland. Unhappily, the mentality of certain sections of Belfast and Londonderry today is such as to defy even the most charitable psychiatric analysts and we can only wonder what further acts of paranoia, even allowing for the fact the infant's death was accidental, are to follow.

More Welfare

Ontario's welfare roles increased by an incredible 43 per cent in May this year compared with the same month last year. Why this was so we do not know, for no explanation was offered in the report which caught our attention. One thing sure, apart from the cold statistics, is that the mills of Government grind slowly, the "merry merry" month of May being long since gone and here is the Ontario social and family services department issuing the figures only now.

Integration Issue in U.S. Schools

Southern 'Segregationists' Versus 'The Rest'

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The battle lines seem more ragged and the issues more clouded than ever before this year as the annual fight resumes over racial integration in United States schools.

The opposing sides can no longer be conveniently described as "Southern segregationists" versus "the rest."

As the Southern states have surged past the Northern and Western states in the pace of racial mixing in their schools, the die-hards of the Old Confederacy have found allies among black nationalists, left-wing radicals and uncertain liberals, ethnic minorities and members of white parents fearful for the quality of their children's education.

Few Americans even seem sure these days whether the fight is about education or integration, schools or race.

Acting under Supreme Court prodding, lower courts throughout the U.S. — but particularly in the South — have ordered widespread use of school buses to break down old patterns of segregation.

While more than half of the Negro children in a state like North Carolina will be in schools this year where the majority of pupils are white, most Northern states still have an average of three black children out of four in predominantly black schools. Southern integration has raced ahead while Northern integration has made virtually no progress in recent years.

Now the pressure of court rulings and publicity has begun to shift in earnest to the Northern cities, with their increasingly black cores and overwhelmingly white suburbs.

White parents in the North who once supported or accepted integration in theory, when it was confined to the South, seem decidedly less enthusiastic when told their children will have to be "bused" outside the neighborhood or will have to share classrooms with ghetto youngsters.

Their opposition to court-ordered busing has been joined by black-power advocates, who want all-black schools to develop racial awareness, as well as radicals, who once marched for integration but see it now as a means of spreading middle-class values among the Negro poor.

There also has been increasing opposition from militant Italian Chicano and other ethnic groups, who are borrowing a page from black nationalists and asserting their own community values.

The confusion and controversy about aims and methods doesn't to have been augmented by the statements of public leaders.

President Nixon has stated a flat opposition to the "busing of our nation's schoolchildren to achieve racial balance" and ordered government officials to enforce only the "minimum busing" required by law.

Even those who have a more outspoken commitment to racial integration blame the president, such as Democratic Senator Edmund Muskie, have been lukewarm to busing as a solution to racial division.

Given the South's record on integration, it was not altogether surprising that one of the most forthright statements about the issue should have come from one of the "new look" Southern leaders, Governor Reubin Askew of Florida.

Describing busing as an "artificial and temporary instrument of change" in American society, Askew told a University of Florida audience recently the alternative is to take "meaningful steps" to end segregation in the whole community and thus make busing unnecessary.

"Only in this way will we put the divisive and self-defeating issue of race behind us once and for all," Askew said. "If there is another answer, I have yet to hear it."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 10, 1951

Rev. Keith Daniel, BA, BD, minister of MacNeill Memorial Baptist Church, Hamilton, will be the new minister for Victoria Avenue Baptist Church here.

It is quite possible the majority of present day city residents never knew who built the city hall more than three-quarters of a century ago, but his picture now is resting in the council chambers. The builder of the local city hall was one John Ferin and the building and the clock tower stand as testimony to his building prowess. A grandson of Mr. Ferin, J. T. McLean, Brockville, has presented the large framed picture of the city hall builder to the city.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in the City Hall under the chairmanship of Mayor R. Fetterly at which was laid the foundation of an organization to train civilians in first aid for use in case of national emergency.

In Praise of the Cadets

Letter to The Vancouver Sun

I don't mind if the Committee on Youth wants to legalize pot. The thing that makes me mad is that it called for abolition of cadet programs — labelling them anachronistic.

I looked up anachronistic and found it to mean "a chronological error, also, something occurring or represented as occurring out of its proper time."

That committee may know about pot, but it apparently doesn't know a thing about cadets. This committee advocates youth travelling, seeing Canada, the world, and yet cadets are out-dated. They must have missed the over 15,000 youths who travelled with air cadets this summer.

I say that because I've been in air cadets for five years and know of the many kids who have travelled extensively.

That's just the air cadets — I have't mentioned the sea cadets or army cadets, who go to Japan and the Philippines and so on. The only cost to the cadets is if they want to buy souvenirs or such.

Not only does one travel, but a cadet gets to meet with kids from the rest of Canada and most of all, a youth who is a cadet learns a bit of discipline — which a lot of kids need these days. He gains initiative and matures into a responsible citizen.

If the Committee on Youth would come down off their weed they might see Canada needs cadets not pot. Cadet recruiting starts again this month. Anyone 13 or older may join. If anyone wants more information they can write to me.

Canine Scene: Or The Law With Regard to Purebreds

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

We recently advertised our English Setter puppies for sale in your newspaper.

We were amazed at the percentage of callers who asked if our price included papers.

This has prompted us to, as a service to the residents of the area, inform all of the Federal Law with regard to the selling of Purebred dogs.

"The Live Stock Pedigree Act, a Federal Statute, requires that when a person sells a dog as purebred, or contracts to sell a dog as purebred, he must furnish, or agree to furnish, a certificate of registration, together with a fully recorded transfer of ownership to the buyer."

The Canadian Kennel Club cautions all sellers of purebred dogs to refrain from quoting two selling prices for dogs, one "with papers" and one "without papers", or to in any other way indicate that an additional payment is required for a certificate of registration. Strong disciplinary action is provided for in CKC bylaws for members and non-members alike along with possible prosecution under the Live Stock Pedigree Act for those guilty of such practices.

Due to several complicated factors the Canadian Kennel Club is faced with a backlog of applications for dog registrations. Papers that have been known to take up to two years are now moving much faster because of a concentrated effort on the part of the Registration Division of CKC.

None of us are able to foretell the future very accurately, and who is to say but that dear little puppy you bought as "just a pet" won't turn out to be a remarkably good specimen of the breed. You may even get the urge to show in conformation, or in a licensed obedience trial, or a licensed field trial. A visit back to the breeder will encourage you if it is a good specimen for competition.

Be sure, when buying a purebred of any breed, that you are going to be receiving papers. Name brands have to have a label with the contents clearly outlined. This applies to purebred dogs as much as it applies to fruit drinks, pie fillings, etcetera.

M. SHILLINGTON.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Austria signed the Treaty of St. Germain with victorious Allied powers 52 years ago today—in 1919—and the largest land empire of Europe was formally dissolved. In fact, when the Habsburg monarchy abdicated in 1918, Galicia, Czechoslovakia, Transylvania, Hungary, Croatia and Bosnia had thrown off Austrian rule at once. The huge empire gave way to a republic of fewer than eight million people, forbidden forever to rejoin Germany except by permission of the League of Nations.

1944—American troops entered Germany and shelled Aachen.

1940—Nazi planes damaged Buckingham Palace.

1939—Canada declared war on Nazi Germany.

1937—More than 1,500 cases of infantile paralysis with 58 deaths were reported in Canada in an epidemic that began in June.

1931—A tidal wave at British Honduras left 1,200 dead.

854—Louis IV, king of France, died.

Canada Defence Stressed

Grushy Le Voir de L'Est

The study of the defence department's white paper in the Commons is bound to create sharp debates.

The government is increasing the department's budget and the strength of the armed forces. It is to be noted that the Bomarc missiles system, which had been the subject of a political controversy a few years ago, has been abandoned definitely.

There will be no participation with the ABM anti-missile defence program. . . . This decision indeed will not be seen with a kind eye by the U.S.A. with whom Canada eventually will hold negotiations.

Finally, the reserve forces will be maintained at the same level and the department will try to complete the training of the military with a view of having it better prepared to give support to civil forces when needed.

This decision is obviously the result of the Quebec crisis during which the Canadian army exercised a role of supervision in Quebec. Army help was needed on two other occasions—the Montreal police strike and Kingston penitentiary riots.

According to the government, it is important that the military get more extensive training so that if there is another crisis, which while not desirable is a possibility, it will be ready for all eventualities. . . .

The government, the white paper says, must be ready to face all assaults of "organized violence." What is expected in Quebec, it adds, can happen somewhere else in Canada.

The Canadian experience reveals the necessity of being capable of responding efficiently to all future attempts "at dislocation, intimidation and violence as levers of political action."

The government cannot be blamed for taking such measures. It is evident that during the Quebec crisis, its presence was beneficial. . . . However, the fact remains that the army only should be called in under especially serious circumstances.

It is up to the police to maintain order. Since the Quebec October crisis, the provincial justice department has begun a reform of the police forces to familiarize them with the duties of riot police and enable them not only to fight terrorism . . . but also to anticipate it.

Last October, the Quebec government and the provincial police were taken by surprise and this explains the army's intervention. The army is always ready to act with a great deal of tact. Its presence was never an obstacle to the normal activities of citizens.

However, it is obvious that the army's intervention cannot be requested at every turn. Our own police should be capable of acting with the competence and efficiency needed in such circumstances. . . .

The authorities must insist on rigorous training and discipline so that . . . the police can be ready at all times to put down organized violence. . . . Order must reign in a well-organized society.

Curb on Raw Material Exports Suggested

Kierans Says Canada Must Unite and Get Tough

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is going to have to get together domestically and get tough internationally to avoid slipping down the economic drain, Eric Kierans told the Commons Thursday.

Mr. Kierans, who quit the Liberal cabinet in April because he disagreed with government economic policies, said Canada is faced with a productivity crisis similar to the one that prompted President Nixon's drastic change in U.S. economic policy.

While he did not recomend a price-and-wage freeze, he said labor and business and federal and provincial governments must identify Canada's chief national goal as high employment and unify to bring it about.

And if such a co-operative nationalist approach was to succeed, the federal government must strongly resist international pressures that would turn the country into a resource supply base, destined to wither as its resources diminish.

To NDP applause, he again attacked the government for in his view giving too many favors to industries extracting non-renewable resources for export.

Mr. Kierans spoke during the third day of debate on second reading of the government's bill to provide $80 million assistance to industries that would be injured by the U.S. 10-per-cent surtax on imports, announced Aug. 15.

It was considered likely the bill would get second reading today and then go to the Commons finance committee for clause-by-clause examination.

The former communications minister said the U.S. has told Canada, through its new economic measures, it wanted a continuing supply of Canadian raw resources for U.S. economic expansion, but that Canada should stop trying to export manufactured goods and get ready to accept manufactured goods from the U.S.

That pressure had to be resisted. To do so, he suggested the government should:

—Promote provincial and corporate borrowing in Canada to ensure a downward pressure on the Canadian dollar, and thus a better export position;

—Defy any U.S. or Group of 10 pressure to peg the Canadian dollar at or above par compared with the U.S. dollar;

—Cut back on tax advantages to non-renewable resource industries, which he said produce relatively few jobs, little taxes and minimal profits for Canadian investors;

—Reduce taxes, especially at the lower end of the income scale, to promote a quick increase in spending power which would also tend to depress the Canadian dollar.

The pressure to borrow in Canada rather than in the U.S. should be applied by expanding the money supply, Mr. Kierans said. This would have the effect of lowering interest rates.

The member for Duvernay, former president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, said all parliamentary parties would have to consider seriously putting a ceiling on the export of non-renewable resources.

Canada's gross national product could grow through the export of such resources, he said. But at the same time employment, tax revenue and the Canadian share of profits could decline.

While manufacturing firms are taxed on 62 per-cent of their profits, Mr. Kierans said, the oil and gas industry is taxed on six per cent of its profits.

Canadian resources, which would appreciate in value in the future and thus didn't have to be developed rapidly, were being depleted and most of the profits were going abroad.

The U.S. didn't include such resources under its surtax—it wanted to use them while saving its own resources—and the U.S. got back 71 cents on every dollar it paid out for them.

"Exporting resources is living off capital," Mr. Kierans said.

"Any fool can have a high income in any given year if in addition to the salary he was earned he takes $10,000 out of his bank account and spends that."

Canadians should stop taking a false pride in the value of the Canadian dollar and recognize that relative currency values reflect productivity.

Canada's productivity might be as much as 15 per cent less than that of the U.S., he said, because the cost of running a bigger country with one-tenth the population is higher.

Mr. Kierans also criticized the bill itself. The U.S. surtax would force Canadian firms to look more to the Canadian market, he said.

By subsidizing the firms that had exported to the U.S., the government was discriminating against other firms that would have to fight the new attention to the domestic market.

Réon LaSalle (Lac—Joliette) urged support of the government bill. The former Conservative said the cost of hampering the government on this bill would be paid for by the Canadian people.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) said the bill is insufficient because it wouldn't put any pressure on the U.S. to remove the surtax.

He suggested the government bring in a trade stabilization act that would compensate through full tax credits Canadian industries which have been exported to the U.S.

The cost could be recovered by a Canadian surtax on imports from the U.S.

Mr. Nowlan also called for a wage-and-price freeze to accompany these measures.

Bruce Howard (Okanagan-Boundary), parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, denied that the bill gives the government too much discretionary power as to which firms are assisted.

He said the bill provides for a board to decide who should receive grants. Under the bill, eligibility would require a firm to have been exporting at least 20 per cent of its production to the U.S., and to have jobs threatened because of the surtax.

He said it was not true the assistance would merely fatten corporate profits. Its purpose was to save jobs, and higher profits would create a bigger job market.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson has been saying the surtax would not have as serious effect on farmers as many people thought.

But farm income before the surtax was lower than it was three or four years ago, he said. And the Liberals continued to let U.S. agricultural products flow in freely because they considered the farmer expendable.

Wage, Price Freeze Won't Be Extended

Labor Men Meet Nixon Today To Discuss Post-freeze Policy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Labor union chiefs will bargain with President Nixon today on anti-inflation measures to follow his 90-day wage and price freeze.

Business and farm leaders will follow the union men to the White House within the next few days to help plan a system of wage and price stabilization measures which, Nixon said Thursday, would ensure that "America is not again inflicted by the virus of runaway inflation."

Nixon announced the White House conferences when he told a joint session of Congress that the 90-day wage and price freeze he imposed Aug. 15 would not be extended beyond its limit of Nov. 13.

Union leaders are expected to press for more tax concessions and other benefits for power families in the new regulations.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, was going to the White House today with Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers Union, and I. W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers.

Woodcock said in an interview that labor department officials told him the administration hasn't closed its mind to one of labor's biggest demands—retroactive pay for all negotiated wage increases held up by the freeze and all scheduled raises under current contracts.

"The whole question is open," Woodcock said. The Auto Workers have threatened to cancel contracts covering some 600,000 workers with major auto firms if they don't get pay raises due in November and December.

Woodcock said labor leaders still oppose Nixon's proposed business investment tax credit as a "give-away" to major corporations, and will fight it in Congress.

Nixon, urging Congress to enact the measure, said it would encourage business to invest in new plant equipment to create more jobs. But Woodcock argued the corporations would use it to buy equipment displacing workers, and thereby worsen the unemployment rate which stands near a nine-year high.

Woodcock said he would propose to Nixon a permanent wage-price review board with power to subpoena company and union leaders for questioning about any price or wage hikes considered excessive, but with no power to block such increases except through focusing "the power of public opinion" on them.

Canada May Ask Yen Be Revalued

OTTAWA (CP) — United States trade restrictions and possible responses will figure prominently in talks in Toronto next week between Japanese cabinet ministers and Canadian counterparts.

The Canadian hosts are likely to press the Japanese to agree to an upward revaluation of the yen, possible key to persuading the U.S. in turn to repeal its 10-per-cent surcharge on imports.

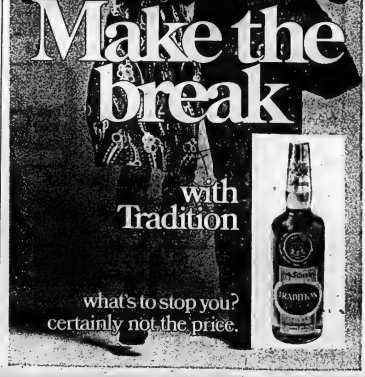
The talks will be the highest in routine annual ministerial meetings that normally alternate between Tokyo and Ottawa.

But the main subject this time will be the U.S. action announced Aug. 15 imposing the import surcharge and other measures designed to shore up the U.S. economy.

Scant Government Aid Retards Plant Growth

KINGSTON (CP) — Lack of government incentives is responsible for retarded growth in Canada's manufacturing industry, the vice-chairman of the ence Council of Canada said Thursday.

"Nothing has been done to make secondary industry healthy, and more and more multi-national corporations are exploiting the Canadian market," Dr. Roger Gaudry told 40 senior industrial and government executives attending a seminar at Queen's University.



"Canada cannot continue to be only a supplier of raw materials," he said.

Unemployment will accelerate and industrial research suffer if the situation isn't altered by government initiatives toward "systematic solutions involving much closer links between government, industry and universities."

"More pure scientists produced by Canadian universities are not hired because there is not the necessary climate to develop their ideas," Dr. Gaudry said.

He suggested mergers be allowed to "cut down on the ridiculously high degree of competition where there is just not enough room for many companies."

Development of a Canadian-American common market would boost Canadian record-Science Council of Canada said ger market, he said.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN A. BOOTH

Booth – Matthews

Cheri Lynn Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Matthews was united in marriage to John A. Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Booth on August 28. Rev. A. Poulter conducted the ceremony which was held in Bridge Street United Church. Alec Gordon, organist and Robert Park, soloist provided music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length peasant look gown of cotton lace over taffeta. A stand-up collar and long sleeves gathered at the wrist in the shape of a bell accented the empire bodice as did a narrow band of white satin ribbon caught in a bow at the back. Her long sweeping cathedral - length train of nylon illusion edged with a tiny row of matching cotton lace was caught to a headpiece of flowercrites with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of bridal pink roses intermingled with stephanotis and ivy.

The matron of honor Mrs. Loraine Reid, sister of the bride wore a floor length pale blue dress of embossed nylon taffeta styled along peasant lines with an empire waist, short puffed sleeves and a hoop skirt. The dress was trimmed with white French lace. She wore a white floppy nylon hat and carried white and yellow daisies with baby's breath intertwined with blue ribbon.

The bridesmaids Miss Mary Matthews and Mrs. Rose Gatien, also sisters of the bride were dressed identically to the maid of honor.

The flower girl Miss Cheri Rene Angus, was dressed similarly to the other attendants and carried a basket of white and blue daisies.

The best man was Jim Murray of Kitchener while the ushers were Donald Matthews and Thomas Matthews, brothers of the bride. The ring bearer was Robert Sheffield, nephew of the bride.

The reception was held at Club Canara. The bride's mother wore a coral shimmer styled dress of polyonic chiffon over taffeta with long pleated sleeves and a scoop neckline sparkled with lurex braid. She wore silver accessories and a corsage of golden garnet roses and white miniature carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a pure silk chiffon gown in a soft candlelight shade. The bodice was accented with matching re - embroidered lace. She wore beige and brown accessories and a corsage of Woburn Abbey sweetheart roses and white miniature carnations.

For the wedding trip to the East coast, the bride donned a pink hot pants ensemble trimmed in white with white accessories and a corsage of tinted pink carnations. Upon return the couple will reside in Mississauga.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT BUTCHER

Butcher – Cook

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Churchlawn the setting for the recent wedding of Wanda Margaret Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Albert. Cook, and of Robert Ivan Butcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Butcher. Rev. A. L. Sutherland officiated while Wayne Vance at the organ and Mrs. June Reid, soloist, provided music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire style floor length gown of white silk organza enhanced with lace on the bodice, skirt and long full sleeves. The veil of silk tulle trimmed with lace flowed into a train. Her headpiece was a layered bow of organza. She carried a Bible crested with pink roses.

The bridesmaids were attired similarly to the maid of honor. They were Mrs. Karen Locke, the bridegroom's sister who was dressed in pink, Mrs. Linda Cook, the bride's sister-in-law in blue, Miss Susan Cook the bride's sister in yellow and Miss Mary Lou Cook, the bride's sister in mauve.

The best man was Ted Butcher the bridegroom's brother, while the ushers were Jack Butcher, another brother of the bridegroom, Tom Locke the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Bill McGaw, the Bridegroom's cousin and Gord Cook the bride's brother.

The reception was held at Tops Motor Hotel. The bride's mother was in a pale green silk shantung dress and coat ensemble with matching accessories, a floral headpiece and a corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to points North, the bride donned a sleeveless empire style dress with a white bodice and pink skirt with a pink jacket, white accessories and a corsage of white sweetheart roses. Upon return the couple will live in Belleville.

Ann Landers

Newcomer Given Long List of Taboo Topics

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a widow who moved to California from a Southern state. Yesterday I decided to take a stroll in the garden area where the ladies who live in this complex sit and visit. I was greeted warmly by five downger types three with blue hair and two with lavender. The two lavenders were somewhat silent. I introduced myself, we exchanged pleasantries, but I had the uncomfortable feeling that they were looking me over.

ANN LANDERS

After about 15 minutes I rose to leave. One of the lavender-haired ladies smiled sweetly and said, "We have a few rules here. No one is allowed to talk about aches, pains, operations or illness." Before I could respond, she continued, "Also, we do not talk about politics, religion, clothing styles, inflation, Vietnam, our families, or sex. Are you sure you're not a Yankee?" I nodded as if she had memorized the list. I was stunned and did not reply. What do you think about such rules, Ann? I am completely mystified. — NEWCOMER.

* * *

DEAR NEW: Looks like the only two subjects left open to the girls is sex and baseball scores. Try 'em and let me know how you make out.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This might not sound like an important problem to you, but it is driving me nuts. To put it in a few words — what can be done about people who have a lot of nerve and no common sense?

I sell auto license plates in Florida. People I hardly know ask me to get their plates so they won't have to stand in line. Last week three casual acquaintances came to my home with their money and registration blanks. One woman — a college graduate — asked me to help her fill out the form. She couldn't understand it!

This morning a distant relative showed up while I was having breakfast. I asked him why he didn't bring the stuff to the office. He said, "The parking around there is rough." What do you think about a jerk who wouldn't walk a few blocks but he thinks nothing of interrupting my breakfast?

Please print this. Everyone around here reads your column. Maybe if they see themselves they will take the hint and leave me alone next year. — PAIN IN THE NECK IN FLORIDA.

* * *

DEAR PAIN: Here it is, but don't bet the rent, Lady. The people with unlimited gall are invariably the most insensitive. If you want these clods to leave you alone you'll have to come right out and tell them so.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a very good secretary who happens to be "between engagements" at the moment. Things are not good in Detroit. I decided to run an ad in this newspaper under Situations Wanted Female. It occurred to me that if I framed something a little off-beat, I'd do better. This is the way my ad read: "Happiness is being a very good secretary. $150 a week."

I spent the last five days answering this crazy telephone. The men who are calling couldn't care less about my secretarial qualifications. They want to know my dimensions and would like to meet me for "a drink." I have had seventeen propositions but not one legitimate job offer.

This has taught me a lesson I shall never forget. It doesn't pay to try to be cute when dealing with the public. This world is full of evil-minded creeps, lechers and dirty old men. Just sign me — I'LL STARVE TO DEATH FIRST.

DEAR S.T.D.: So what's new?

Four Leaflets Available for Brides-to-Be

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: (1) If my mother-in-law-to-be makes your wedding cake, do I buy the ingredients? (2) Does the bride buy the bridesmaids' dresses? (3) What procedures are involved in a mixed marriage?

I am the first of my age group to get married so I have no one but you to turn to. — Western Reader.

Dear Western: (1) Since the bride's family is responsible for the reception, you might at least offer. This kind of help promises well for in-law friendship.

(2) Not unless money is no object. But in choosing styles, let the girls have some say; and keep in mind that they should not be so far out in design as to be unwearable later.

(3) The main thing is to be knowledgeable about each other's religious beliefs and practices. When it comes to actual procedures for a mixed marriage, consult with both clergymen.

We have four leaflets the brides-to-be find tremendously helpful: The Wedding Count-Down, Wedding Toasts, Happy The Bride the Sun Shines On and Household Trousseau. Each is 20 cents, plus a seven-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

Dear Doris: My brother owes me $4,000. His excuse is that he lost his crop for two years.

Because my son and daughter were disgusted about this, they left me to work the farm by myself. My wife has just had a nervous breakdown and this does not help anything because she worries. She helped me save this money and did without a lot, while my brother's wife spends his money in extravagant household appliances. — M. Mc.

Dear M.M.P.: Would suing him get you anywhere? If the cash just isn't there, why make hard feelings?

What should have happened in the first place was a legal agreement, involving a promise to repay in regular installments, amounts and dates explicitly stated. The next best thing, now, is a family conference involving you, your wife, your brother and his wife. Agreements made at this conference should be signed by all present.

Then when any cash does materialize it comes your way instead of into modern equipment in-someone else's home.

* * *

Dear Doris: We are giving a wine and cheese party next month, and because it will be our first we would like your help.

How many types of wine should one serve, and how many varieties of cheese? What cheese goes best with what wine?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

This party will be a late evening affair so should coffee be served to guests before they leave for home? — Rooky Hostess

Dear Hostess: We have just turned out a leaflet about that: A Cheese and Beverage Party. Gives types of cheese, types of wine and suggests beverages for the non-drinkers. There is a recipe for mulled cider containing a cinnamon stick, served hot — tasty and popular! Available for 20 cents and seven - cent - stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Serve coffee at the end of the evening, with fruit bread or small squares.

Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemma. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Leaf-shaped Bowl Gives Salad A Lift

By MARY MOORE

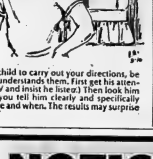
QUESTION: I am in a rut making salads. I have a large oval stoneware salad bowl but don't know how to make the most of it. Would you give my salad-making a lift? I plan to have a dinner for six and want it to be special. — Verna H.

ANSWER: So I could describe this to you clearly I made the following picture salad in a large leaf-shaped stoneware salad bowl I happen to have.

PICTURE SALAD (serves 6)

½ med. head Iceberg lettuce cut up
1 green onion chopped
¼ cup bottled bacon chips
¼ cup creamed Russian dressing
1 med. cucumber fork scored and sliced
1 tomatoes cut in wedges

In a kitchen bowl combine the chopped lettuce, green onion, bacon chips and Russian dressing. Pile at centre of large shallow salad bowl. At each end of lettuce mound arrange shallow semi-circle of overlapping cucumber slices. At extreme ends neatly arrange tomato wedges, which may be sprinkled with chopped parsley or seasoning salt if desired. This was so attractive and popular that even the casual salad eaters took two servings.



QUESTION: In Williamsburg we were served rum cream pie. Do you have that recipe? — E. MacL.

ANSWER: I do not have their recipe but I have mine.

RUM CREAM PIE

1 baked 9" pastry shell or crumb crust
1 envelope (1 tbsp.) unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1 1-3 cups (1 can) Sweetened Condensed Milk
¼ cup dark rum
1 cup whipping cream
Chocolate (unsweetened) curls or shavings for garnish

Sprinkle gelatine on cold water in custard cup to soften. Place over hot water, stir until dissolved. Blend sweetened condensed milk and rum in med.-size bowl; gradually add gelatine and stir. Chill a short time until mixture starts to thicken. Whip cream and gently fold into milk mixture... Chill until firm, 2 or 3 hrs. Garnish with chocolate curls or shavings.

If you want a child to carry out your directions, be sure he hears and understands them. First get his attention (turn off the TV and insist he listen.) Then look him in the eyes while you tell him clearly and specifically what you want done and when. The results may surprise you.

Guerrillas Release Diplomat Held Captive for Eight Months

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (CP) — After eight months in captivity, British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson was released by his guerrilla captors Thursday night on the steps of a Roman Catholic church. He went inside, received communion and offered a prayer of thanks.

He had been held in a dark, underground "people's jail" for 245 days, the longest confinement in the recent spate of political kidnappings. But doctors said the 56-year-old diplomat was in good health, and after a physical examination he went to the British embassy to rest.

The leftist Tupamaros guerrillas, who had seized Jackson on a Montevideo street Jan. 8, said in pamphlets scattered at a leftist political rally Wednesday night that they had granted amnesty to the diplomat.

There was no further need to hold the ambassador, the pamphlets said, because the Tupamaros had already won their "fight for political prisoners," a reference to the mass jailbreak Monday of 105 Tupamaros.

In Washington, a Labor member of British Parliament, Judith Hart, said she had been told by President Salvador Allende of Chile on Sept. 1 that Jackson would be released shortly. But there was no immediate indication that the Marxist president played a role in the diplomat's release.

A priest at the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, in the Montevideo suburb of Nuevo Paris, told authorities Jackson knocked on the door at 7:55 p.m.

He was blindfolded, freshly shaven and wearing the "same light suit he had on when he was kidnapped," Rev. Jose Maria said.

"He looked very well. If I had met him in the street, I wouldn't have recognized him. He was fine, spiritually perfect and normal."

The priest said he asked Jackson if the authorities should be notified and the diplomat replied: "No, I have to wait here until they come for me from the embassy."

Police said embassy officials arrived 10 minutes later, after the British Embassy received an anonymous phone call giving the diplomat's whereabouts.

Jackson, a Roman Catholic, stayed in the church about 30 minutes, Father Jose Maria said, and during that time he attended confession, received holy communion and gave thanks for his release.

Lortie's Kidnapping Trial Will Commence on Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie, a 19-year-old university student, is scheduled to go on trial Monday on a charge of kidnapping Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister, who was murdered last October.

Lortie, one of four men charged with the kidnap-slaying of Mr. Laporte, will stand trial on the murder charge later.

Two men, Paul Rose and Francis Simard, have been convicted of non-capital murder in the strangulation death of the labor minister and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Rose's 23-year-old brother, Jacques, the fourth accused, is scheduled to appear for trial Oct. 12 on the murder charge.

Rose, a 27-year-old former school teacher, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment March 13 for the murder of Mr. Laporte, abducted from his suburban St. Lambert home last Oct. 10, five days after the kidnapping of British envoy James Cross.

Simard, a 23-year-old laborer, was the second man to be tried and convicted. He was sentenced to life imprisonment May 21.

Both Rose and Simard have appealed the verdicts on murder indictments. They are scheduled to stand trial on the kidnapping charges Oct. 18.

Lortie was the first of the four to be arrested. He was captured during a police raid on a west-end Queen Mary Road apartment Nov. 6. The three other accused, hidden behind a false closet wall, escaped.

The Rose brothers and Simard were arrested Dec. 28 in a farmhouse in St. Luc, Que., about 20 miles southeast of Montreal, where they had been hiding in an underground tunnel.

Two other persons, facing charges laid under the War Measures Act, will also stand trial during the fall assizes. Jacques Larue-Langlois, is scheduled to face trial Sept. 20 on two counts of contempt of court. Robert Dupuis, charged with being an accessory to the fact in the murder, has had his trial set for Sept. 27.

Also scheduled for trial in the fall assizes are Claude Morency, Francois Lanctot and Andre Roy. They face a long list of charges relating to terrorist activities prior to last October's crisis.

Their trials were set for Sept. 13, Sept. 27 and Oct. 18 respectively.

FBI Says KKK Bombed Buses

DETROIT (AP) — Six men whose activities were reported by an FBI informer who infiltrated the Ku Klux Klan have been charged with conspiracy to thwart court-ordered school integration in Pontiac, Mich., by bombing school buses.

One of those arrested on an FBI complaint Thursday was Robert E. Miles, 46, of Howell, Mich., who recently announced he had stepped down as Grand Dragon of the Klan in Michigan. Pontiac Police Chief William Hanger said the other five men were known Klansmen. The Klan is an extremist whites-only racist group.

The six were to be arraigned today.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The arrests of the six men followed by 10 days the dynamiting of school buses in the Pontiac school board parking lot. Ten vehicles were destroyed and two were damaged.

Vallieres Reported To Be Underground

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal-Matin today published a purported note from the Front de Liberation du Quebec saying author Pierre Vallieres has gone underground.

The author of White Niggers of America was due to appear in court Tuesday to have dates set for his trial on charges of sedition and counselling to kidnapping and murder, but he did not appear.

The French-language morning newspaper says the note explains Vallieres went into hiding "because there are more important things for a revolutionary to do in Quebec than to submit interminably to fake political trials."

The newspaper says the note was found in a garbage bin in a northeast Montreal park late Thursday afternoon.

When Vallieres did not appear in court, Crown prosecutor Stephen Cuddihy asked that no warrant for his arrest be executed until Sept. 27, the date set for his trial.

Police Boats Patrol Waterways

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

When the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Ontario Provincial Police patrol boat squads take to the water, it's not for a pleasure cruise.

Although they regularly enjoy days on the water, the patrolmen are there to alert boaters to the rules of the water. "Our prime concern is education, not prosecution," says Corporal Sam Pittman, head of the Belleville detachment, RCMP. "The warnings we issue far outweigh our prosecutions."

And this is also the case with the OPP.

Most flagrant violations run "gross," agreed OPP Constable Shane Halvorsen, commenting on boaters' reactions when the high - powered OPP boat comes alongside to check for proper equipment.

Most flagrant violations run parallel with drivers brought up in court on similar charges: dangerous operation of a boat, impaired driving, lack of registration (this for boats with an engine larger than 10 horsepower, available from Canada Customs at no charge), no licence plate (for a 16-foot craft with more than a 10 horsepower motor, the Ontario Department of Transport sells a metal tag for $1) as well as personal safety infringements, top the list for the boat checks.

These latter include inadequate number of paddles, lack of bailing equipment, no anchor (all vessels of between 18 and 26 feet in length must have an anchor), improper water skiing manoeuvres and procedures, insufficient lifejackets and lack of fire extinguishers in larger craft which contain fuel tanks, and cooking or heating appliances that burn liquid or gaseous fuels.

While the OPP devotes five-day - a - week patrols chiefly to these smaller craft, as do the RCMP, the federal officers will inspect larger yachts when requested to do so.

If charges are laid, and the RCMP reports only 30 actual prosecutions tickets issued in 1971, plus 176 warning tickets, they come either under the jurisdiction of the small vessels regulations in the Canada Shipping Act, the Canadian Criminal Code or the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

One incident recalled by Constable Halvorsen concerned six people travelling in a boat without any lifejackets. Cases involving children are dealt with even more severely.

Corporal Pittman said provincial court judges tend to clamp down on boaters who might have endangered children's lives.

"While most pay their $25 fines out of court, the judge usually wants to see the boat operators in court where children have been involved," he noted. "Usually the fines are a little-steeper in these cases."

Although only Constable Halvorsen mans the OPP patrol boat on a regular basis, accompanied by a detachment officer, RCMP Constable Robert Lowe and Tom Roos and their detachment commander take turns patrolling area waters.

Until 1968, the RCMP handled almost all water patrols, but with introduction of OPP cutters that year, the federal officers' job has been cut drastically.

Five days a week, between June 1 and Sept. 11, the OPP water cruiser patrols lakes, rivers, and channels in the Belleville, Picton, Napanee, Bancroft, Kaladar and Kingston areas on a regular basis and is called in to particular trouble spots when needed.

With more detachments obtaining their own craft, Constable Halvorsen, an ex-navy man on his first year of water patrolling, finds his patrol area being slowly reduced. Not that the increased boat-power means less duty; it simply makes his patrols less wide. And with the number of drownings in the Quinte area this summer, he's been kept busy working with OPP divers.

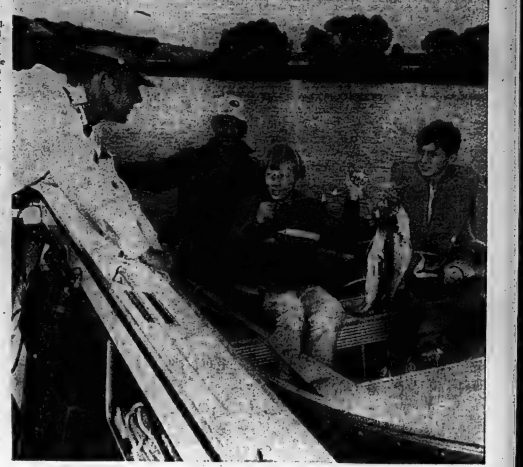
Although police boat patrols are made periodically, they have occasionally proved to be good for business.

Corporal Pittman recalls a patrol made several years ago on Moira Lake, near Madoc.

"We patrolled the lake one summer day and had issued several summonses. Traffic was pretty heavy," he recalls.



"I checked several days later, and a sports shop owner told me his business had boomed.

"He asked me if we had made a patrol the other day, and when I told him we had, he informed me that he was now all sold out of lifejackets.

"I guess word got around."

While this may be amusing in itself, the corporal recalled another incident this time when he was stationed in Niagara Falls.

Apparently, whenever one shop owner found business a bit slow, he would call in the RCMP, complain bitterly about improper boating practices and then sit back and wait for customers.

A Safe Catch

Ontario Provincial Police Constable Shane Halvorsen, a fishing enthusiast himself, stopped this boat on the Trent River recently for a routine check and as well as equipment, Donald Gillespie and Neil Francis, of Grafton, proudly showed off their pickerel catch while Edward Beatty, also of Grafton, steadied the boat. OPP cruises, in their radio-equipped skiff mounted with an 80 horsepower outboard motor, are made five days each week in the Quinte area, from June 1 until Sept. 11.

Corby Library Needs Increase with Times

The Corby Public Library in Belleville is not exactly suffering for lack of finances, but at the same time more money would be helpful in maintaining good library services.

This was the statement today of local librarian Miss Clive Delaney as she commented on a plea for more money made Thursday to Education Minister Robert Welch by the Eastern Ontario Library System.

Mrs. R. D. Butterfil, group chairman for the delegation said that Ontario's public library service, without additional financial support for books and larger facilities, "will slowly bleed to death."

The library budget in Belleville this year is $154,603, up about $4,000 from last year, of which approximately $40,000 is received through a grant from the provincial government.

Miss Delaney said Belleville's library grant under new provincial legislation is frozen at $40,000.

She said the new provincial legislation covering library grants affects the larger centres more than municipalities the size of Belleville.

"We are not feeling it much here, but it has made quite a difference to some other libraries," she said.

But with rising costs for books and salaries as well as other operational expenses, more money is needed legally if library service is to be maintained at a good level.

The annual budget at Belleville for new books and replacement titles is $23,000 which, on the average purchases just over 5,000 books of all categories each year.

New books cost about $4.50 with reference books and other non-fiction titles costing considerably more than this amount.

The education minister said he was sympathetic to the Ontawa area request but said that whether more money becomes available will depend "on how successful I am when I present my department budget to the treasury board."

First Aid Course Completed by Six

Six members of the City Ambulance Service (Quinte) Ltd. in Belleville successfully completed their first aid course under instructor Roland Howell and obtained better than 85 per cent average in receiving the Canadian Red Cross Standard First Aid badge recently.

Examiner was Mrs. Audrey Leonard, RN.

CN Yardmen Come to the Rescue

Emergency services in the Quinte community reached a higher standard last night with the installation of pure air compressor for charging air tanks at the La Salle Rescue Service building on Dundas St.

It fills in a missing link in the chain of emergency services now available in the district. From now on, firemen, SCUBA divers and others using air tanks can have them filled at any hour of the day or night at no charge. Formerly, air tanks had to be sent away for refilling.

"A gesture like this is unheard of in other communities" said Ameliasburg Deputy Reeve Norman Poste in accepting the compressor from Yardmen president Ted Branion. Mr. Poste is vice-chairman of the Emergency Executive Committee that administers the Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization, now owners of the compressor.

S. A. Meeks, owner of the La Salle Rescue service, and his staff will house, man and service the compressor at no charge.

"It should be self-supporting," Mr. Meeks told the EMO personnel and yardmen at the presentation last night.

Although tanks will be filled free for anyone using them in emergency operations, pleasure divers and others who use tanks for recreational purposes will be asked for a donation of $1.50 a tank for recharging.

Firefighters from Picton to Bancroft will use the compressor to refill their Scott Air Packs and police will use it for their Scuba diving equipment.

The compressor has already been used by OPP divers looking for a man drowned in a lake near Coe Hill last week. Large amounts of air are used in prolonged search efforts and the availability of the compressor on a 24-hour-a-day basis will facilitate rescue and search operations in the district, Mr. Meeks said.

Before the compressor was installed, small fire departments with only two air packs in their possession were seriously hampered when tanks had to be away for a day at a time for recharging. Mr. Meeks told the yardmen. Because of their gift, estimated to cost about $4,000, the calibre of emergency service in the area has risen, and there will never be a shortage of compressed air for rescue operations.

New Emergency Aid

The pure air compressor bought from proceeds of the Belleville Yardmen's Benefit Fund was officially handed over to Ameliasburg's Deputy Reeve Norman Poste (left) vice-chairman of the Emergency Executive Committee, last night. With Mr. Poste, while LaSalle Rescue Service owner S. A. Meeks (right) explained its operation, was Ted Branion, president of the Yardmen's association.

Crowds Gather at Opportunity Shop Opening

Opportunity Shop Opens Season

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary began another year of activity with the opening of the Opportunity Shop on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. Located at 28 Market Street, the shop sells a variety of used articles in good condition including clothing, china, toys, bedding, furniture and books. The shop is open every afternoon from 2 to 4 p.m., from 10 a.m. to 8.30 p.m. on Fridays and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

Staffed entirely by volunteers, members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, the shop is the biggest fund - raising project of the auxiliary. All proceeds go to the hospital, to purchase modern equipment and comforts for the patients.

The shop has operated continuously for 23 years except for brief breaks for summer holidays. Members of the auxiliary point out that it serves a three-fold purpose. Besides benefitting the hospital, it helps people to get rid of unwanted articles by inviting donations from the public and it also helps bargain hunters who patronize the store.

Members of the WHA in charge of receiving donations are Mrs. F. H. Bowler, Mrs. C. A Campbell, Mrs. Joseph Gallagher and Mrs. F. A. Beeuy.

World Series of Golf Boils Down to Nicklaus vs. Trevino

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — It's supposed to be a four-man confrontation, this World Series of Golf, but actually it's Jack Nicklaus vs. Lee Trevino with a supporting cast of two.

Nicklaus and Trevino, easily the two dominant figures in professional golf today, go for 36 holes for a $50,000 prize starting Saturday with Charles Coody and Bruce Crampton also in the running.

"I think people will be interested in seeing me and Jack go head-to-head," the outgoing Trevino said. "But don't forget that there's two other guys out there who can win it. . . .

"I'm probably the shortest hitter here, among the four of us. And that can be tough on this course."

The course for this 10th World Series of Golf is the 7,186-yard Firestone Country Club course, a par-70 layout that most of the touring pros consider one of the toughest in this country.

There are only two par fives on it, one of them the 625-yard 16th, known as The Monster.

The lineup calls for the four competitors to be made up of the winners of the four major 40 championships, the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and the PGA.

The 31-year-old Nicklaus won the PGA, Coody, a handsome, rangy Texan, took the Masters. Trevino won the American National championship and the British Open.

The next alternate was supposed to be the Canadian open champion. But Trevino won that one, too.

So they went to the second alternate, the Western Open titlist, Crampton.

He has credentials, too. The veteran from Australia has won 19 titles on the American tour, is one of the top eight all-time leading money winners in the game.

But attention will be centred on Trevino-Nicklaus, the same combo that hooked up in a playoff for the U.S. open title. Trevino won by three strokes, then made that a springboard for his sweep of the Canadian and British titles. He has won two other championships and $197,000 this season.

Nicklaus has won four times this year and ranks as the leading money winner with more than $207,000. And he plays this course as though he owns it. In 56 competitive rounds at Firestone, he has won more than $280,000, an average of more than $5,000 every time he tees it up.

Best Seller Gone

DETROIT (AP) — "The game sells itself—whether there is a No. 9 or No. 6." Gordie Howe said somewhat circumstantiogly. "The tickets will be sold whether I'm there or not."

But whether Olympia Stadium is filled for every Detroit Red Wings game or not, the place will never be the same. No. 9 is gone. Howe has retired.

"I like to use the word retired rather than quit," he said.

His retirement was formally announced Thursday, although Howe said publicly Wednesday that he was retiring after 25 years in the National Hockey League—all with Detroit.

Team owner and president Bruce Norris has named the 43-year-old Howe a vice-president in the organization, a job which Howe said "is based on a lifetime agreement."

That year "is kicked out the window," he said, adding that now he will be working for "considerably less."

More than 300 persons jammed the Olympia Room lounge for the official announcement at a luncheon. At the head table with Howe and his wife, Colleen, were Norris, Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, Ned Harkness, Wings general-manager, coach Doug Barkley and several other special guests.

Immediately in front of them was a table with Howe's children and brothers and another with notable hockey figures including Sid Abel, former coach and general-manager of Wings now coach of St. Louis Blues; Bill Gadsby, ex-Detroit coach and Ted Lindsay, former star with Howe and Abel on the famed Wings' Production Line.

Telegrams from President Richard Nixon and Michigan Gov. William Milliken were read, as well as a proclamation from Detroit Mayor Roman Gribbs.

It was difficult to tell whether tears were welling up in Campbell's eyes or they were glistening because of the television lights. He could not hide his gloom and undoubtedly echoed the sentiments of millions of hockey fans when he said:

"Inevitably it will be treated as a sad day. It is a sad day. . . .

"Never in the history of hockey has there been such an obvious and deserved loss. . . . Hockey can never repay its debt of gratitude to Gordie Howe."

It was Norris who introduced Howe, first turning towards him and saying: "I think it's unnecessary for me to tell you what you've done for this organization and for hockey."

Then he added: "He is already with our life insurance company. But also now he is a vice-president of our organization, and as such I'd like to welcome you to all our problems."

"I'm a calm individual but I'm nervous as hell right now," Howe said, not sounding nervous at all.

He looked tanned and handsome, not like a man who has had all his kneecaps knocked out and an estimated 300 stitches taken in his face over his fabled quarter-of-a-century career." At that time he set innumerable records, 26 of which still stand.

The Detroit native, who now lives in the Detroit suburb of Lathrup Village, was the league's remarkable player six times and its top scorer six times. He was on the all-star first or second team a total of 21 times.

He had several reasons for retiring. One was that "the game stopped being fun," and part of that was due to an arthritic left wrist. Also, his mother, who died recently, had asked him to retire.

Howe said he first considered retiring "four or five years ago when I came up with a bad year."

He had just made up up his mind for certain last April 3.

"I scored my last goal here in Detroit against Chicago," Howe revealed, referring to a goal at 1:34 of the second period April 3 against the Black Hawks.

"Nobody knew it, but I took that puck and gave it to Colleen and said this is the puck from my last goal."

Taking Life Easy

Gordie Howe, 43-year-old Detroit Red Wings' super star for the past twenty-five seasons, relaxes on a bench after finishing a round of golf Tuesday at a Detroit club. Howe, holder of more NHL records than any other player in the league's history, formally announced his retirement as a player Thursday. Detroit management named Howe a club vice-president 'for life'. Palmer Pitches Out of Senators' Jam

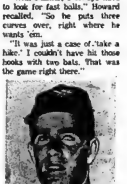
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore's Jim Palmer pitched out of a tight seventh-inning jam, then went on to record a six-hitter for his 19th victory of the season with a 4-2 triumph over Washington Senators Thursday night.

In the only other two games on the American League schedule, California Angels edged Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 in 12 innings and Boston Red Sox erupted for seven eight-inning runs to wallop Detroit Tigers 12-4.



In the lone National League contest, Los Angeles Dodgers won their fourth straight game and ninth in 11 with a 3-2 squeeker over San Diego Padres.

The turning point for Palmer, a big right-hander who joined team-mate Dave McNally as an 18-game winner—a 21 Mike Cuellar of the Orioles tries to join them tonight—came after Tom McCraw of the Senators led off the seventh with a home run.

A walk, a single and a wild pitch put two runners in scoring position with one out and brought up the potential tying run, big Frank Howard.

"With Palmer, I always have to look for fast balls," Howard recalled. "So he puts three curves over, right where he wants 'em.

"It was just a case of 'take a hike.' I couldn't have hit those hooks with two bats. That was the game right there."

JIM PALMER

Actually it wasn't right right at that moment. It was a few minutes later, though, when Palmer also caught pinch-hitter Jeff Burroughs looking, also with a curve.

Palmer also scored a run for the Birds, singling to lead off the third inning and later coming in on Boog Powell's sacrifice fly.

In the sixth, Frank Robinson crashed the 22nd home run of the year career and 497th of his career. Two outs later, Dave Johnson put his 16th homer over the wall.

The Angels, held hitless for seven innings by rookie Bill Parsons, tied the Brewers in the bottom of the ninth on a pair of walks and Mickey Rivers' triple.

Luis Aparicio drove in five runs for the Red Sox with three singles and his fourth home run of the year and Billy Conigliaro also homered for the winners while Dalton Jones had one for the Tigers.

Richie Allen's game-tying double triggered the Dodgers' three-run rally in the sixth inning against the Padres that gave Al Downing his 18th victory and boosted Los Angeles within 4½ games of idle San Francisco in the National League West.

Williams Corrects McLain

BALTIMORE (AP) — There's no pitcher living who is better with three days' rest than he is with four," Ted Williams insisted.

With that observation, the Washington Senators' manager launched a pre-game dugout dissertation in support of his year-long use of pitcher Denny McLain.

McLain, 8-19 after losing to Baltimore Orioles 4-2 Thursday night, insists that his rhythm has been ruined in 1971 because he doesn't start often enough.

In defence of McLain's record, though, Williams said, "we've only averaged two runs a game for him all year."

After winning two of his first three decisions, McLain went 3-13 as Washington scored just 28 runs in his next 16 decisions, including nine runs in the last nine games.

"I've always known I'm not a good pitcher when I'm behind," McLain said.

Bowman's Main Concern Holding Habs' Interest

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens open their 1971-72 National Hockey League training camp Saturday and Scotty Bowman, new coach of the defending Stanley Cup champions, already has a fair idea of what his main task will be.

"Over 78 games, you've got to keep your players motivated," Bowman said in an interview. "The coach's job is to hold their interest in hockey.

"He's got to get to the root of any problems and not try to avoid them. The coach must make decisions and the players must have supreme confidence in him."

Bowman, 37, a bilingual Montreal native, succeeds Al MacNeil, a much-maligned man during his five-month stint as coach. MacNeil resigned last summer to take over as general manager and coach of the American Hockey League Nova Scotia Voyageurs in Halifax.

"Montreal fans demand winning," Bowman said. "They're used to it. I can't say they were all that tough on Claude or Al. I don't expect them to be nice to me if the team is not doing well, but I'm confident they'll be fair.

Bowman feels Montreal, third-place finishers in the NHL's East Division last season behind Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, should have a successful year.

"Goaltending and defence have been the strong points on this team for the past eight years and we should have it again," he said.

"We don't have a lot of veteran players so the onus will be on Henri Richard, Frank Mahovlich, J. C. Tremblay, Terry Harper and Jacques Laperriere. It will be important for them to lead the team.

He is happy at Serge Savard's returns. Savard broke his left leg in a game here Jan. 30 against Toronto Maple Leafs. It was the second time in 16 months he had suffered a break in the same leg.

Bowman feels that a key to his team's continued success will be an improvement on defence.

"I'm not thinking of playing defensive hockey, but a big thing will be to cut down on goals-against. Last season five clubs had less goals scored on them than Canadiens and it reflected in the standings.

"Our feeling is that Ken Dryden proved himself late last season and in the playoffs. We expect him to start the way he finished."

Dryden won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player of the playoffs when he appeared in all 20 of Montreal's post-season games.

"Rogatien Vachon's record speaks for itself," Bowman said. "He didn't have a good season, but he's a pretty sound 26-year-old goalie."

Nine goaltenders, 15 defencemen and 38 forwards will report Saturday. Among the forwards will be former Quebec Junior A Hockey League star Guy Lafleur from Quebec Remparts. Lafleur was the No. 1 pick in the NHL amateur draft last June.

SCOTTY BOWMAN

Pinder Part of Black Hawk Deal

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League traded three players, including goalie Gerry Desjardins and forward Gerry Pinder, to California Golden Seals Thursday in exchange for goalie Gary Smith.

The third Hawk involved was forward Kerry Bond, who last season scored 19 goals for Denver of the Western League.

Tommy Ivan, Hawk general manager, said:

"We think Gary Smith is a great goaltender. Also, Californ-ia needed volume, so both sides feel they gained something in the deal."

Desjardins, 27, was the backup man in the Hawk net last season for Tony Esposito. He posted a 2.81 goals-against average in 22 games before suffering a broken arm last March 14.

Smith, also 27, had a 3.81 goals-against average for 71 games last season.

Pinder, 24 scored 13 goals last season, slipping from 19 in his first Hawk season in 1969-70.

Howe Missed Hockey Thrill

by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

GORDIE HOWE experienced just about every exhilaration possible in the quarter-century hockey career he closed out this week. The revered Red Wing finished with 853 career goals, well beyond the previous all-time record of Gordie Howe shot by Montreal's Maurice Richard in 18 campaigns. Being an all-star 21 times, most valuable player and top National Hockey League scorer six times each are only a few of the more than two dozen records Howe holds as he enters retirement.

But despite playing in 154 Stanley Cup playoff games (only Jean Beliveau and Red Kelly participated in more), it's almost incredible that Howe, whom many consider the definitive hockey player, never scored a single goal in overtime. Howe played in 22 overtime games, but all of his 67 playoff goals came in regulation time.

YVON DUHAMEL, who has all but abandoned the Canadian motorcycle racing scene for greener pastures as a factory rider south of the border, could well be a surprise entry at Sunday's Canadian Dirt Track Championships at Belleville's Fairgrounds. The Montreal daredevil was a perennial Number One plate holder as top Canadian driver before being signed up on a contract basis a couple of years ago by Kawasaki cycles and Ski-doo snowmobiles.

Duhamel made an unexpected appearance at the Belleville track for one of last summer's three races lightly sponsored by city firefighters and the Pinton Pushers Motorcycle Club. This Saturday, Duhamel will be as close as Moosport, where he will be riding for Yamahaski in a five-hour production road race sanctioned by the Canadian Motorcycle Association, as is Sunday's Belleville meet.

Pace Stepping Up

GORDON PEPPER, publicity man for the Canadian Trotting Association, finds in his research that harness horses are keeping faster company all the time. Last year, a record 16 miles were paced in two minutes or less on Canadian raceways.

There are 15 already this season, the latest being Rob Ron Tarkio' 1:59.4 at St. Catharines' Garden City Raceway Sunday. Driver-trainer Keith G. Waples retired the three-year-old pacer to a 58.1 last-half to pick up the $6,000 invitational purse for Dr. Steve Kzan of Brooklin, Ont. Rob Ron Tarkio has now won 12 of 19 starts, and is approaching $70,000 in 1971 winnings.

YOURS TRULY objects to the $200-$400 the Recreation-Arena Committee estimates it will cost to erect a plaque at the Dick Ellis Rink citing the participants in the 1969 round-the-bay walkathon that raised some $30,000 toward the cost of Belleville's second covered ice surface.

Alderman Don Soutter, arena committee chairman, says it is his understanding the plaque was an original request of the Quinte Action Centre committee who created The Great Blister, and that the cost of the plaque would probably be covered by interest accrued by the walkathon's proceeds.

If someone wants to donate such a plaque, fine. But myself and most of the other 1,500 tenderfeet who participated were only after two rewards: a sense of self-accomplishment and the hope that one day Belleville youngsters wouldn't have to hold 6 a.m. practices or play house league games the width of the rink in order to accommodate the cramped schedule of the lone overworked city arena.

ANONYMOUS says there is logic underlying the Recreation-Arena Committee's proposal that beer be sold in the Memorial Arena. Most people take ice with their liquor.

Gas House Gang Grows

BOB BLAIND informs that the Gas House hockey gang could be out of Skindiff. The latest of an organizational meeting will be held at Bob's south Front St. sports shop Tuesday at 7 p.m., and indications are last year's four-team format could be swelled to as many as ten. Written entry applications are requested for newcomers wishing to join last year's Mustangs, Marysville, Merchants, and Mudmoys. The Gas House League will have Memorial Arena ice Tuesday evenings from 7 o'clock.

DUCK HUNTERS are dusting off their decoys for the upcoming hunting season, which runs from Saturday, Sept. 25 to Dec. 15 in the area. The same dates apply for partridge and goose fanciers.

Brunswick Junior bowling coach Bob Long selects the best bowling ball for proteges Annette Campbell and Cheryl Clark. The Brunswick league will hold their registration Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and officials are hoping to increase the 200 bowlers who took part in the 10-pin program last year.

Junior Bowlers Ready to Roll

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

A lot of kids may end up in the gutter this winter but they won't be falling by the wayside.

Officials of the Brunswick Junior Bowling League and the Youth Bowling Council will be busy again this season keeping kids off the street and in the alleys — bowling alleys that is.

Registration for the two leagues will take place this Saturday morning at the Brunswick Belleville Bowl and the Bowl - O - Drome.

Typical of the growth in the sport is the Brunswick ten - pin junior league which has added about 30 young bowlers a season for the past three years.

"It's like any other sport. It's important to get the right start," says Brunswick Bowl manager Ron Swetnek. "Most people bowl for fun and that's the way it should be, but if someone does have the ability to go somewhere in the sport, then it's important to get an early start.

A total of 200 youths participated in the Brunswick program last winter and coach Bob Long is hoping that the growth rate of approximately 20 new bowlers per year will continue.

This year a senior division has been added, giving bowlers in the 16-21 age group a chance to compete with other divisions of the sport are bantam (up to 12 years of age) and junior (under 16).

Five pin aficionados will also have a chance to get an early start when the Youth Bowling Council gets under way at Bill Bateman's Bowl-O-Rama.

The council will also have three divisions including bantam, (under 12 years), junior (12-15) and senior (16-20). The program has been in operation for nine years and will once again be under the direction of Mrs. Vi McCrystal.

Registration for both junior leagues will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Cementmen Walk Past Bobbling Builders

Point Anne "walked" to an 8-2 win over Rollins Thursday to even their Commercial Softball League final series at one game apiece.

The Cementmen took advantage of seven Rollins errors and 4 fifth - inning rally in which they collected only one hit, but six runs to even the best - of - seven series.

A lead - off double by Rick Rosebush coupled with three walks, three errors, two hit batters and a fielder's choice sparked Point Anne's winning rally.

On the other side of the ledger Don Holoway limited the league pennant - winners to one hit over the nine-inning route. He recorded 12 strikeouts and allowed five walks.

Wayne McConnell started for Rollins, giving way to Scott Reid in the sixth inning. Between them they yielded seven hits and an equal number of walks, while dispensing 15 strikeouts.

Vern Whalen cracked a triple and single to lead the winners, while Rosebush and Bruce Sickle added doubles to the winning cause. Rollins' only bit went to McConnell.

Rugby Squad Wants To Win

VANCOUVER (CP) — The third Canadian international rugby team to visit Europe wants to alter impressions that they are better at socializing than collecting points.

Nine years ago the last Canadian team to cross the Atlantic—the first was about 70 years ago—beat Western Wales, dropped 14 matches and drew one.

"When we went over there in 1962," said Victoria lawyer Dick Ellis, manager of the team, "we had a lot to learn about the game."

"But we've learned a hell of a lot in the last nine years and we hope to teach them something about the game this time."

The 1962 team had the stuffing taken out of it before leaving on its British Isles tour—16 of the 26 originally selected players could not get time off work to go.

This tour is only three weeks long and only 17 of the 23 players picked have had to back out.

The team is coached by Max Howell, former Australian all-star and University of British Columbia coach, who has been travelling from Edmonton on weekends from his engineering job to chair over the physical education department at the University of Alberta.

Centre Tom Browne of Victoria has been replaced by Ray Banks of UBC, with three English natives on the side. There are two Irishmen, one Australian and one Welshman making the trip and the others are Canadians who learned the game here or in Victoria.

The tour begins Sept. 18 at Newport with a match against a Monmouth under-23 squad. Other matches are against Swansea; Glamorganshire under-25 at Brigend Sept. 28, and Wales XV Oct. 2 at Cardiff Arms. -

Series Square

The mountain came to Hillsley last night as Mountain View rallied for a 15-7 win to square their North Shore softball series at three games each.

Pete Moran and Fred O'Brien laced two hits each for the winners, while Clark Alexander notched three safeties for Hillsley.

The final game in the series will be played Sunday night in Amelianburg at 8 p.m.

Filion's Bid Best from Here

Outback's Goolagong Takes Tennis by Storm

LONDON (CP) — Wimbledon has seen some colorful tennis champions over the years, but few have taken the fans by storm so swiftly as Evonne Goolagong, the curly-haired teen-ager from the Australian outback with the exotic aborigine ancestry and passion for pop music.

"Goolagongoli!" exclaimed one headline writer over a report of how petite, 19-year-old Evonne calmly recovered the women's singles championship from the grasp of fellow-Australian Margaret Court in three sets of graceful play.

Her composure on court was remarkable in contrast to the tense grimaces of most women champions. Big Margie Court, with grizzly-ape jaw, was visibly disconcerted when her normally deadly smashes, delivered from a superior height, were blithely skimmed back just out of reach.

By any standard, Evonne's rise to the top has been phenomenal. Last year, in her first attempt at Wimbledon, she was knocked out in a qualifying round. This year she simply breezed through the early rounds and demolished female tennis talent, taking out America's Billie Jean King, three times Wimbledon champion, in the semi-final.

One of eight children of a part-aborigine sheep-shearer in the small New South Wales community of Barellan, 400 miles north of Sydney, Evonne grew up next to the town's only tennis court.

As a spindly-legged, shy child, she practised with borrowed racquets and balls against the side of the house. Her family have never seen her play in competition, except on TV.

At the age of nine, she was discovered by Vic Edwards, the celebrated Australian tennis coach, and two years later left her outback home to live with the Edwards family in suburban Sydney and be groomed for the sophisticated world of international tennis.

Evonne, who off court is hardly ever separated from a transistor radio blaring pop, is classed by tennis experts as a shotmaker, lacking the extra exceptional grace of movement and the speed of a panther.

Some say her one flaw is an occasional lapse in concentration. Coach Edwards, a benevolent father figure hovering in the background, says if she doesn't regard a challenge as a challenge, she tends to "go walkabout" mentally, just as her dark-skinned ancestors used to wander off into the bush when the urge took them.

But to others, as The Observer remarked in a profile, she seems to be "moved by the certainty that she will win."

Evonne gets faintly irritated when people draw attention to her aboriginal background. "Why not just an Australian tennis player?" she asks.

But already one man crusading for a better deal for Australia's original inhabitants has suggested that Evonne, first of her ancient race to win fame as a tennis star, may bring the aborigines just the publicity they need.

Expos Turn Bantam Tables, Golden Mile Wins Peewee Crown

CJBQ Expos turned the tables on their Belleville Minor Baseball Association opponents to emerge with the bantam championship Thursday night.

The lowest - placed Belleville bantam team during the regular season, the Expos came through with a 7-6 win over Vader's Datsun last night to win the third and deciding game of the series.

Good Male blasted three singles to pace CJBQ, while winning pitcher Brian Turner had a double and Mark Soole and Dave Vader singles. Ross Geen tripled for Vader's, with the other hits going to Bruce Roberts, Craig Empey, Dale Tummon and Bruce Sullivan.

Golden Mile took the peewee laurels with a 7-2 win over Farrell Motors to win the final series in two straight games. Brian Loveless fired a two - hitter for the victory, striking out 13 batters and walking only four.

Gary Stapley rapped a double and single for the winners with the other hits going to Paul Weeks, Roger Sullivan and Brady Mills correspondent. Scott Bowers, Simon Bennett and Andy Lupenette, Randy Matia and Brady Mills connected for the losers.

In the first game of the ZORA championships, Cobourg took a 7-3 decision from the Belleville Conductors and Brakemen peewees. Bill Whalen and Peter Hall yielded only three hits despite taking the loss.

Olympic Issue

CAHA Facing New Division

CALGARY (CP) — Joe Krzycka, new Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president, is planning changes he hopes will help amateur hockey while improving "the function of the CAHA."

He's not about to change Canada's position on the international scene "until the Europeans change their attitude about professional players."

The former president of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association, who replaced Earl Dawson of Dauphin, Man., as head of the CAHA earlier this year, says he and other branch presidents were "categorized as rebels" when they didn't agree with some CAHA policies during a meeting in 1968.

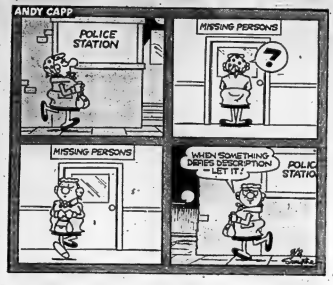
Krzycka, 36, says he doubts anything will be settled quickly on the international scene.

"The big problem is that we seem to have a division inside Canada between the Olympic Association, ourselves and Hockey Canada. The Canadian Olympic Association maintains the Olympics are a different category of hockey than world tournament play.

"There is no difference as far as I'm concerned. They're all the same teams and they're all professionals," he said.

The CAHA president, a lawyer, can't understand the latest controversy which erupted when the Sapporo Olympic committee said it had sent a formal invitation last July inviting Canada to compete in the hockey portion of the Olympics.

Krzycka says Hockey Canada and CAHA officials met in August and voted 9 to 2 against sending a team after reviewing "an invitation which was only informal."



They made their decision, then relayed that information to Harold Wright of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Olympic committee, who was to relay the information to the Japanese.

"Why this hasn't been done is beyond me. I don't believe the CAHA Hockey Canada meeting was a secret."

Krzycka isn't prepared to send a "team of college players to the Olympics even if they're the best in Canada, to be whipped by the professional Russians, Czechs or Swedes."

Assessing the CAHA, Krzycka said the organization should be only an administrative body that tries to give guidance and control to something "that would be chaos without an organization."

He also hopes, before his two-year term expires in 1973, to put the CAHA on independent footing, financially independent of the National Hockey League and government.

Stamps' Five Safeties More Than Usual Season's Total

TORONTO (CP) — Records were the order of the Labor Day weekend in the Western Football Conference schedule, but Don Jonas, who does his thing on the scoreboard, had a day of rest.

Calgary Stampeders, who had never produced five safeties in one season before, registered that number in the first quarter against Edmonton Eskimos en route to a 23-7 victory.

The Canadian Football League season record is six, shared jointly by Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The Riders got into the record book with seven interceptions in a 35-16 win over British Columbia Lions, equalling the WFC mark set by Edmonton in 1954 and 1958.

The CFL mark of eight was set by Ottawa Rough Riders in the 1966 EFC final against Hamilton in the Montreal Autostade.

The former Continental League ace, who arrived in Winnipeg this season from the EFC Toronto Argonauts, continues to lead the conference in scoring and passing.

His 61 points, made up of one touchdown, 20 converts, 10 field-goals and five singles, leads Saskatchewan's George Reed by seven and Larry Robinson of Calgary by 12.

DON JONAS

And there's not a quarterback within hailing distance of his passing performance. In eight games, the 30-year-old Penn State alumnus has completed 114 of 213 attempts for 1,971 yards and 16 touchdowns.

By comparison, No. 2 man in the WFC, Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan who was selected the CFL's most valuable player last year, has passed 185 times, with 92 completions and 1,275 yards, scoring three touchdowns.

And to illustrate how well he uses Bomber receivers, three of the top four pass catchers in the conference are Winnipeg teammates, led by another ex-Argo, flanker Jim Thorpe, who is co-leader in catches at 33 with Calgary's Herm Millarrison but tops the Stapeder tight end in yardage—759 to 477.

Winnipeggers Bob LaRose and Bob Kraemer, products of Canada's college ranks, are No. 3 and 4 in the pass-catching department with 27 and 26 receptions and "Rose" six touchdowns from passes heads the conference.

Sport Briefs

MONTREAL (CP) — Coroner Laurin Lapointe Thursday ruled that the death July 27 of Jamaican boxer Danny Tucker following a non-title fight with Canadian junior welterweight champion Reynald Cardin was accidental.

Dr. Jean Houle of the Quebec Medico-Legal Laboratory, who performed an autopsy on the fighter, told the coroner's inquest that Tucker died of massive hemorrhaging and skull fracture, probably caused by repeated blows to the head.

MONTREAL (CP) — Joan O'Shea, the only woman jockey at Blue Bonnets Raceway, said Thursday there was no way she could have avoided an accident at the track last Friday which caused serious injury to jockey Marty Gibson.

"I was immediately behind Marty," Mrs. O'Shea said in a statement. "I tried desperately to go around him but it was impossible."

Mrs. O'Shea's horse collided with Gibson's and she suffered a badly bruised right leg and hip in the accident.

Gibson, 22, suffered severe head injuries as well as a broken jaw and broken wrist. He has been unconscious since the accident.

Riders Activate Duncan

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders Thursday shuffled their lineup for Saturday's Canadian Football League game in Montreal, bringing injured fullback Dennis Duncan back on the active list.

To meet player limits, Al Pitcaithley was placed on waivers without recall when Duncan was reactivated.

Tackle Doug Dollin's status on the injury list was extended for two games.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Weight May Be Major Problem

For most people, being overweight is one of the minor problems of existence. They say, "I have been putting on some weight lately. I guess I'll just have to cut down a little." So, they go through life up and down two rungs of the obesity ladder — not especially concerned about the problem. But there are others for whom excessive appetite and increased weight is the bane of their way of life. Here is an example:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been terribly depressed about my weight. I've been to a couple of doctors, but their only advice is to push myself away from the table. I have four children and a husband who works afternoons.

It seems I spend half of my life preparing or serving food, invariably stuffing myself all the while. I seem to be gorging myself to keep my nerves calm. Whenever I try to diet, I get terribly weak, extremely nervous and very hard to live with.

I have had my thyroid checked. There is nothing wrong with it. I get so depressed over being heavy, I feel like literally slitting my throat to keep from eating that extra portion of pie or cake. But something seems to say, "Go ahead. Eat it. You'll feel better." (I know how drug addicts must feel.)

I must admit that while food is being consumed, I feel pretty good. But as soon as I've finished eating, I feel like killing myself for eating it. I know I'm addicted to food.

I try to keep very busy, but even then there's one hand reaching for a snack. I am mentally and physically miserable. I hate being fat and hate myself for being so emotionally unstable that I can't cope with it. I'm every bit of 100 pounds overweight. Can you help? — Mrs. D.

* * *

COMMENT: I can understand your frustration. It seems to me what's most important is to engage a physician who is sympathetic to your problem. Not just one who suggests that you push away from the table. The problem and its solution are more involved than that.

I think you will agree that emotions are intensely bound up with your obesity. The question is: Does your depression and nervousness cause you to eat so much? Or does your nervousness?

My guess (and it is only a guess) is that your nervous tension is the culprit. If your doctor can't help you, he may ask for help from a psychiatrist. I have known quite a few obese patients whose fat melted away miraculously only after their nerves were treated adequately.

* * *

For Mrs. F.: Mumps vaccine is quite effective in preventing attacks. But many doctors believe there is no harry in vaccinating an infant against mumps. Ordinarily, it seems sensible to wait until age 5 or 6.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is there any truth in the idea that time of conception can determine whether the baby is a boy or girl? — Mrs. R.

COMMENT: No scientific proof.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a snappy, crunchy, cracking sound when I turn my neck. I am 68. I have headaches and pains in my neck. Could all this tie in with arthritis? M K.

COMMENT: As good a guess as any. Why not ask your doctor to refer you for X-ray of your cervical spine (neck region).

Quebec Flag Raised Atop of Perce Rock

PERCE, Que. (CP) — Residents of this tiny Gaspe village woke up Thursday to see a Quebec flag waving from the top of their famous rock.

There's nothing unusual about the blue-and-white fleur de lis flag flying almost anywhere in Quebec — except that nobody has ever climbed Perce rock before.

Four years ago, a group of Grenier climbers spent a night on the rock face but abandoned a climb to the top they said would take at least four days.

No distress signal was seen from the two persons with the flag on the rock Thursday.

Shovel Unearths Bones Of Peter Corcoran W

Along with the bones was part of an old tombstone dedicated to the memory of Peter Corcoran W . . . All but the first letter of the surname was broken off.

Historian Louis Brault said the area was used as Bytown's cemetery from 1 821 until 1872 when the area was paved.

He speculated that Mr. Corcoran was either a Catholic or a Methodist because the cemetery was divided into two areas, one for those groups and one for Anglicans and Presbyterians.

When the city decided to develop the area, relatives and friends were permitted to move the bodies.

But no one came for Peter Corcoran W . . .

Sydney J. Harris Says

Rut Pleasant

Thirty years ago this week I began working for The Chicago Daily News. If anyone then had told me I would still be there three decades later, I would have laughed my boyish head off.

If it has been a rut, it has been the most pleasant one I can imagine. In all that time, I have never had a cross word with a single person I worked with, or for, I have never had to write a line I did not believe, or cross out a line that anyone objected to.

I have not missed a day in all those 30 years, which is possibly a foolish thing to be proud of, but I am proud of it. And perhaps this record enables me to say something about dependability.

As I grow older, I come more and more to recognize dependability as one of the cardinal virtues, although usually an ignored one. I have seen so many men of brains and talent and imagination fritter away their gifts because they lacked dependability.

Erickson tells us that "basic trust" is at the bottom of the earliest human relationship, and unless that basic trust is there, the person can't develop and creative capacity, nor grow up to his fullest powers. In order for basic trust to flourish, it must be founded on reliability. The person we relate to must be counted on, at all times.

All religious faith is based on the conviction that God will not forsake you if you do not forsake Him. All scientific inquiry is based on the conviction that the laws of nature remain constant and open to discovery for those who persist in their quest. All human relationships are nurtured by the sense that "the other" we extend ourselves to, in love or fraternity, will stand firm, will be there when needed.

Reliability has not been celebrated because it is on the whole a dull virtue; it is not glorious or dramatic or boldly sacrificial; and in a world where Change is king, constancy seems almost an embarrassment. Fidelity to a person or an idea, or a vocation, is nowadays equated with rigidity, with lack of flexibility, even with "stagnation."

Some of it may be all that, of course: every virtue has its own particular counterfeit, and the man who prides himself on being "dependable" may be merely a timid and fearful victim of routine. But without this virtue, the social fabric would rip apart and human projects that demand a span of generations would collapse into chaos.

In the past, mankind emphasized "continuity" too exclusively, to the detriment of change; today, we emphasize "change" too exclusively, to the detriment of continuity. Each without the other is only half a scissors. I simply call attention to the half we are neglecting.

Ottawa Cancels Bill to Quebec for Troops

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is cancelling the bill to Quebec for use of federal troops during the Quebec crisis lastefall.

Outstanding debts for employment of troops by other provinces also will be wiped out, the Commons was told Thursday.

Premier Robert Bourassa had said in a letter to Ottawa made public last week, that the emergency attributed to the Front de Liberation du Quebec last fall had been a national concern and the extra costs of using the army to help civilian security should be a national expenditure.

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald said the cabinet had also decided to take steps for remission of all such debts and to amend the National Defence Act for future arrangements.

Mr. Trudeau later told a reporter that the federal government in the future will need to keep some freedom of choice in the matter.

"It would be absurd if a province could just snap its fingers and get troops, say, to handle an ambulance strike," he said.

Besides Quebec, five other provinces have debts outstanding for use of troops.

Newfoundland owes $765,000 dating from use of troops in firefighting during 1958 and 1966. Nova Scotia owes $77,000 since the 1968 Springhill mine disaster.

Prince Edward Island has an unpaid bill of $43,000 for firefighting in 1966, British Columbia owes $20,000 for help in a 1964 snowslide.

Troops were used earlier this year in Saskatchewan, but defence spokesmen were unsure just how much that province owed.

Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters outside the House that he agreed with Quebec's point that the October crisis was national, not local, in scope, as shown by the implementation of the federal War Measures Act.

Mounties Probe Story of Threat

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has begun an investigation into allegations that a youthful paid informer was threatened by members of the force to continue providing information or face the risk of having drugs planted on him for his arrest.

Deputy Commissioner Geoffrey Mortimer of the RCMP acknowledged Thursday that Robert Wayne Eadie, now 21, of Cornwall, Ont., was a paid informer of the RCMP when he was 18. So far as the alleged coercion is concerned, he said "it is not a system the force uses but we have to investigate this claim he has made against an individual."

Mr. Eadie made the claim on a television program Wednesday night. He also said the police laughed at his request for protection after he was beaten up by six men.

He said he was paid nearly $365 over 2½ years, beginning when he was 18.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, facing a series of questions on the issue in the House Thursday, said the allegations are very serious and he has asked RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgitt for a complete investigation.

He hoped to have the commissioner's report next week. It would be published.

In the meantime, he said, he would prefer not to discuss details of the case.

Canadian Scientists Promise To Cut Hydro Plant Radiation

GENEVA (AP) — A team of Canadian scientists from government departments and industry pledged today to reduce still further the dose of radioactivity to which the public is exposed from nuclear power stations, even though they are already "well within the limits" currently enforced.

They told the fourth United Nations Atoms for Peace conference that although doses due to radioactive gases from the Douglas Point nuclear plant site on Lake Huron are well below the limits, a new system is being installed to remove from the Pickering nuclear generating station most of Toronto is being considered so as to permit further attenuation of short-lived radioactive particles.

The paper was presented by A. M. Marko, P. J. Barry and J. L. Weeks of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., together with Robert Wilson and Kam Wong of Ontario Hydro, and P. O. Perron of Hydro-Quebec.

They said other measures being undertaken or planned to control radiation include:

1. Studies of the biological effects of the thermal plume at Pickering on plankton, fish and organisms living at the bottom of the lake.

2. Studies of the thermal effects of the Gentilly, Que., plant on St. Lawrence River.

3. Improved methods for measuring contamination in the environment as well as for detecting, interpreting and assessing its effects;

4. Studies to assess the long-term build-up of tritium in the Great Lakes.

Tritium, a heavy isotope of hydrogen with a mass three times that of ordinary hydrogen, is a radioactive pollutant which can escape from nuclear plants of the Canadian variety.

U.S. Wage Freeze Is Imposed On 7,000 Canadian Workers

TORONTO (CP) — Almost 7,000 Canadian workers are being subjected to the wage freeze imposed by United States President Richard Nixon.

Chrysler said the move constituted a "deferment, not a cancellation," of a planned five cents an hour salary increase due Sept. 6 but postponed in letters to the workers affected.

Officials at Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. and General Motors of Canada Ltd. said they do not plan freezes on wages of white-collar workers, similar to those imposed by Chrysler.

Chrysler said its action was necessary because all Chrysler auto workers have frozen 1972 model car prices at the 1971 level to conform with prices established in the U.S. under Nixon's economic program.

Chrysler said the move constituted a "deferment, not a cancellation," of a planned five cents an hour salary increase due Sept. 6 but postponed in letters to the workers affected.

At Douglas, a company spokesman cited President Nixon's moves as the reason why McDonnell Douglas Corp. has refused to make any wage offer to 5,000 workers at the subsidiary Douglas plant.

The 5,000-member production local and the 600-member office local of the United Auto Workers are taking strike votes Saturday and Sunday at Douglas.

Another of the U.S. president's recent economic moves drew hostilities of a 10-per-cent extra duty on imports.

Herbert Kelly, assistant Canadian director of the UAW, said Thursday night:

"We are just not going to allow President Nixon to legislate our members out of wage increases."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market turned fractionally lower in mid-morning trading today, interrupting six successive advancing sessions.

On index, industrials dropped .28 to 178.96, base metals .35 to 89.54 and western oils .57 to 240.95. Golds rose .11 to 175.85.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 987,000 shares, up from 630,000 at the same time Thursday.

Losses outnumbered gains 126 to 97 with 204 issues unchanged. Weakest sectors were oil refining, real estate and steels.

Among declining issues, Du-Pont was down ½ to $17¼, Moore ¼ to $36¼, Bow Valley ¼ to $28¾, Imperial Oil ¼ to $29¼, White Pass and Yukon ¼ to $11 and Keeprite Products ¼ to $11¾.

Fight Still Goes On Against Biafra Famine

IKOT IBRITAM, Nigeria (Reuter) — Twenty months after the secessionist war in Nigeria ended, the battle is still going on to stave off hunger and disease in the most ravaged areas.

The Christian Council of Nigeria, the only non-government humanitarian organization still engaged in large-scale post-war rehabilitation work here, currently operates on a budget of more than $2.8 million to help the southern states.

But it is in this area of south-eastern Nigeria that the council faces some of its most trying problems. Its small team of foreign experts and local assistants still wage daily war against malnutrition, leprosy, cholera and quashiokor, a disease caused by malnutrition.

In the small village of Ikot Ibritam, 35 miles from the ancient town of Opobo and in the centre of a mosquito-infested rain forest, Dr. Herman Gray, a German-born U.S. public health specialist and his wife, who is a nurse, direct a vast public health rehabilitation program for the council.

Assisted by a Japanese neurologist and his wife, who is a child specialist, Gray has supervised the reconstruction and re-equipping of some 92 medical institutions in the southeast since the war.

In spite of this effort and the large quantities of drugs supplied by the council, health and hunger remain its greatest challenge.

Gray himself believes that cholera has become endemic—like quashiokor—in the rain forest belt.

Farmers Say They Get Short End of Stick

EDMONTON (CP) — Western farm spokesmen say farmers have been given the short end of the stick again as the federal government moves quickly to provide $80 million in relief to industry.

The federal government's emergency measure to provide aid to industry affected by the United States' imposition of a supplementary duty on imports came while Parliament was debating the agricultural stabilization plan which provides $100 million to grain producers. The bill was introduced last March.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, has said the $100 million will be paid when the legislation is passed and has accused the opposition of "filibustering."

All prairie farm organizations have criticized inclusion of the payment under the new legislation.

G. L. Harrold of Calgary, Alberta, wheat pool president, said Thursday there is mounting concern.

He said the federal government has refused to separate the payment—a transition grant in lieu of the final reserves payment—from the new grains policy, but "it seems obvious they've acted with real speed" in the industry situation.

Mr. Harrold said the farm legislation has been dragging on for some time while, in the case of the exports crisis, "we see the government acting within three weeks and it means the farmer's on the short end of the stick again."

"At this point, it is obvious that the farmers' need for financial assistance is much greater than that of the manufacturers because industry has not yet felt the full effects of the surtax."

Murder Trial Date Is Set

KINGSTON (CP) — Thirteen former prisoners of Kingston penitentiary charged with the non-capital murder of two other prisoners, were committed to trial Thursday by an Ontario Supreme Court jury.

Each of the 13 is charged with the non-capital murder of Brian Ensor, 26, of Hamilton, and Bertrand H. Robert of Chatham.

Ensor's body was found following a four-day riot at the penitentiary and Robert died in hospital later.

The court will hear motions from 13 defence lawyers Monday.

The trials are scheduled to begin Oct. 18.

Fourteen Arrested At Plant

BRANTFORD (CP) — Fourteen persons arrested Thursday near the strikebound Terpeck Ltd. plant were remanded to Monday on bail. A charge of assault causing bodily harm was laid against a police constable by one of them.

The 14, including members of the New Democratic Party's radical Waffle group, appeared in court in the afternoon.

They included Melville Watkins, a founder of the Waffle movement, who was charged with obstruction.

Also arrested was Kent Rowley, president of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers Union, who was charged with intimidation. Following an earlier demonstration at the plant, he had been charged with arson and watching and besetting.

Daniel Drache, a Waffle member from Toronto, laid the assault charge against Constable Wouter Blom, 23. He was treated at hospital for a swollen nose and cuts to his face.

In a statement Thursday night, the Waffle members arrested said one of them was "repeatedly punched in the face by police."

The statement claimed the group was "holding a peaceful meeting at least 200 yards from the Terpack plant. . . . We maintain that we have a lawful right to assembly in order to demonstrate opposition to injustice in our society. . . ."

McIntyre Seeks Men In Japan

EDMONTON (CP) — A shortage of experienced miners in Canada has forced coal producers in Alberta to look elsewhere for miners, including Japan.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. has conducted a recruiting campaign in Japan and has received 52 applications for work at its Grande Cache mine, 200 miles west of here.

Shuji Shigihara, Japanese consul in Edmonton, said experienced Japanese workers are needed to bring the Grande Cache mine's production up to the level called for in a 15-year contract with Japanese steel interests.

Five Japanese miners who speak English already are working at the McIntyre Porcupine mine. Another 40 are expected to arrive at Grande Cache early next year, if they can obtain visas.

Stirling

Five boys from Stirling attended the Kingston Hockey School last month. They were Robert Patterson, Mark Dobson, Brett Haggerty, Barry Dunford and Brian Mitchell.

Past Grand Masters Fred Eastman and Lorne Hagerman and Clayton Burkitt attended an executive meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East in Kingston. Plans were completed for the Grand Lodge sessions to be held at Smiths Falls in April 1972.

Mrs. Glenn Bush of River Valley fractured her left wrist in a fall at her home on Thursday.

Building Latest in Story of Progress

By RAY MADDEN

After almost 45 years of service in the community, Belleville Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion finally realizes the handsome reward due hard work and comradeship.

The new modern Legion building and convention centre on Pinnacle Street stands today as an example of perseverance paying off when there is a common goal in mind. Those involved in the project are too many to mention in case one deserving contributor's name was left out.

Branch 99, Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League was presented with its charter on June 19th 1927 by the great Canadian soldier, and late commander of the Canadian Corps, Brig. General Sir Arthur Currie who made a personal trip to Belleville so that he could thank, in person, the men and women of this district for their contribution in the Great War of 1914-18. "The War that was to end all Wars."

The newly formed Branch suffered the customary organization pains but under the leadership of Col. "Dick" Ponton and Lt. Col. Ed. O'Flynn, along with willing recruits, it finally emerged as a very active and solid group of ex servicemen and women.

In these early days, the Branch held its monthly meetings in various locations in the City, including the Armories, the YMCA and the vacated city offices of the Corby Distillery situated on the market square and later to be known as the Jamieson Bone Building. We soon outgrew this accommodation and moved to the rooms vacated by the YMCA in the West Robertson block on Front Street which was later destroyed by fire. In recent years we have occupied the building on Coleman Street which we renovated to suit our requirements, and which now houses Circle TV. Our last location has been the former Jewish synagogue on Pinnacle Street.

When the depression took over the Branch suffered along with all other groups and organizations. Work was hard to get and the paying of dues fell off sharply but due to the energetic secretary at that time, the late George Ellarby, who collected dues by a personal visit we were able to keep our heads above water.

Here should be mentioned the wonderful support given by the Ladies Auxiliary to the Branch in helping keep the men from getting discouraged and indeed they kept the name "Canadian Legion" before the public all on their own for some time. Such devoted workers as the late Mrs. Meeks, Mrs. Jeffs, Mrs. Bradford (the last two still going strong) and many others who have left the scene but the devotion they gave lives on. These same auxiliary workers kept in touch with all trains bearing returning men, especially the wounded, passing through Belleville and some of them were at the station day or night to give a sandwich or a cup of coffee all in the name of Branch 99, Canadian Legion.

Following the depression years the Branch held a reorganization meeting and the late Dave Bradford assumed the president's duties. During World War 2, the Branch engaged in numerous activities to aid the war effort such as bingos, auctions, and grease collecting. In the field of civic activities, the Branch organized a campaign and purchased, by public subscriptions, the present bus terminal location which was to contain Legion club rooms and two stores when renovated. This proved not too satisfactory and the building was sold to Colonial Bus.

The first Band Tattoo for Military Bands was sponsored by Legion under the chairmanship of the late Henry Becker and assembled by our member the late Reg Hinchey. The first Motor and Trade show in the city was held in the local armories sponsored by the Legion and was repeated for three years.

Saturday marks the crowning achievement for Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion and due to individual imagination and drive of Comrade Harold Vaughan we have a building that will amply take care of our rapidly increasing membership and in itself is a working memorial to those of our comrades and auxiliaries who, while with us, gave of their time and talents to further the aims and objects of this Royal Canadian Legion.

All Our Best Wishes For Your Future!

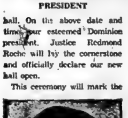
Branch 99 President Lauds Co-workers

Saturday, September 11th at 4:00 p.m. will be a historic milestone for Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion. For years the branch has been discussing an expansion of our old hall. On the above date and time, our esteemed Dominion president, Justice Redmond Roche will lay the cornerstone and officially declare our new hall open.

This ceremony will mark the fulfillment of two years and three months dedicated hard work by committee chairman and members too numerous to name.



Some may ask why does the Legion work so hard on a new hall. The answer is that this hall is dedicated to part of the charge on initiation into our great organization. "You are now a member of an organization which is unique in that it is based upon a common service and a common sacrifice. It has to offer comradeship only, and asks of its members — service, not for self, but for those of our comrades or their dependents who are in need or in distress. It requires you to be ever zealous in any work which will make our country and our commonwealth, more truly representative of the ideals for which our comrades laid down their lives."

It is also dedicated to perpetuate our endeavors in other fields, such as youth activities, so that the children of today will be better citizens of tomorrow. Public speaking, bursaries and minor sports are only a few of these activities.

Our million-dollar centennial fund was raised to perpetuate these activities after the last veteran has joined the White Battalion. I am sure I speak for all members when I say we are proud to dedicate our new hall to the continuity of these programs. I wish to thank each and every member of Branch 99 for backing your officers and executive in their endeavors to build the finest Legion Hall in Eastern Ontario. A special thanks to first vice-president and building chairman, Comrade Harold Vaughan.

MR. JUSTICE REDMOND ROCHE, DOMINION PRESIDENT

ONTARIO PRESIDENT, DON WILSON

Building An Active Memorial

Perhaps the purpose of the new Legion building is best described by Branch 99's president Jack Rashotte. "It is in fact a memorial to those of our fellow men who gave their lives for us and for those whose lives were spared to carry on the work and make our country an ideal place in which to live. "The building is our "home", a place to gather for a social evening, where meetings can be held to further the Legion cause for an ever - increasing membership."

Women's Auxiliary Always on the Job

By DAISY JEFFS

And Branch 99 Auxiliary gained the respect and praise of the men of the branch from inception as a unit.

The Auxiliary was organized in May 1927 in what was then known as "The Great War Veteran Association" (GWVA) which now houses the Army, Navy and Airforce Club.

We took over the club rooms of the Aajma Club on Front Street with a membership of 45, here we worked for two years on bingos and euchres to raise money to help transport the boys from the troop trains to their homes and supply them with cigarettes etc. We also catered to the Hasty Pees at their homecoming banquet after meeting them at the train.

Our next move was to Coleman Street where we carried on our work with 35 members. The Branch subsequently acquired the Jewish synagogue on Pinnacle Street and built a block addition, which gave us room for expansion and our membership grew to the present day with 125 paid up members and we were able to hold larger banquets and weddings etc., which enabled us to give larger donations to our Branch along with both local and Provincial Bursaries, donations to organizations such as Firemen's Santa Claus Fund, Cancer Society, Red Cross, British Sailors Society, Salvation Army, Mental Health and others.

Our sick are visited in hospital and cards send to those ill at home. We also send flowers and conduct service for the deceased members.

We had the great honor to present Life Memberships to six of our very old and valued members namely: D. Jeffs, A. Bradford, A. Bean, A. Gulliver, A. Newton and our late Comrade Edith Meeks.

Our dream of a new and larger Legion has at last been realized and we will be forever grateful to our Branch for the beautifully equipped kitchen which will enable us to prepare meals for much larger banquets, conventions, etc.

Legion Building Location Historic

In 1815 a group of worshipers organized the first regular congregation and began making plans for the original Methodist Church in Belleville.

The congregation did not wait until the building was completed but began to hold services within the framework before the walls were put up. The rough frame structure, 30 feet by 50 feet in size was ready in 1818. Boards placed on blocks of wood served as seats.

Later, the Pinnacle Street Church as it became known was enlarged and the seating capacity doubled by 1831. Sixteen years later the congregation replaced their first church with a brick structure which stood until 1870. It was conveyed to Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion by Mrs. Irene Holland who operated a plumbing and heating business on the premises for many years.

When the Bridge Street United Church becomes the main Methodist place of worship in the city, the building was occupied by the Masonic Lodge until 1874. Afterwards it was a depot for the Grand Trunk Railroad, a dance hall and a warehouse.

Phay Wills Branch Young But Active

By KENNY CHAMBERS

Often referred to as the smallest Branch in Zone F3, the ex-servicewomen's Branch was formed in June 1950, with the official charter presentation ceremony the following September.

The name Col. Phay Wills was chosen to honor the late Col. Wills, a well known military personality in Belleville.

Eight of these members were recently presented with ten-year pins.

Annually regular donations are made to local organizations with a rotating bursary presented to a veteran's son or daughter attending Belleville Secondary Schools.

The two more noteworthy projects of Branch 587 are the Silver Cross Mothers' Tea and assisting Branch 99 with the Royal Canadian Legion public speaking competition.

The Silver Cross Mothers' Tea originated in Belleville by the ex-servicewomen, is held annually on the Sunday prior to Armistice, at the Legion Hall. Cards are sent to the Mothers at Christmas and on Mothers' Day, with the Mother of the year receiving flowers.

Branch 587 president, Dorothy Howes, is chairman for both the Public Speaking and the Armistice poem and essay competitions, at Branch level. Working with Branch 99 member Harold Vaughan, both District and Zone citizenship chairman, Billie Kirby is the District honors and awards officer.

Although the membership averages only 20, the ex-servicewomen enjoy their close bond with Branch 99 and the Ladies Auxiliary, and are looking forward to furthering the work of the Royal Canadian Legion in Belleville from the spacious and attractive new headquarters.

Traffic To Halt While Stone Laid

The cornerstone laying ceremony at the new Legion building this coming Saturday afternoon will be a traffic stopping event - - literally.

At 4 p.m., when the Royal Canadian Legion's Dominion president, Judge Redmond Roche, is laying the cornerstone, all traffic on Pinnacle Street will be halted for five minutes. Inspector R. R. Blatchford of the Belleville City Police has advised the Legion committee arranging the details.

Previous to the eventful occasion, motor traffic will be permitted to pass in one lane along the street in front of the new Legion building. Afterward, the order calls for traffic to move in one lane on the east side of the street.

Colors to be Paraded at Cornerstone Ceremony

Other Units To Lend A Hand

When the official party arrives to perform the cornerstone laying ceremony Belleville's Sea Cadet Band will be turned out on parade in colorful uniforms. The local musicians will play appropriate numbers during the inspection of the color party until the party enters the building for the ribbon cutting.

For the inspection of the colors, Highland piper Archie McLeod from the Duke of Edinburgh Branch 701 AIr and AF Association has been detailed to pipe on the Dominion Legion president's party for the official inspection of the colors.

Parking Spaces In Plan

Parking at the south side and west end of the new Legion building is adequate for more than 30 cars. Extra space has been planned already and will be provided when the back end of the old hall is torn down and removed. Meter parking is also available along both sides of Pinnacle Street.

Indoor Sports Feature of Lower Floor

The service centre on the ground level of the new Legion building furnishes a variety of equipment for the entertainment of the growing membership.

Both male and female members can pair up for games of darts, pool, shuffleboard and cards.

For those who prefer to relax in a restful atmosphere, there is a TV and reading room separate from the recreation area.

Admired as an attractive addition to the downtown business area, the new Legion building on Pinnacle Street contains more than 24,000 square feet on three levels. Each floor was individually designed for a specific use.

The ground floor contains two lounges, a TV and card room, a bar as up - to - date as any in the city and executive offices.

The second floor, named the Holland Robin, was laid out to accommodate conventions, banquets and social events. There is room for 500 people to dine and dance, a modern bar and a fully equipped kitchen equal to any in Eastern Ontario. Also on this level there are several offices and rest rooms.

The third floor is almost a duplicate of the second level with the same bright, cheery decor and similar furnishings. An additional feature on this level is a sliding, folding partition which permits separate events to run simultaneously.

On the second and third levels it is possible to hold four

Timetable

The laying of the cornerstone for the new Royal Canadian Legion building on Pinnacle Sreet is set for 4 p.m. on Saturday afternoon, September 11. The cutting of the ribbon in the foyer to the preferred large on the ground floor follows and the premises are considered officially opened.

Prior to the opening ceremony, comrade Ken Edgecombe and his committee will lay a wreath on the Belleville cenotaph on behalf of Branch 99.

The exterior measurements of the building are 85 feet across the front and 121 feet deep. It is 42 feet tall from the footings.

Cost of the building is approximately $200,000 and the furnishings and equipment another $70,000.

Vaughan Always on Job

Secretary - Manager Al Durand

Branch 99's first vice-president Harold Vaughan watched construction of the new Legion building from the day the first sod was turned in September 1970. The former carpentry and building trades teacher had reason to take a keener interest than most in the project since it was his plan that was accepted and followed by the general contractor Wieger De Jong, of Stirling. In the building went 38,000 cement blocks, 19,000 hardwood (parque) floor tile on the second and third levels and an unconceivable amount of cable and wiring for lighting, air conditioning, telephones and PA and sound systems according to Mr. Vaughan.

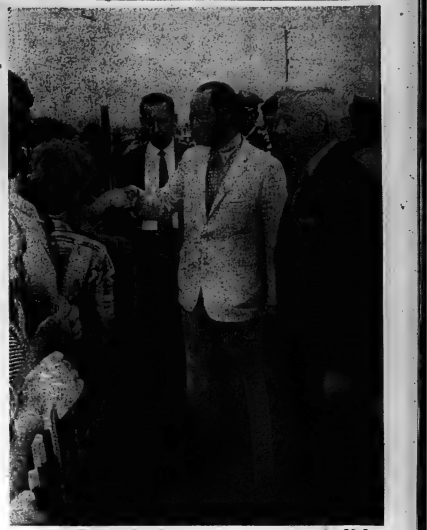
Island Crowd Greets Visitor

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Thousands gathered at Zwick's Island this morning while comparable numbers lined the Belleville streets leading to CJBO in the Intelligencer building, waiting to get a first hand look at Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Prime Minister Trudeau, on the second day of a whirlwind tour in eastern and central Ontario, arrived at the island to the cheers of the onlookers and to the salute of the RCSCC Quinte band and the Duke of Edinburgh Pipe Band.

The first helicopter to arrive at the island containing a press corp numbering 50, wasn't welcomed by the kilted band members as they braved the strength of the wind from the copter's blades which whipped their kilts dangerously high.



The Prime Minister's helicopter arrived moments after landing at an area more remote from the pipe band.

With the unloading of the Prime Minister, and his supplement of body guards, came in the rush of press photographers and the opposing rush of local police departments and body guards to contain the charge.

Greeted by Mayor J. Russell Scott, the Prime Minister was taken to a nearby table where he was signed in as an official guest of the city.

While the sea cadet band played in the background, the excited crowd, which had not yet stopped cheering and cal-

Many Hands Shaken

Shaking hands was the order of the day for Pierre Elliott Trudeau as he made his way around the large crowd gathered at Zwick's Island this morning. Some 2,000 people cheered as Mr. Trudeau emerged from his helicopter to be greeted by Robert Temple, president of the local Liberal Association. Prime Minister Trudeau was accompanied by Mayor J. Russell Scott and Mr. Temple as he met the crowd.

LONDON (AP) — Britain will vote for Communist China's admission to the United Nations even if it costs Nationalist China its seat in the world organization, senior officials said today.

The British decision was the second setback in two days to U.S. hopes of winning majority support for seating both Chinas during the forthcoming debate on the issue at the UN General Assembly.

U.S. State Secretary William Rogers said Japan's action would adversely affect the effort to keep the Nationalists from being ousted from the world body, which opens its fall meeting Sept. 21.

The British officials said Prime Minister Edward Heath's government has formally advised the Americans of its intention and has coupled this with low-key criticism of the U.S. strategy suggested by Rogers.

Faulkner Rejects Suggestion For Drastic Ulster Overhaul

BELFAST (CP) — Prime Minister Brian Faulkner in a hard-hitting speech Friday night rejected suggestions for a drastic weakening and overhaul of Northern Ireland's governmental structure.

He did not name Harold Wilson, but his remarks were widely interpreted to be in answer to a call made by the British opposition leader for greater British responsibility and influence in Northern Ireland's administration.

Faulkner condemned proposals which would turn the present form of government in Ulster into a "sham or shadow." He added: "I do not believe that when people have enjoyed a degree of self-government for 50 years that one could turn back the clock and treat the area as if it were a crown colony."

Nikita Khrushchev Dies

He was 77 and had a history of heart trouble.

The report from usually reliable sources could not be officially confirmed, and there was no immediate announcement by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Khrushchev, who was ousted by the current Kremlin leaders in October, 1964, has been living in retirement in a country house outside Moscow.

He had suffered two previous heart attacks and had been in ill health during the last year.

He ruled the Soviet Union almost single-handedly from 1958, when he added the premiership to the party secretaryship he had held since 1953, until the present leadership kicked him out in 1964.

The official reason for his retirement was given in a government statement as failing health, but he was almost simultaneously criticized—without being named—for "harebrained scheming" and violation of the principle of collective rule.

But he was not always popular in his own country.

He was known throughout the world for flamboyant behavior of a kind rarely seen in a world leader.

His shoe-banging at the United Nations in 1960, his frequent visits to the fields to tell farmers how to raise corn, pigs and chickens, and his homey speeches, always reported in the Communist party newspaper Pravda as having been interrupted by laughter, were given world-wide publicity.

Mediators Help Convicts Draft Demands

ATTICA, N.Y. (CP) — With the help of such citizen-mediators as radical lawyer William Kunstler, rebellious convicts of Attica state prison worked on a final list of demands today to barter for the freedom of hostages they have held since Thursday morning.

Six of the prisoners met with 20 intermediaries into the early morning hours. The talks ended after 4½ hours and were to be taken up again at 10 a.m.

At one point, the meeting broke off for more than an hour when prisoners thought state troopers were moving into a nearby cellblocks. It turned out to be a minor incident.

A newspaper pool reporter who sat in on the discussions said the mediators would ask the state correction commissioner to join the next session of the talks.

The reporter said Kunstler estimated the prisoners now have 30 demands and were most insistent about a new demand—the removal of Attica Superintendent Vincent Mancusi.

Kunstler, whose clients have included the Chicago Seven and the Black Panthers, Associate Editor Tom Wicker of the New York Times and U.S. Representative Herman Badillo (Dem. N.Y.), the only native Puerto Rican in Congress, were among the intermediaries. They had been requested by the 500 convicts still holding control of one cellblock area.

The hostages, estimated to number as many as 30, and hundreds of prisoners spent the night in an exercise yard. The captives were reported unharmed except for minor cuts and bruises.

They were seized when 1,280 convicts rioted, injuring 12 guards, and took over four cellblocks. State police eventually chased them from three of the cellblocks and surrounded the prison.

Several lists of demands were issued late Thursday and again Friday afternoon, ranging from various prison reforms to political asylum in another country. The demand for asylum was reported to have been withdrawn or de-emphasized later Friday.

Prisoners gave the hostages —who include guards and an estimated 11 civilians—clothing, blankets, mattresses and food.

Authorities seemed to feel that at least some of the prisoners' demands, mostly having to do with parole procedures and prison rules, were reasonable and they seemed prepared to accede to those demands.

Outside the prison wall about 200 state policemen and deputy sheriffs from three surrounding counties stood guard with shotguns and riot guns, but no shots were fired all day as authorities apparently believed the matter could be settled by negotiations.

Attica, one of the state's main prisons, is about 40 miles from Buffalo.

Fists Raised

Panthers Offer to Find Convicts Asylum

ALGIERS (Reuter) — The Black Panther party, the militant American Negro group whose international section is based in Algiers, demanded today that the rebel prisoners in the Attica, N.Y., jail be handed over to them.

Eldridge Cleaver, information minister of the international section and himself a fugitive from American justice, told reporters:

"We will take responsibility for finding a host country for them."

Belleville Volunteers to Have Their Day--Seven of Them

Editor's note:
This is the first of a series of articles on outstanding volunteers presented by The Intelligencer to mark Volunteer Recognition Week Sept. 12 to 18.

Pity the poor volunteer — the self-sacrificing martyr who gives unstintingly of himself in aid of others.

If that picture of the community spirited individual still lingers in your mind, forget it, says one of Belleville's leading workers.

"The volunteer has to be getting as much out of her work as she puts in it, or more, or she wouldn't do it," says Selma Bochnek, chosen as the volunteer of the year by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. "And the more she gets out of it, the more involved she becomes."

Volunteers Honored

Sunday marks the start of Volunteer Recognition Week in Belleville, when the community minded people who staff hundreds of services are recognized for their contribution.

Service organizations have named their volunteer of the year, to be a special guests at a dinner at Four Season Hotel Sept. 13. A display of volunteer activities is scheduled for later in the week.

The week's events, coordinated by United Community Services, is designed to focus attention on the many services provided free of charge in the city, and to interest people who are not involved in community service in volunteering time and talents to an organization or cause of their choice.

Mrs. Bochnek has been deeply involved since she came to Belleville eight years ago.

She organized the successful Expo A-go-go that sent 350 underprivileged children to Expo 67 in Montreal during Centennial year, created and guided the Christmas Exchange for two years, co-ordinated the junior volunteer program and later the entire volunteer program for the hospital auxiliary and has been active in Park Dale Home and School Association.

"I'm the type of person who likes to keep busy," she says of herself. "But it's surprising the amount of time you can find to devote to volunteer work if you don't have to be highly organized to do it."

As well as organizing countless community services, Mrs. Bochnek holds down a job and cares for her home, husband and two children. But she insist that the kind of organizational and co-ordinating work she excels at takes less time than is required to recite her titles.

For most people, Mrs. Bochnek says, volunteer work is a form of therapy.

"You can grow stagnant at home — you're fresher after you've been out in the community. You meet other people and it's a form of education."

Mrs. Bochnek began her career in community service in her native Toronto as a teenager, when a friend took her to a social and athletic club at a neighborhood YWHA. She progressed to hospital auxiliary work and eventually married Seymore Bochnek whom she met through her Y work.

"Then, for a while I didn't do much of anything," she says.

"But when I moved to Belleville and our children started to school, I wanted to get involved. You can't live anywhere without taking part, either within the radius of a few blocks or within the total community. Since my children were growing up here, I thought I'd better get involved in the community."

Mrs. Bochnek has firm ideas about how to get involved and she put them into practice.

"There is a job for everybody; it's just a matter of finding the right niche. Go to an organization with an interviewing and placement service and pick an area that interests you. Take one task at a time and don't spread yourself too thin." Mrs. Bochnek sought out Mrs. Freeman Burrows, director of United Community Service's Volunteer Bureau and was soon at work heading the Expo A-go-go project.

Once her executive abilities were noted, along with her knack for drawing out the best in people, she was in demand.

Only Selma Bochnek, everyone agrees, would have thought of going to her congregation at Sons of Jacob Synagogue and taking up the collection that played a big part in getting the Christmas Exchange out of the red in its first year.

The Christmas Exchange, a bureau that co-ordinates aid to needy families at the holiday season, and prevents duplication of services or the overlooking of more needy families, was started by Mrs. Bochnek for two years before she took over the junior volunteers (known as Carol Strikers in other centres) at the hospital.

After that she co-ordinated the work of over 100 hospital volunteers for four years, before stepping down this year due to a temporary bout of illness.

During this time she was active in Home and School work, serving a second vice-president of the Park Dale Association, and assisting with the annual fun fair, the bulletin and publicity. Now she is first vice - president of the hospital auxiliary and membership chairman and is convener of a dinner dance for the auxiliary later this month.

"My satisfaction comes from taking something from the beginning, creating it, forming it, watching it grow and then knowing when to let go," says Mrs. Bochnek. "The satisfaction comes from seeing something you have created stand on its own feet. No one should create something and become indispensable to it. That's creating nothing but another need."

Although Mrs. Bochnek has contributed money, in the form of gasoline bills for her car and baby - sitters' fee, as well as time, to her pursuits, she emphasizes that community service can be done at home as well, and at no cost to the volunteer.

As an example, she notes hospital auxiliary is a volunteer only an annual $1 membership fee in the WHA, and junior volunteers are not asked for that.

"We have many women who work at home, knitting and making puppets for the children's department," she says. "A volunteer who can't leave her home because of small children can still do her share of community service work."

There is also a vast amount of clerical work, typing, filing, envelope stuffing and telephone calling that a volunteer can do from her home.

"At the leadership level volunteer work can cost money," admits Mrs. Bochnek. "There is very little leadership today that doesn't mean money out of pocket for the

A Family Affair

Volunteer work is a family affair at the home of Selma Bochnek, Women's Hospital Auxiliary volunteer of the year. Her son Jay and daughter Faith help wrap prizes for auxiliary dance later this month.

Northumberland Nomination

Conservatives Stand Pat, Liberals in 3-Way Fight

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Both Conservatives and Liberals in Northumberland riding will be selecting provincial standard-bearers at party nominating conventions in the county next week.

The Conservatives' convention will be held at Warkworth town hall September 14 at 8 p.m. Guest speaker for the evening will be Hon. William Stewart, Ontario minister of agriculture and close friend of Mr. Rowe.

Mr. Rowe, a resident of Cobourg, has held the Northumberland seat for eight years. He is a former school teacher and investment salesman. At Queen's Park, he held the chairmanship of the standing committee on education.

A three - way fight has developed in the riding for the Liberal nominating convention slated for Cobourg Collegiate auditorium September 13 at 8 p.m.

Robin Russell, son of former Coborg Sentinel - Star publisher Foster Russell, is current front - runner in the contest. He represented the Liberals in Northumberland in the October, 1967 general elections.

Mr. Russell will be 30 on convention day and at a press conference held last night, he commented that he is concerned that he is so young.

Since defeat in the 1967 election, he served for three and a half years as special assistant to Opposition leader Robert Nixon. A Cobourg native, he has headed the provincial party's last three policy conferences and taught political science at Toronto's Ryerson - Polytechnical Institute.

Also vying for the Liberal nomination are Wilfred Hushion, high school teacher, Cobourg town councillor and a former riding association president, and Glenn Dale, operator of a large dairy farm at Plainfield, about seven miles north of Cobourg.

Guest speaker will be James Breithaupt, the provincial member for Brant and opposition financial affairs critic.

Youth Secretariat Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — A secretariat to co-ordinate youth-oriented programs is being considered by the provincial government, Dr. Richard Potter, minister without portfolio, said Friday.

Dr. Potter, whose cabinet post concerns special responsibilities for youth affairs, said he hopes the secretariat will be approved shortly by the cabinet committee on policy and priorities.

The secretariat would have a small permanent staff of young people to co-ordinate government youth programs. It would travel across the province gathering information about what young people want and need.

The secretariat is being proposed by the inter-departmental committee on youth, composed of senior civil servants and headed by Dr. Potter.

The committee rejected another proposal, made by the legislature's select committee on youth, for a separate department of youth headed by its own cabinet minister.

"We would be setting up a large department that really isn't needed," Dr. Potter said.

Instead, he envisages the secretariat doing such things as establishing a central application form and registry for all students seeking summer employment with the provincial government. At present, students must apply to a specific department to be considered for employment.

Pensions, MPs' Salaries Chief Topics on Radio Program Today

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Prime Minister Trudeau today defended the $5,000 hike in federal members of parliament's salaries to $23,000 a year.

"When you have only 264 members standing between bureaucracy and 20'000 million people, it's not too much to pay them for doing that job," he told an old-age pensioner who telephoned the CJBQ open line show to ask for a better deal for pensioners.

"You pay announcers, and sports stars $40,000 to $100,000 a year," the prime minister noted. "But every one wants to hit the politicians and I suppose that's their job to be hit."

Mr. Trudeau told the caller that he had increased civil servants salaries and judges salaries at the same time.

He told his listeners that the government would not raise taxes to aid industries hit by the 'American 10 per cent surcharge on imports.

"Perhaps if we didn't have to defend our citizens' jobs, we would have money to raise the pensions," Mr. Trudeau said.

He said $80 million would have to be re-allocated from other budgeted items to pay the aid to industries affected by the surtax.

"Certainly every one would like to have more," he said of all social security benefits.

A disabled war veteran called the show to say he would like to see Mr. Trudeau live on his income — $3,000 a year, including baby bonus for two of his three children.

"I agree that's not enough," said the prime minister. But he added that many other people in Canada were living on the same amount.

"It's no laughing matter," snapped the veteran.

Mr. Trudeau was not amused by a comment from one man that the government was going to chop $5 off the old age pension and add it to the baby bonus to take care of the addition to the Trudeau family." He denied the statement.

A farmer complained of high welfare payments when farm products were selling at low prices. He said he was not making the minimum wage ($1.75) operating his farm.

"Why do you stay in farming?" asked the prime minister.

"Because I'm an old man and I've been farming for 65 years and I can't do anything else," replied the caller.

A construction employee from Picton suggested that wages be lowered so that he could continue working 12 months a year, instead of the eight months he now works. He said it was impossible to support his family on unemployment insurance, during the four months he is off work.

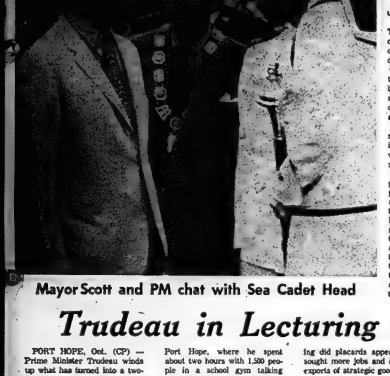
A woman who described herself as "a Trudeau fan" called in awe to remark "I can hardly believe I'm talking to you."

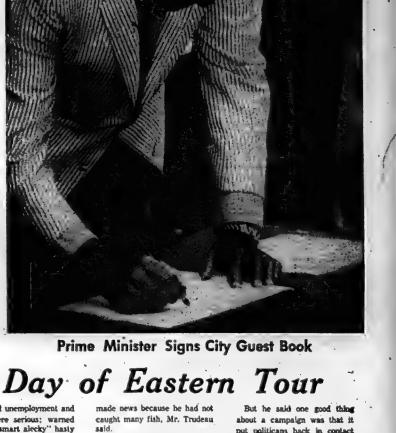
A high school stdent asked Mr. Trudeau what his political philosophy was: Liberal, Conservative or radical?

"I am a Liberal because I believe accomplished by change and if people have freedom then will change," he said. "Have faith in the future of your country and work for that future, for you are the only one who can make it," he told the student when she asked what advice he had for young people.



A Irann asked if President Nixon was not asking Canadiens to pay for the Vietnam war by imposing the import surtax.

Mr. Trudeau said money was slowing up on world markets for many reasons, among them because of military costs.



Saying he would try to put himself in Mr. Nixon's shoes, Mr. Trudeau said the United States has an adverse balance of trade. The main reason for the surtax was to make it harder for Japan and Canada to sell to the United States, and make it easier for the U.S. to sell more to Canada and Japan.

"I don't determine the foreign policy of other countries," said the Prime Minister. "They have the Vietnam war, with which I don't agree, but it's not our business." He agreed that Canada is selling copper, zinc, clothing, aircraft parts, electronic equipment and many things to the U.S. to be used in the war area.

Prime Minister Signs City Guest Book

Prime Minister Trudeau winds up what has turned into a two-day talkathon through Eastern Ontario as he swings into Belleville, Picton and the economically-bludgeoned city of Cornwall today.

The talking began in Pickering, Friday, where he engaged about 2,500 high school students in a dialogue on democracy, the role of the citizen and even the length of his hair.

It continued at a Liberal reception at Oshawa and a public meeting with about 7,000 residents of Peterborough, where he continued the discussion on much the same topics.

"I'm in a lecturing mood today," the prime minister acknowledged at a Peterborough news conference.

Then he came by helicopter to Port Hope, where he spent about two hours with 1,500 people in a school gym talking about economic and political issues.

The routine was a bit unusual for a Trudeau tour. Usually he keeps talks to a minimum, stressing casual contacts with crowds and small groups.

On all the Friday stops he got rousing welcomes. Only in the Peterborough city-square meeting did placards appear. They sought more jobs and a halt to exports of strategic goods to the U.S.

In Belleville today, he was to take part in a radio hot-line program. At Picton, a visit to the county fair will be featured.

Mr. Trudeau may have tougher going in Cornwall where he holds a town meeting Saturday evening. The city is burdened by a 20-per-cent unemployment rate with prospects for still more plant closings.

At Port Hope, he responded to a brief from the riding association that complained of continued unemployment and inflation, a delay in a foreign ownership policy, slow implementation of a national farm products marketing law, capital gains tax proposals, and his own "fault" of taking too many trips at the taxpayers' expense.

He agreed unemployment and inflation were serious; warned against a "smart alecky" hasty ownership policy; blasted the opposition for holding up the marketing bill in the Commons; explained the capital gains proposal, and he didn't think he took many more trips than Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker took fishing holidays.

Mr. Diefenbaker had not made news because he had not caught many fish, Mr. Trudeau said.

At the Peterborough news conference Mr. Trudeau urged reporters to stop speculating about the date of the next election.

It created an unhealthy uncertainty, he said. Why shouldn't a government live out the full five years of its mandate?

But he said one good thing about a campaign was that it put politicans back in contact with the people.

In the current session, "I find it haven't got much fire." That might be overcome by a few weeks of stumping, he said.

He also repeated his feeling that reporters should stay out of his private life.

He did not want to be judged by the length of his hair nor the thickness of his father's wallet.

His locks sprang up in Pickering, too when a student asked whether he thought his long hair and beads tended to pacify a relatively non-violent Canadian student population.

Mr. Trudeau replied that he thought Canada's democratic institutions were more responsible for that.

Not Ready to Decide on Marijuana: PM

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday he did not know whether the government will legalize marijuana, a recommended last month by a government study group on youth.

He was asked in a public meeting here whether he planned to legalize use of the drug. He said he would not decide until he studies the final report of the royal commission on the non-medical use of drugs, expected in November.

When he was asked earlier, at a Peterborough news conference, whether he would predict that marijuana would be legalized in the next five years, he replied:

He did not elaborate on that answer, which came at the end of the conference.

The prime minister noted at the Port Hope meeting that the royal commission did not recommend that marijuana be freed from prohibition.

But the government had followed its proposal to reduce the seriousness of marijuana possession, removing it from the Criminal Code.

Global Violence

When it comes to the human race making asses of themselves with murder, rape and sudden death; riots, burnings, demonstrations, and all the rest of it, there is not much to choose between one nationality and another.

Consider the list of countries involved in such lamentable activity in recent years, during which the world ostensibly has been at peace (aside that is from Vietnam): Palestine, later to become Israel, Algeria, Cuba, if you consider what then was a bona fide revolution. Mostly we are talking about terrorism and that takes us also to the Middle East and the recent warfare in Jordan, not to mention the activities of Arab guerrillas and commandos. In the category of terrorism too may be included the Pakistani army's repression of the people in the country's eastern region. And remember Quebec last October.

From terrorism pause for a moment to consider the scarcely less brutal nature of riot confrontations in recent years in France, Germany, Japan, the United States, London, England, and even a farmers' demonstration in Brussels which led to loss of life. In Stockholm there was an attack on some ambassador's establishment — Yugoslav as we recall — shattering the relatively peaceful image of yet another capital city.

Then of course there is Northern Ireland, and Ireland at large which has carved a niche all its own in the annals of civil disorder going back hundreds of years, on down to the Easter rebellion of 1916 and successive terrorist outbreaks up to the present day.

Which brings us to the Communist orbit and try as we may we cannot find anything much in the way of overt internal dissension. There was Hungary of course, back in 1956, and in more recent times Czechoslovakia, and the ruthless repression of libertarian trends in both those countries. And there is the jailing of intellectuals in the Soviet Union. Remember too the upheaval associated with the cultural revolution in China. Nor can we forget the Berlin wall and the closed society which still, for the most part, lies behind the so-called iron curtain, from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

But terrorism and killing of innocents, women and girls and infants by wicked, unscrupulous men, so far as we know there is no such despicable conduct going on anywhere in the Communist world. Life may be hard economically, but for the average, law-abiding citizen from Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia to Bulgaria, Romania and Yugoslavia these days, life would appear to be tranquil and peaceable enough.

Culture Shock

It has been "culture shock" in reverse for Kitchener mathematics teacher Ralph Scheffel, his wife and four sons on their return to Canada for the fall term.

The Scheffel family spent the past three years in Tanzania and all were impressed with the hard work of young Africans in secondary school. Only about five per cent of young Tanzanians go to secondary school, but nonetheless Peter Scheffel tells how boys in the fourth form at his school would be found in the early morning hours curled up by the hot water pipes with a candle, studying for their national examinations.

For Mr. Scheffel, according to an article by Rose Marie Earle in The Kitchener-Waterloo Record, teaching in Africa was a heady experience. When he walked into the classroom in the morning all the boys would stand. They went overboard with politeness and there was, almost no acting up. Rather their attention was concentrated on the teacher and his lesson.

It was a long day for Mr. Scheffel though — 8 a.m. to about 5.30 p.m., but he said there was more time during school hours to prepare lessons. Nor had he any maintenance to do on the house, so evenings were free.

Previously the Scheffels had scarcely been outside Waterloo County. Then oldest son Michael went to a Children's International Summer Village in Mexico. Subsequently the African assignment materialized through the Canadian International Development Agency. By now realizing more keenly than ever that their world was too small, the Scheffels seized the opportunity to go to Africa.

All feel they have gained from the experience and perhaps the most valuable thing that developed was when Mr. and Mrs. Scheffel found that they communicated more with their children while in Africa. Which just goes to show what getting away from it all, and the stimulus of a fresh environment, can do.

U.K. Style 'Bible' Said It

Prime Minister as 'Proper as Proper Can Be'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — "When he kicks off his Bandals, shucks his pedal-a-boo net shirt, peels his flared jeans and sheds his medallions, you will know Trudeau's back at work," grinned Conservative Whip Tom Bell, MP for Saint John-Lancaster, a day or so before Parliament re-opened as he caught a fleeting glimpse of Prime Minister Trudeau still in summer togs.

Well, Tom Bell was only half right.

True, the Prime Minister, now back in the Commons, where proper parliamentary dress is a suit, or at least slacks and a jacket, is out of his comfortable casual threads and into some more formal tailoring.

Tom Bell had misjudged his man, even after more than a three years of watching the Prime Minister at work and sometimes play.

What the younger (at 48) Conservative Whip, a vastly more conventional type than older (at 53) Prime Minister, took to be vacation god-shod-gear, was really the Trudeau routine dress of the Trudeau non-parliamentary working day.

The man dresses for the occasion.

For Cabinet — and the scrimmage with the swarms of adoring kids and hordes of admiring tourists as he leaves these deliberations — the Prime Minister makes it look like a gas.

That is the way the crowds like him, so that is the way he plays it.

Like it was all part of the National Capital's Summer Festival.

Like the Prime Minister was the headline attraction — which, actually, he is — of the National Arts Centre's holiday entertainment.

Gordon Lightfoot and the Winnipeg Ballet at the Arts Centre, the Changing of the Guard under the Peace Tower, Rideau Canal and Ottawa River moonlight cruises, the National Symphony backed by Army cannon pounding out Wellington's Victory or the 1812 Overture at nearby Camp Fortune, and the Prime Minister playing a puckish Prince Charming outside the East Block.

It is already "Vote-Winning-Time - In - Dear - Valley" — Ottawa Valley, that is, where Parliament works and all the political action starts — as while it may have looked to Tory Tom Bell that the Prime Minister was vacationing in what the average joker wears on holidays, he was actually seeing the man at work.

Pleasing people. Shaking hands. Tossing off smiled Heikos in French and English. Signing autographs. Even making a singalong of a song some kids were singing to him. And most of all — always front and centre in the action — working at winning votes.

The more he sees up now till these days, weeks and months — and he must have performed for thousands, winding at least some of them — the fewer he will have to round up when he calls the election at his convenience when he thinks the time right and the prospects promising.

Now that Parliament is back in session, nothing essentially has changed in the Prime Minister's work habits.

He is still at it drumming up the vote with crowds that swarm around him in the outer lobby of the Commons and cluster at the VIP West Door of the Centre Block for his police-escorted limousine arrivals and departures.

He just dresses differently, more formally, for the role in a different setting. One of stylized tradition where the actors all perform by parliamentary script instead of doing their political thing off the top of the head.

Suits. Business suits. More and more conservatively and increasingly conservatively tailored.

Shirts, non - sport. Even white. Indications that in the male fashion world the man who was known around the world as "Trendy" could be going "square."

Shoes. Even brogues. Shined to a gleam.

At one time, his styling, and he never lacked a style of his very own, could have been a bit on the Sloppy Joe side.

No more.

The word on man - fashion comes down from on high.

Tailor and Cutter; bible of London's high-style Bond Street — where Gieves and Hardy Ambles and other big names in the British needle trade decree what is fashion — declare him the essence of elegance, "looking, always, proper as proper can be".

P.M.'s Aide Tells It Like It Is

The Crushing Burden of Parliamentary Life

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Two of Canada's most influential civil servants discussed publicly this week the workings of the federal cabinet.

Marc Lalonde, principal secretary to Mr. Trudeau, and Gordon Robertson, secretary to the cabinet, presented papers to the annual meeting of the Institute of Public Administration of Canada in Regina.

Mr. Lalonde says Mr. Trudeau works a basic 42-hour week: about 11 hours on cabinet activities, 11 on the Commons and 20 on other tasks. Besides this were numerous hours of studying official documents and weekend travel outside Ottawa on official business.

Mr. Robertson says Mr. Trudeau's ministers have even more exhausting hours.

He says the ministers work an 11-hour day five days a week and a good part of each weekend.

"Ministers today have a load that tries the limits of physical and intellectual powers," Mr. Robertson said.

"Ministers are overwhelmed by the obligations, engagements and pressures that throng upon them."

Mr. Lalonde and Mr. Robertson disagree on one point concerning the prime minister's work schedule.

Mr Lalonde says Mr. Trudeau is chairman of four cabinet committees: economy and intelligence; public service; federal-provincial relations; and priorities and planning.

Mr. Robertson says Mr. Trudeau is chairman of only two cabinet committees: priorities and planning and federal-provincial relations. All other cabinet committees are chaired by other ministers, he says.

Mr. Lalonde went to some pains to defend Mr. Trudeau against some recent criticisms.

He rarely gives a public speech or paper.

Mr. Lalonde says in this one that there have been accusations that Mr. Trudeau has deliberately tried to lessen the power and effectiveness of Parliament.

"Quite untenable" is his comment on such suggestions.

The prime minister had increased his staff to gain firmer control over the administration and to improve communications with the public.

Parliamentary reforms of 1968 and 1969 required increased personal attention, he said, to Parliament by the prime minister.

Mr. Lalonde said Mr. Trudeau has taken every Liberal backbench MP to lunch. When in Ottawa, he attended the Liberal caucus every week.

Between Jan. 1, 1970, and July 31, 1971, Mr. Trudeau had conducted 23 news conferences.

"In spite of all this, some members of the press still feel that the prime minister is not accessible enough," Mr. Lalonde said.

Between July 1, 1970, and July 1, 1971, Mr. Trudeau had received more than 3,000 invitations to attend various public functions.

Between July 1, 1970, and Aug. 15, 1971, Mr. Trudeau had spent 37 days on official business in Western Canada, 36 abroad, 13 in the Atlantic provinces, 11 in Ontario and 10 in Quebec.

Mr. Trudeau said in July there had been criticism of his foreign travel and that he was therefore curtailing it.

He has had, besides official trips abroad, seven vacations outside Canada since he became prime minister, not counting weekends in New York and the like.

Mr. Lalonde said Mr. Trudeau's staff now numbers 85 compared with 40 for his predecessor, Lester Pearson.

But the correspondence staff alone had had to be doubled to 40. Last year Mr. Trudeau had received 137,000 pieces of mail.

'Superficial . . . Reactionary' Is Quebec Newspaper's View Of Federal Youth Committee Report

Montreal Le Devoir: The special youth committee report was conceived to shock, and it will. . . .

Let's hope, nevertheless, that clear minds will not be trapped . . . into giving the report innovating qualities it lacks.

It is a superficial and often reactionary analysis . . . of extremely serious problems while it brings out the deep contradictions of so-called individualist and developed Western societies.

So far, these contradictions have manifested themselves among the youth. . . .

However, many of the committee's recommendations are valid. We cannot be opposed to the legalization of marijuana and hashish, as long as their harmfulness does not have been proven, unless we simultaneously demand a ban on alcohol. . . .

If legalization of marijuana and hashish is really the bridge over the generation gap, as the committee says, then it is a fool's bridge.

Let us quickly applaud the abolition of cadet training programs in the armed forces and military colleges. . . . To keep the young from being too troublesome, the committee recommends that we pacify them with a ride at the cost of the taxpayer. . . .

I have nothing against travel. . . . Convergently, I would gladly support a program of subsidies that would allow all those who do not have the means to travel — workers, mothers, young and old.

But why limit these advantages to one category of citizens? . . .

The committee will no doubt say that the premiums it proposes to turn over to students should encourage young workers to continue their studies. But why did they stop studying? It is not always a question of money. It is quite often because the education meted out no longer has any meaning for them. . . .

Do we really believe that we will stamp out this passive questioning of society's values with subsidies?

Hiding That Light Under A Bunker!

Ottawa Journal

A legitimate complaint against Canadians' tendency to play down their own is lodged by the publisher of Golf Canada. Of Lee Trevino's unprecedented winning of the U.S. national and British open golf tournaments in sequence, he notes:

"Surely now, for the first time, Canadians would find their newspapers linking the Canadian Open naturally and prominently with the two other renowned national tournaments. Right? Wrong.

After the British Open the feature stories in a leading forum to daily newspaper and in an English Sunday morning paper in Montreal report that Lee Trevino had become the fourth man in history to win both the U.S. Open and the British Open in the same year.

"We're aware that many newspapers pick up the reports of a tournament from a wire service and run the account without additions or comments. But we feel that on this occasion in particular Canadian newspapers owe it to their readers to highlight the news that the Canadian Open and other national crowns now belonged together) as a trio . . ."

As the young would say: Right on! May the offenders miss every 18-inch putt they attempt for the remainder of the golf season.

Father and Son Are Leaders In Own 'Radio Church of God'

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of Canadians each day listen to an unusual half-hour radio program, The World Tomorrow. The broadcast, heard daily on 40 stations across the country, features Herbert W. Armstrong and his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, the two leading lights in their own Radio Church of God.

The Radio Church of God is not named in any Canadian or American yearbook of denominations nor is it listed in city or telephone directories.

In the 37 years since Herbert W. Armstrong made his first half-hour broadcast over a 100-watt radio station in Eugene, Ore., he has watched a religious empire develop.

Today the Armstrongs broadcast daily over nearly 200 Canadian and American radio stations and in several languages around the world. A weekly telecast is beamed over 20 Canadian channels and more American channels.

Countless thousands of Canadians receive the monthly 48-page slick, multi-color magazine, Plain Truth, which has a world circulation of more than two million. And the movement operates three liberal arts colleges in California, Texas and England.

The Armstrongs contend that the movement is the only genuine church and that others are "satanic counterfeits".

In fact, states founder Herbert W. Armstrong, the reaching of God's real message ceased in the year AD 69, 38 years after the death of Christ. The gospel was not heard again until 1934 when Herbert W. Armstrong, then an advertising and public relations man, began to preach over that radio station in Eugene.

What is the true Christian message which has been missing so long and only recently brought to light again?

The Armstrong gospel, to an outsider, appears to be a selective combination of a few beliefs of Seventh Day Adventists, British Israelites, Jehovah's Witnesses, and Mormons. The founder of the Radio Church of God seems to have welded them together to form a distinctive and marketable product.

From the Seventh Day Adventists, he picked up the emphasis on observing Saturday rather than Sunday. Anyone who observes Sunday, contends Armstrong, is disobedient to God and is not a true Christian. Such a person has "the mark of the beast".

One Armstrong view (borrowed from British Israelism) is that America and Britain are actually the "10 lost tribes of Israel", the throne of England, he adds, is actually the literal throne of David.

He seems to have acquired from the Jehovah's Witnesses and their predecessors the rejection of the traditional Christian view of the Trinity, denial of the physical resurrection of Christ, and rejection of the existence of hell.

He appears to be indebted to the Mormons for the teaching that an obedient disciple of the movement will become God.

Unlike most churches, the Radio Church of God has no local church buildings. How then does it operate?

Listeners to the broadcast who write the Canadian office in Vancouver or those who respond to ads in Reader's Digest receive free subscriptions to Plain Truth. As they read the magazine, they will notice mention of another magazine, Tomorrow's World, and of Bible correspondence courses.

If they write about the second magazine or enrol in one of the mail courses, they will read of "co-workers" whose support makes possible the vast broadcasting and literature ministry. Should they write for information about "co-worker" status or about identification with the group, a pastor and an elder will call and tell about the closest local meeting whose location to this point is a closely-guarded secret.

Those weekly area meetings are held on Saturdays in rented premises. Since devoted followers are expected to give at least one-tenth of their gross incomes to the Radio Church of God large offerings are received in the weekly area gatherings.

Those offerings are forwarded directly to headquarters in Pasadena, Calif. Thus, with no overhead for church buildings, programs, and usual congregational expenses, the Radio Church of God can pour millions into the publishing, radio, and television outreach to disseminate Mr. Armstrong's unique views.

The success of the Radio Church of God, according to Charles De Loach, an American reporter who broke with the group, is due to a widespread disillusionment with modern churches and a longer for definite moorings.

The dogmatic, articulate Armstrongs thus appeal to people who witness an erosion of belief in traditional churches.

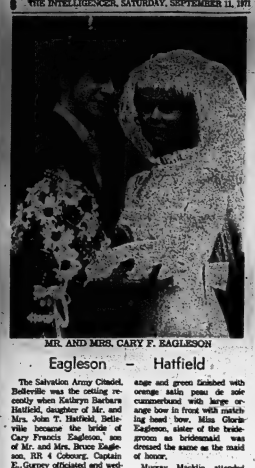
PLAINFIELD WI

Mrs. Charles Beatty was hostess for the September meeting of the Plainfield WI which was attended by 24 people.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Albert Wright, president. A letter was read from Mrs. Watson, the district president asking for members' opinions on the 50th anniversary celebration of the WI. It was decided to join with the district WI for this event. The time, place and other details will be decided at the next district meeting. A ten dollar donation will be sent to be Erland Lee homestead project. Other matters discussed were preparation made for plumbing in Centennial Hall.

Mrs. Carman Huffman, health convener was in charge of the program. The motto "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine" was given by Mrs. Gerlad Swan who quoted verses from the Bible pertaining to this theme. She also quoted various poems on this theme.



Mrs. H. Harrison, accordionist led a sing-song of old favorites. Mrs. Hilda Lawrence demonstrated Fashion 220 beauty produces using Mrs. Albert Wright as a model.

Mrs. Gerald Swan, PRO will convene the next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. A. Wright on Wednesday evening October 6.

Female Workers

TORONTO (CP) — More than 40 per cent of Canadian women will work outside the home by 1980, and more of them will be young mothers, the Ontario department of labor said Thursday.

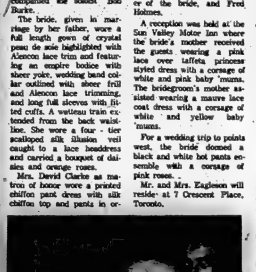
"Proportionately fewer women are expected to leave the labor force during the child - bearing age group of 25 to 34 years. The labor force participation in this age group is expected to increase from 36.2 to 40 per cent in the next 20 years," the report said.

MR. AND MRS. CARY F. EAGLESON

Eagleson - Hatfield

The Salvation Army Citadel, Belleville was the setting recently when Kathryn Barbara Hatfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hatfield, Belleville became the bride of Cary Francis Eagleson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Eagleson, RR 4 Cobourg. Captain E. Gurney officiated and wedding music was rendered by Mrs. E. Gurney, who also accompanied the soloist Bob Burke.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length gown of crystal peau de soie highlighted with Alencon lace trim and featuring an empire bodice with sheer yoke banding and collar outlined with sheer frill and Alencon lace trimming, and long full sleeves with lace cuffs. A wetleau train extended from the back waistline. She wore a four - tier scalloped silk illusion veil caught to a lace headdress and carried a bouquet of daisies and orange roses.



Mrs. David Clarke as matron of honor wore a pretzel chiffon pant dress with silk chiffon top and pants in orange and green finished with orange satin peau de soie commenced with large orange bow in front with matching bead bow. Miss Gloria Eagleson, sister of the bridegroom as bridesmaid was dressed the same as the maid of honor.

Murray Macklin attended the bridegroom and ushers were Stephen Hatfield, brother of the bride, and Fred Holmes.

A reception was held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink lace over taffeta princess styled dress with a corsage of white and pink baby 'mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a mauve lace coat dress with a corsage of white and yellow baby 'mums.

Mr. and Mrs. Eagleson will reside at 7 Crescent Place, Toronto.

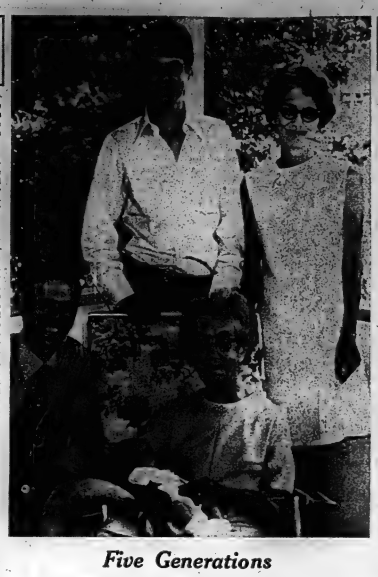
MR. AND MRS. JAMES DUNLAY

Dunlay - Tanner

College Hill United Church was the setting for the September 3 wedding of Brenda Gayle Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Tanner of Napanee and of James David Dunlay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dunlay of Roslin. Rev. Roy Vessey conducted the ceremony while Mrs. Marilyn Bailey played organ music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a floor length gown styled along empire lines with a white peau de soie skirt, white lace bodice and bell sleeves. A five - tiered veil consisting of tiers of scalloped silk illusion fell from a cluster of organza and seed pearls.

The maid of honor Miss Sharon Tanner the bride's sister wore a floor length peau gown of pastel yellow Swiss organza with short bell sleeves and a white lace midriff. She carried a bouquet of white shasta daisies.



The bridegroom was attended by Gerald Bower as best man. The reception was held at Trois Motor Hotel, Belleville. Greeting guests was the suit of gold brocade with a chelsea collarin Brown accessories and a corsage made of a white carnation tinted gold completed her costume.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a two piece blue linen suit with beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a mayne printed arnel jersey hot pant ensemble with a corsage of yellow 'mums. Upon return the couple will reside at 320 West Moira St., Belleville.

Five Generations

Shower Held for Bride-elect

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mrs. Gordon Ackerman and Mrs. Eric Jones were co-hostesses on Wednesday evening at the former's home for a miscellaneous shower for Miss Rosemary Caves a bride - elect of this month.

The home was tastefully decorated with pink and blue streamers and pink and blue flowers. The gifts were placed in a wishingwell also decorated in pink and blue by Mrs. Jones.

Mrs. Edna Jones conducted contests such as "advice for the bride" and others and prizes were given for the person with the closest anniversary and the closest birthday.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Edna Jones and Mrs. Marion Ackerman assisted by Ann and Janice Caves. Patti Ackerman and Mrs. Peggy McNeela.

A lovely bridal cake made by a cousin of the bridegroom Mrs. Wayne Bird centered the diningroom table flanked by pink candles. The white cake was topped by a bridal doll with veil and the cake was her hoopskirt trimmed with pink roses.

The gifts were opened by the bride - to - be, Rosemary Caves and admired by all.

Engagement Notice

The marriage will take place at St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, on November 6th, 1971, at 4 p.m.

YOUR ANTIQUES

Pressed Glass Actually Variant of Blown Glass

The current craze for pressed glass has obscured the fact that before it became popular in the late 1830s, the market was supplied with blown glass.

Pressed glass is actually a variant of blown glass. The molten glass is blown into a mold rather than being formed freeband by the glassblower. Most pieces, particularly modern ones, show mold ridges marks which usually run vertically on the glass. Pieces blown in a mold are almost identical. Ever blown glass piece is never exactly the same, although they may be similar enough to match. All free blown articles show a pontil scar, usually on the bottom where the piece was attached to the blower's rod. Pontil scars may be a broken rough surface or a polished hollow where the scar has been ground off.

It has been suggested that the Jessich made glass in Canada as early as the 17th century. There are indications that glass was made in Virginia in this period. However it was not until 1739 that a glass house was established on a firm basis in North America.

In that year Caspar Wister constructed a glass furnace in Salem County, New Jersey. His business prospered and when he died in 1752 it passed to his son. The firm advertised bottles, lamp glass, window glass in sizes from 6" by 8" to 16" by 12", as well as other domestic items. A hundred years later, houses in Southern Ontario were still being constructed to use 10" by 12" panes.

In 1750 Henry William Stiegel emigrated to Pennsylvania and settled near Lancaster. He became an ironmaster and a man of affluence. In 1763 he built a glasshouse and lived in style as "Baron" Stiegel. His prosperity was short-lived and he was bankrupt just before the American revolution, ruined by cheaper foreign imports.

So many immigrants to Canada came from the Lancaster area that some of Stiegel's glass must have made its way here and probably still exists.

In the 1790s, John Frederick Amelung, a German business man from Bremen, arrived in Baltimore, Maryland with a capital of 15,000 pounds and 68 glassworkers. His business absorbed some of the workers from the previous glass houses and had a considerable production. It too was shortlived because of competition from abroad.

The illustration shows at the top a blown jug in "lily-pad" design, made about 1858. It is similar in design to glass from the Mallorytown Glass Works, the first major glass house in Ontario that flourished from 1825 to 1833. Similar American pieces from the 1825 period exist. The other pieces are from New York and Pittsburgh and are typical of blown glassware in the mid-19th century.

Early blown glass, if identifiable, is phenomenally valuable. It was copied in the United States in the 1930s as a government make - work project. The copies are not valuable nor do they show the skill and artistic ability of the original workers. They may, however, confuse the amateur collector.

TO WHOM SHALL WE GO?

THE ARMS RACE. "Cosmicide", "annihilation", "overkill" and "doomsday" are a few terms which attempt to describe the threat under which we all live. We not only have enough nuclear weapons, stockpiled, to wipe out the entire population of the earth forty times over. Yet, even in the face of this impending holocaust, we continue to devise and develop even more devastating weapons to secure "peace in our generation".

POLLUTION. It is difficult to avoid contact with this plague at least once during any day. A direct result of our burgeoning affluence; this cure represents another threat to our continued existence on this shrinking planet. Scientists inform us that without some form of "divine intervention", our time is short indeed.

YOUTH REBELLION. The radically rebellious anarchists are bent on destroying "the establishment". They care not for the suffering and loss caused by their burning, looting, stealing and bombings, just so that "the establishment" is destroyed. Some live in constant fear of being all that they worked a lifetime to gain, because some radicals are determined to correct by force the evils they see in society.

The problems mentioned above are just a few which have caused some to say "ashes to ashes, dust to dust; if the bombs and pollution don't get you, the anarchists must." There are many problems and there are many possible solutions, but which ones will work?

TO WHOM SHALL WE GO FOR OUR SOLUTIONS? — To the experts? Economists, for years have claimed that they have the answer: educate the world and your problems will disappear. Yet, the Western world has one of the highest standards of education and still has these problems. Economists say give the people of the world enough material possessions and the problems will cease. Canada has one of the highest standards of living and has not found a solution to these problems. Many who find no solution for these problems try the "eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow may die" philosophy. They try to escape from reality by escaping into alcohol, drugs, astrology, free love or just anything that will give them a good time so they can try to forget their troubles; but there is no real escape. Man's answers to man's problems are futile.

TO WHOM SHALL WE GO THEN? The only place man can turn is to God and the Bible. The Bible provides the only time-tested answer to all our problems. God claims that regardless of world conditions, there is hope for the future through faith in Him. (Matt. 11:28-29). He sent His Son to confirm that hope. (Jn. 3:16) Have we reject the only solution to our problems?? (Hab. 2:3-3) If we have a strong faith in Christ and our heavenly Father, we can say with the apostle Paul, "the Lord is my helper and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." (Heb. 13:6) Christianity is not just another escape mechanism, faith in Christ will give you the inner strength to face any problem — yes even death. There is a group of people who have found this hope and would like to share it with you. To inform you of this hope, we are offering to everyone a free Bible correspondence course. It is simple and informative. Just write to BIBLE COURSE, BOX 814, BRIGHTON, ONTARIO, and request our introductory course.

Successful Living

In This Case All Gifts Should Be Returned

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I was to be married in September but my fiance has been killed in an accident.

What do I do with the 40 gifts I have, ranging from a pot holder to lovely linens and blankets? I do not feel they are rightfully mine now. Most of them have come from some distance.

Should I write to each person, explain the situation and send the gifts back; or write and ask the giver if he or she wishes it returned?—Maybe I shouldn't do either. I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings.

What about a gift which has been given jointly by several different persons? — No Wedding

Dear No Wedding: I'm sorry. It is a sad let-down for all your high hopes!

Yes, send them all back. Write a gentle, gracious note telling what has happened and expressing your regret that you will not now have the opportunity to use and enjoy their thoughtful gift. Thank each one, individually, for the sympathy and love which you know they will be feeling for you.

The joint gift should go back to the person you know best, asking her to explain it to the others and expressing the hope that it is not too late to return it to where it was bought.

Assume not at all that anyone wants you to keep their gifts. Let's hope that the future holds for you another opportunity to receive lovely wedding gifts from friends.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am a grade seven student. Our class is doing an assignment which involves writing to an important and respected person for a piece of advice.

Could you give me one piece of advice you would give a 13-year-old girl? — Carol

Dear Carol: You tempt me to throw the book at you! A counselor — or a priest — needs the wisdom of Solomon.

Practically nobody has that much. But some parents get privacy close when it comes to entering into the minds of their young people.

So a useful piece of advice would be: "Keep the lines of communication open with Mum and Dad. Keep interpreting yourself. Even when you think there is a chance you'll be laughed at or misunderstood, take that chance."

Youth counselors spend half their time helping Canadian teenagers to bridge the generation gap; and it is a two way street.

Dear Doris: Please tell Secretary, Administrative Assistant, that we do have some ideas for programs.

We could provide persons who would appear on a panel to demonstrate our self-help method and answer questions about our group procedures. The discussion periods which follow are always lively! — Canadian Area Leader, Secretary, Inc.

Dear Leader: I hope Secretary, Admin., and a good many other secretaries of similar groups across Canada will see your letter and write to me for details. We can then let inquirers know about the nearest locality where a demonstration would be available.

* * *

Doris can help you with that puzzling decision. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Tasty Puff Squares

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Years ago when I was living in my first apartment, I, along with several of the other tenants who also had to use all "short-cuts" possible, had a recipe for Toffe Rice Krispie Squares . . . I haven't made it in years, but presently, I have a friend who is camping for two months and has neither the facilities or ambition to do much cooking. My representation in order to help her feed her family with the minimum amount of time in the kitchen, was a dismal failure. The rice Krispies were downright sugar and didn't do even a reasonably good job of sticking together. Mildred Z.

ANSWER: I have a reasonable facsimile that was perfected by a good cook friend of mine living in Victoria. Her name of Margaret Daddy and you may have noticed mention of her in the past 10 years. She invented these for my grandchildren.

PUFF SQUARES
(use 13 x 9 x 2" pan)

7 cups wheat puffs
6 cups rice puffs
1-3 cup butter
½ cup corn syrup
1 cup light or dark brown sugar
2 tbsps. cocoa
1 ts. instant coffee (optional)
½ tsp. cinnamon

In large roasting pan toast the wheat puffs starting them in cold oven. Turn heat on low to 350 deg. Fahr., and leave in oven 25 min. in all, stirring them around occasionally twice. Remove from oven. Stir in rice puffs.

In medium saucepan melt butter over low heat and add syrup, sugar, cocoa, coffee (if used) and cinnamon. Stir to mix and dissolve but do not boil. Drizzle one-third of syrup over puffs and mix in thoroughly. With rubber spatula scrape remaining one-third of syrup from saucepan over puffs and stir until all are coated. Butter a 13 x 9 x 2" pan and turn mixture into it and with buttered palms pack down evenly. This size of pan holds all of the puff mixture filled to the brim. Using a long ruler as your guide cut deeply into 2" squares and refrigerate when chilled through serve squares from pan.

Second Glance

THE ROLE OF VOLUNTEER IN THE COMMUNITY

"There is no conflict between being helpful and being happy." — Herbert Hoover.

* * *

Have you ever wished to offer your services as a volunteer in the community, but knew not whom to apply?

If so, we learn the Central Volunteer Bureau, 224 John Street, (phone 963-9511) is the place to call, as it is a clearing house where exchange of local agencies' needs for valuable volunteer services are made.

Mrs. Ruth Burrows, who founded (7 years ago) and is the director of the Bureau, reveals today there are 18 volunteer bureaus in Canada, where citizens may register for voluntary service and be given a volunteer job which suits their time and talents.

"Without the active leadership of volunteers," says Mrs. Burrows, "there is no single agency anywhere in the country which could exist," and expresses the hope that "in the coming year many more citizens will make their leisure hours come into through worthwhile volunteer services."

V — for Value. Yes. The role of the volunteer is of great value and is vital. It faces the realization that our community's responsibility for others must be shared by those in it. For the way we live together influences the growth of creativity in every one.

O — for Opportunities. Opportunities abound where self may be given in love and service to others. Agencies call for, indeed, cry out for assistance. These many volunteer opportunities through volunteers' fine efforts can turn the power that searches heart and mind into positive human values.

L — for Lifting. Volunteers are lifters, lower leaners. A volunteer may not know in just what area his chance to lift will come, but preparing to be a lifter, not a leaner, by developing worthwhile interests that keep one alive, inspired and healthy, the opportunity to lift will come.

U — for Useful. Utilize. Unity. Being useful by asking how, where and when one can apply one's skill. Such as, and we quote: "Being willing to take the traditional role of chairman of the board, to postage stamp licker, to Big Brother or Scout leader, driving the handicapped, helping in health and welfare organizations, running Blood Donor clinics, visiting sick and shut-ins, teaching Sunday School."

By utilizing and pooling these skills and efforts with others of like mind make for strength, great enough for a dynamic and free united community.

N — for Needs. Needs of mankind are enormous. But by doing what one can and doing it well, the practice thereof is not labor, but a certain joy and satisfaction.

T — for Time. Time is precious. Time is a master; it can give or take away opportunities to give help. The volunteer takes time to do today which may not be possible to do tomorrow. Dedication takes time.

E — for Effort. The effort of a volunteer, to help others, gains power of compassion, tenderness and strength. Effort inspires people of all ages and all walks of life to search for better worlds. It is truly said. "There is no aristocracy unless it is the aristocracy of effort."

E — for Experience. "In our democracy," says Dr. Wilder Penfield, "all are free to discover, each for himself an impelling purpose in life, in each of us lie its inner urge." This "inner urge" is vulnerable, sometimes damaged. If the volunteer may help to restore it, how fortunate. It is a wonderful privilege. To experience the tangible force of love and concern for helping others to become self sufficient human beings, enriches. Said one volunteer: "These are the things that make you happy."

R — for Reasons. "The heart has reasons which reason knows nothing of," so goes an old adage, and this may surely head the list of one or many.

S — to Sum up: "If men are to remain civilized or become so, the art of associating together must grow and improve in the same ration in which the equality of conditions is increased." — Tocquiville.

Husband Drinks Again After Vowing to Stop

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For years my husband and I drank more than most people. We drank at home, at work, and socially at every opportunity — to celebrate when things were good, and to "drown our sorrows" when things were bad.

We've had plenty of grief which can be attributed directly to excessive drinking. My husband and I were both loaded the night we had a nasty accident. We were very nearly killed — and we came close to killing three other people. After that accident we agreed — "no more booze." I have kept my pledge but my husband has not kept his.

ANN LANDERS

Several times lately I've been sure that Jim has been drinking at work. He tries to hide it with cough drops and mouthwash but I can tell by his eyes and the way he speaks and acts. Liquor makes him noisy and rought.

The effect on me because of what he is doing is shock, disgust and depression. I'm beginning to wonder if I can stay married to this man. Somehow I can't bring myself to speak to him about it. I'm afraid I might say the wrong thing. Please help me soon. I'm having trouble sleeping — GARDEN CITY WOES.

DEAR G.C.W.: You must speak to him. But pick your time and place. Don't try to reason with a man who is drunk Wait until he's sober. And don't bring up the subject when you are angry. Your approach should be low-key, compassionate and understanding. You are far better equipped to help your husband than most women who are married to boozers, because you have walked those miserable miles in his moccasins. Moreover, your ability to stay dry should give him hope and strength. Good luck to you both.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Something is bothering me, and maybe your column is not the place to take it up but frankly, you are like a family friend and I don't know where else to go.

I just returned from the funeral of an acquaintance. She looked very natural except for one thing — her eyeglasses. A person who has passed away is in a very real sense "asleep" forever. People do not sleep with their glasses on, so why would a mortician be so stupid as to put glasses on a deceased person? Please reply in the paper. Maybe someone will learn from it. — M.E.G., STOCKTON.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I laughed when I read that you had entered a contest 20 years ago and worked your head off and didn't win anything.

I had better luck than you, Ann. Here's my story. I heard about a contest on the radio and decided to enter I had to write a letter saying why I thought my mom deserved a dozen roses Six months passed and I didn't hear anything. I was quite disappointed. A few days later my mom and I had an argument. She was awfully rud at me. When I came home from school she was smiles — and there was a bouquet of red roses on the piano. The radio station had read my letter on the air and all the neighbors and relatives heard it. Dad got a copy of my letter and took it to work. It was a great day for all of us. So don't give up, Ann. You may hear from them yet. — TEEN READER.

DEAR READER: After twenty years I think it's safe to assume that I was not a winner. Especially since the first prize was a Hudson sedan and they don't even make 'em anymore. Thanks for writing.

U.S. Seeks Canada's Aid In Tight Drug Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States is actively seeking Canadian support for changes to the international narcotics control treaty which stiffen efforts to stamp out the illicit drug traffic.

America's officials visited here Thursday to press Canada for support when the United Nations international narcotics control commission meets in Europe toward the end of September.

Dr. Ross Chapman, the special federal adviser who will represent this country at the meetings, said Friday in an interview that the Canadian position has not yet been determined.

He said he expects his instructions before leaving for the meeting but hopes they will be sufficiently flexible to allow changes in position on the basis of debate on the U.S. proposals among the treaty countries.

The U.S. has proposed new powers for the International Narcotic Control Board which supervises everyday use of the international drugs treaty, known as the Single Convention of 1961.

Commission, to make on-the-spot investigations of "drug related activities" in treaty countries and would empower it to act on information other than that supplied by a treaty country.

For example, if the board board unofficial but reliable of a breach of the treaty regulating production, marketing and distribution of narcotics, it could investigate and "obtain public debate on the matter in various UN agencies.

Dr. Chapman said such public pressure, or the threat of it, would probably be enough to have even the most reluctant country take corrective action.

The board also would be able to inform countries when it considered as excessive the amount of opium poppies being grown to produce the world's supplies of legal morphine, codeine and other narcotics used in medical practice.

"How long will it take to find the loose wire, take out three defective tubes and sell me back the three tubes you found had last time?"

Ducks Mercury-laden

OTTAWA (CP) — Hunters should not eat goldeneye, blue-winged teal and mallard ducks taken from Ontario's Wahigon River system west of Dryden, the Canadian Wildlife Service warned Friday.

The service said ducks that breed on this section of the river have a mercury content well above the .5 parts per million established as a safe level.

Paul Rose Transferred By New Security Body

OTTAWA (CP) — A first noticeable effect of the new security and research planning agency is the transfer of convicted killer Paul Rose, to an Ontario federal prison.

Rose was serving a life sentence at Archambault Penitentiary when four men escaped Jan. 30, one of them Rose's brother, Boucher.

Boucher was among the 23 prisoners whose release had been sought by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec last fall, after James Cross and Pierre Laporte were kidnapped.

RCMP regarded the escape of the other of the new agency and one rapid result was the transfer of Rose, who had been convicted in the Laporte slaying, to the special security prison near St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary.

Robert Bourne, 40, the young artistic colonel who heads the agency, said in an interview Friday that the response might have taken weeks of correspondence a year ago.

But given the agency's mandate, it took only a few telephone calls to and from the threadbare temporary office in which Col. Bourne and his small staff are operating.

He says the agency is a direct outgrowth of a confused period that fell during the October crisis in Quebec.

"Generally the information that was available was a lot better than people thought," he says. "The structure for processing it to the cabinet might have been smoother."

Fifty-page leather-bound assessments of the situation were planted down on Privy Council desks, and barely read in the heat of the crisis.

Later, says Col. Bourne, who was then in the Privy Council, they proved to be a mine of searching and detailed information.

The new agency's task will be to get such information to Mr. Goyer and to cabinet more swiftly and in more digestible form, allowing decisions to be made.

Kierans' Economics OK, Politics Not--PM

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday he generally agrees with the economic views of Eric Kierans, who resigned from the cabinet last April in disagreement with the government's economic policies.

The Prime Minister went on to give the lengthiest response he has yet made to Mr. Kierans' statements that Canada should stop giving tax breaks to resource industries—many foreign owned—and instead develop job-creating manufacturing industries.

There is a "very great deal of good sense" in this thesis, Mr. Trudeau said.

"I'm really on Mr. Kierans' side on this."

It was true that heavy U.S. investment in resource industries had put pressure on the Canadian dollar without creating the jobs that might be created in manufacturing sectors.

But Mr. Kierans had opposed the federal proposal in its white paper on taxation to reduce—not reduced levels—tax breaks to mining and oil companies.

That countered "pressure on the dollar" he told reporters, "raised one hell of a stink" about cutting those incentives to resource development.

The companies and the provinces have said the drop in investment would reduce investments.

It was therefore "bad politics" for Mr. Kierans to tell the provinces, to hell with all the people of Canada.

The federal governments had pleaded with the federal government not to adopt the white paper proposals.

In the government's income-tax revisions, introduced in the Commons last June, the proposals to reduce the tax concessions were modified.

Mr. Trudeau also quarrelled with one aspect of Mr. Kierans' economic logic.

It did not necessarily follow, he said, that barring foreign investment in resources would divert that money into manufacturing industries.

The result could be a net loss of investment and jobs.

Earlier Friday, at a news conference in Peterborough, he was asked about Mr. Kierans' thesis, most recently put forth in the Commons Thursday.

But he went on to say that if the U.S. plans to consider Canada as beavers of wood and drawers of water, then we will have to make some very important compensating decisions.

He was referring then to the threat to Canadian exports posed by the U.S. 10-per-cent duty on imports.

The government could accept this unfriendly if it were temporary.

But if it meant "beggaring other nations . . . , then this is a very serious thing indeed."

Second Reading Given Bill to Aid Industries

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons capped a four-day back-to-work week Friday with second reading for the government's special measure to counter the U.S. supplementary duty on imports.

The fate of the $80-million program of grants to industries, designed to offset the 10-per-cent U.S. levy, was never in doubt and the grants program was hardly the issue.

But the bill reacting to the U.S. move sparked a wide-ranging debate on the whole fabric of Canada's relations with its largest trading partner, with both government and opposition members concluding that some bedrock changes probably will have to be made.

Day-by-day developments in the United States kept adding fuel to the Commons deliberations.

Near the close of business Friday, the House easily defeated a New Democrat amendment suggesting the grants bill's subject matter be referred to a committee before any action, then passed the measure by a resounding 107 votes to 22. Only NDP and Social Credit members voted against.

The bill now goes to the Commons finance committee, which will start its detailed study of the measure and the regulations under it Tuesday. It then comes back to the House for final reading before going to the Senate.

Liberal ministers who entered the debate concentrated on the contention that this $80-million grants program was the best possible interim answer to a sudden problem.

But Eric Kierans, who quit the cabinet last April in a dispute with his colleagues on Liberal economic policy, made what many regarded as the keynote speech of the debate. His Thursday speech dominated the debate Friday.

Steve Otto (L—York East) picked up the theme Friday.

Canada should abandon its adherence to any such international agreements as the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, he said, taking an independent line. This was exactly what the Americans had done. As soon as they decided the program wasn't working in their interest they scrapped it.

"The Americans have returned to isolationism—they are out for themselves."

Lloyd Francis (L—Ottawa West), the party whip, apparently was sent into the debate to take some of the sting out of the Kierans position, widely applauded by the opposition parties.

Mr. Kierans had based his arguments on "some half-truths." New Democrats had given Mr. Kierans loud applause. But what would the NDP premier of Manitoba think about closing down the farms of Thomson because Canada had decided to stop selling nickel? What would the new NDP government in Saskatchewan feel about a ban on potash exports?

The Canadian government had to balance the desirability of sitting on resources—which might become useless because of scientific advances—and selling at least part of them. The proper way was to assess the country's probable domestic needs, then sell the surplus.

Commons Sound System Will Get Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons' new sound system, which has so far reduced speeches to tin-like whispers, will be overhauled this weekend.

"Hopefully we will have it working early next week," an official said Friday.

Since Parliament resumed Tuesday, it has been an earbending experience for MPs and those listening to them. Instead of powerful, amplified voices the new system was producing metallic monotones, scarcely audible.

When I was explained Tuesday that the main amplifiers had blown, it was expected that repairs could be made immediately. But technicians found that the sudden surge of power—or whatever caused the blowout—had backed up into each individual microphone and loudspeaker. Each now must be overhauled.

Imlach Will Have Some Choices to Make at This Sabre Camp

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Buffalo Sabres begin drills today at their National Hockey League training camp at St. Catharines, Ont., general manager—coach Punch Imlach will have something that was lacking in camp last season—a large group of hockey players.

"We sent out 90 invitations but it has been my experience that about 18 per cent get lost somewhere along the way and don't show up," Imlach said Friday as his players began checking in at camp.

"However, we'll have at least, 66 which is a far cry from last season when we went into Peterborough for our camp and rounded up another 20 free agents."

Four NHL clubs opened their camps Friday and another seven were to start today. Vancouver Canucks start their camp Sunday in Medicine Hat, Alta., and Monday when Chicago Black Hawks and Pittsburgh Penguins get started, the whole league will be in training.

The Sabres not only have quantity in training camp but Imlach says he believes they also have better quality players and also the nucleus of a solid farm system.

Gil Perreault, last year's rookie of the year, will be back, and in camp with him will be Richard Martin, Buffalo's first draft choice acquired from Montreal Junior Canadiens, and Craig Ramsay, their second draft choice from Peterborough Petes.

Martin set an OHA Junior A record with 71 goals and Ramsay was captain of the first-place Peterborough club. Imlach indicated both players will be given every chance of starting the season in the NHL.

As for forming a farm system, the Sabres operated virtually on their own last season but now have an affiliation with Cincinnati Swords of the American League and Salt Lake City of the Western League.

Besides Buffalo, camps opening Friday were New York Rangers at Kitchener, Ont.; St. Louis Blues at Flint, Mich., and Detroit Red Wings, without Gordie Howe, at Port Huron, Mich. Howe has retired after 25 seasons with the Red Wings.

The Maple Leafs skate for the first time this afternoon and begin twice-daily workouts Tuesday. One new face in Leafs' camp this season will be Dennis Marshall, a veteran utility forward drafted from the Sabres in June.

The 14 NHL teams will play 58 pre-season games as they prepare for the league's 55th season beginning Oct. 6. Boston, Buffalo, California, Montreal, New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Toronto and Vancouver will play 18 games each, the maximum allowed by the NHL —excluding intra-squad games. Los Angeles will play only six pre-season games, fewest of any team.

Fairy Tale Over

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — It's back to books, hi-fi records and school chums for 16-year-old Chris Evert, and no one realizes better than Chris that the fairy tale is ended.

"I won't get much attention back home," said the 16-year-old Chris Evert, a high school junior from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., facing the blinding lights and whirring cameras of a news conference Friday.

She had just lost a semi-final match in the United States Open tennis championships to Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., 6-3, 6-2, ending a skein of victories that covered 13 tournament and 46 matches.

Asked if the match with Billie Jean the toughest she had ever played, Chris looked blank a moment, then said:

"I don't know, Was it?"

"I guess so." Chris finally acknowledged.

"It [111]e Jean plays so strongly," Chris said. "She has great ground strokes and she can play net. Some of the others I played either didn't have good ground strokes or they were weak at the net.

"No, I wasn't angry, I was disappointed. I must go back to school now. I have two more tournaments this fall. I must play in them to keep my ranking."

Tennis buffs marvelled at the way this slip of a girl—105 pounds with a frugile, feminine quality about her—had completely captivated the National Championships.

"There were 13,647 in the stands," said Fred Podesta, promoter for Madison Square Garden. "I think she personally drew 8,500 of them. It's impossible to estimate what she has meant to this tournament—in money, $100,000 at least, probably more."

Fancy Footwork

Chris Evert, from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., does some fancy footwork as she returns the ball to Lesley Hunt of Australia during match in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, N.Y., Wednesday. Miss Evert went on to extend her winning streak to 46 matches by beating Lesley Hunt and moving up to the women's semi-finals. (AP Photo)

Dodgers Close Gap Fast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hank Aaron pounded his 40th homer of the season Friday night after a rain delay of two hours 19 minutes to give Atlanta Braves a 7-5 victory in 11 innings over the floundering San Francisco Giants.

The loss left Los Angeles Dodgers, who defeated San Diego Padres 6-3, only 3½ games ot of first place in the National League West, a spot held by San Francisco since April 12.

Just one week ago, the Giants held an 8½-game lead. But they have lost their last six games while the Dodgers have won their last five.

The Giants had a 5-4 lead in the top of the 11th when the rains came.

A rain-out would have washed at the Giants' lead, since the game would revert back to the last complete inning. But because of the contest's bearing on the pennant race, the umpires were determined to make every effort to get the game completed.

When play resumed after a wait of two hours, 19 minutes Atlanta won 7-5 on Hank Aaron's three-run homer. It was the ninth straight defeat for the Giants and cut their lead over Los Angeles to 3½ games in the National League West.

Before the rains came, Atlanta had men on first and second with no men out. Jerry Johnson was on the mound for the Giants.

After the rains finally stopped, Atlanta still had men on first and second with none out. And Johnson was still on the mound for the Giants.

When play finally resumed, Johnson fanned Ralph Garr. Then Aaron crushed his three-run homer. No. 632 of his career, to end the marathon, which lasted six hours from start to finish.

Aaron's home run set a major-league record by giving him seven seasons with 40 or more homers.

The surging Dodgers, meanwhile, pushed across four runs in the ninth to beat San Diego, with Maury Wills and Bobby Valentine batting in one apiece and Willie Davis driving home the final two.

The league's leading hitter, Joe Torre, got only one against the Cubs, but it came at the right time. His single in the 12th inning drove in Torre with a double for an insurance run.

Bailey Scuttles Pirates

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Bailey's run-scoring single in the 11th inning brought home Rusty Staub with the winning run as Montreal Expos zapped Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 in National League baseball play Friday night.

Bailey's single off losing pitcher Dave Giusti, 5-6, came after Staub and Bobby Wine had reached second and third.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the seventh inning when Bailey's throwing error allowed Roberto Clemente to score from third after Richie Hebner had beaten out an infield single.

But, Al Oliver led off the ninth inning, smacking his 18th homer of the season to tie the score at 2-2 and send the game into extra innings.

John Strohmayer, who came on in relief of Mike Marshall in the 11th, picked up the victory for the Expos. It was his seventh win in 32 decisions.

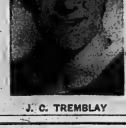
Panasiuk Wins Playoff



BARRIE (CP) — Bob Panasiuk of Windsor Hydeaway birdied the third extra hole to win the Ontario Professional Golfers' Association championship Friday, after shooting a three-under-par 69 to force a playoff with Moe Norman of Gail Haven, Gifford.

The two ended the 36-hole tournament deadlocked at 142 after Panasiuk shot a 69, lowest score of the day, and Norman came in with a 71 to match his previous day's score.

In the playoff, Norman threeputted the first hole after making sparkling shots to get to the green. Panasiuk hit into sand traps twice ad then made superb shots, one to gain a tie on the first extra hole and the second to within two feet of the pin to set up his winning birdie.

It was Panasiuk's first OPGA title and the win gave him first-prize money of $800.

fenceman Terry Harper and forward Peter Mahovlich unsigned. Both were expected to sign before the defending Stanley Cup champions open their pre-season training camp today.

TORONTO (CP) — With most of the teams in the National Hockey League opening training camps this weekend, Scotty Morrison, referee-in-chief for the league, said Friday he and his officials also will hold a training camp.

The camp starts Sunday at Brantford and ends Thursday, one day prior to the start of the exhibition season.

Under the supervision of Morrison and his three supervisors, Frank Udvari, Dutch van Delen and Dan McLeod, 42 officials, including—all NHL referees and linesmen, will undergo tests and training in preparation for the coming season.

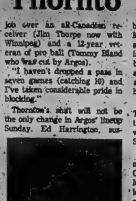
Argos Tomlin Trade Moves Thornto Back

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dick Thornton, a capable defensive back who has long aspired to play offence, got his chance this season when he beat out two top receivers with Toronto Argonauts.



But Sunday, when the Argonauts meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a return engagement at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium in an Eastern Football Conference game, Thornton will be returning to defence because of a trade the Argos made earlier in the week.

Toronto traded all-star cornerback Jim Tomlin to British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference for future considerations and Tomlin's place will be taken Sunday by the versatile Thornton, who in his 11 seasons in the Canadian Football League with Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Toronto has played mostly on defence.

In the other weekend game, Ottawa Rough Riders will be out to prove that their 46-17 whipping of Montreal Alouettes last Monday night was no fluke. The two teams play Saturday night in Montreal in a game to be televised on the CBC eastern network at 8 p.m.

Thornton's shift back to defence came after a seven-game stint as a wide receiver. However, he says he expects to play some offence too.

"I waited 10 years to play offence full-time," Thornton said. "I asked for the chance this year, got it, and then was too pended when he refused to play with a leg injury, will be in uniform. He is a defensive end but he also plays guard.

Wide receiver Jim Henderson, returned to the lineup after being a injury reserve list, will see action. To make room for Henderson, Gerry Sternberg was placed on waivers.

The Ticats also may make some lineup changes. Running back Dave Buchanan and Gene Moore have been working out since Thursday and one of them is expected to be signed. Import back Frank Quayne, who scored a touchdown in Hamilton's win against Argos on Labor Day, has been released.

The Ticats also have sprinter Tommie Smith in camp for a trial but it is not expected he will be available for the game Sunday.

However, Smith's track partner, U.S. Olympic star John Carlos, will be in the lineup for Montreal against Ottawa. Carlos, signed by the Als this week as a "non-import, had never played football in the U.S.

"Everybody knows he can run but who knows if he can catch, particularly in traffic," says Gotta. "And if our guys get to their quarterback the way they did here, (in Ottawa) he's not going to get too deep on us no matter how fast he runs."

"We've had good offences every game Duncan played," Gotta said. "We lost some of them because of individual mistakes but that has to end. With Duncan and no mistakes we'll move the ball."

Waterloo Defensive End Won't Hear All Excitement

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reg Owens is one of more than 600 young men who take to the field this weekend for opening action in the 1971 Canadian college football season, but the 6-foot-1 defensive end commands special attention.

He is deaf, but coach Wally Delahey of the University of Waterloo Warriors says he's amazed at Owens's ability to absorb instructions.

"He's a terrific lip-reader. If any team uses an open huddle with the quarterback facing the line of scrimmage, Reg has a good chance of identifying the play."

Although he is listed as backup offensive centre, the freshman mathematics student will play mostly on the defensive line where he is not so dependent on hearing verbal instructions from the quarterback.

The Warriors face their first test of the season today in Windsor against the Lancers, in one of six games which starts the Ontario Universities Athletic Association's first season.

Two other games today, Manitoba at Calgary and Alberta at British Columbia, open the Western association schedule.

The reformed Quebec University Athletic Association opens its season with one game next Saturday while the Atlantic Intercollegiate Athletic Association doesn't take to the field until Sept. 25.

The new OUAA and QUAA, formed after the old Ontario-Quebec, Ottawa-St. Lawrence and Ontario Intercollegiate athletic associations dissolved this year, will provide new rivalries in both conferences.

The OUAA's 12 members all get into action today and other games are York at Ottawa, Queen's at Laurentian in Sudbury, Toronto at Carleton, McMaster at Waterloo Lutheran and Guelph at Western in London.

Waterloo, Western and Windsor form the West Division of the OUAA Western Conference with Guelph, Waterloo Lutheran and McMaster in the Central Division.

The Eastern Conference has Carleton, Queen's and Toronto in the Capital Division with Laurentian, Ottawa and York in the Northern Division.

The Quebec association also has 12 members divided into blue and white divisions. The only Ontario member, Royal Military College of Kingston, joins the blue division along with McGill, Bishop's, University of Montreal, Sir George Williams and Loyola.

The white division has University of Sherbrooke, University of Quebec at Trois-Rivieres, Macdonald College, University of Quebec at Montreal and College Militaire Royal.

The Western Intercollegiate Athletic Association has five members in football action — Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Calgary and British Columbia.

All teams will be aiming for playoffs in mid-November and a chance at winning the national championship in the Canadian College Bowl in Toronto Nov. 20.

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Torchy Miller of Montreal held a slim lead over Barbara Simpson of Calgary going into the final event today in the Canadian equestrian team's Grand Prix jumping series.

After eight Grand Prix events across Canada this summer, Miller was in front with 156 points, followed by Miss Simpson with 154, Jim Elder of Aurora with 153 and Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont., 144.

brought a 781-pound bluefin to gaff following a three-hour battle Friday, raising Canada's points total to 1,972.

Teams are awarded one point for each pound of tuna landed. The team taking the largest number of fish gets a 250-point bonus, and another 250-point bonus goes to the team with the largest single fish.

The defending champion, United Sates, was in third with a 781-pound tuna, followed by Mexico with a 623-pounder.

Only the Italian team has failed to catch a tuna so far in the tournament.

Lions Shuffling For Stamp Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Another shuffled British Columbia Lions lineup will head into Western Football Conference play this weekend with a game against leading Calgary Stampeders at Vancouver's Empire Stadium Sunday.

Eagle Keys, who has coached the Lions to three wins in seven starts, has been juggling quarterbacks all week. He will hand said whether rookie Don Morehead or reactivated Tom Wilkinson will start against the Stampeders.

Don Jonas, leading Western Conference passer, will be at the controls for Winnipeg when the Blue Bombers entertain last place Edmonton Eskimos today.

Both Jonas and Wilkinson were cast off when Toronto Argonauts signed up their signal-calling team of Greg Barton and Joe Theismann. Jonas has been starting regularly for the Eskimos but Wilkinson has been sidelined all season with a shoulder injury.

Wilkinson says the shoulder has healed and "whatever pain there is I'm thinking about it."

But Keys could give the nod to Morehead. He was the team's most consistent quarterback in Lions' 35-14 loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders on Labor Day, "and maybe the other players will play better because Morehead's a rookie."

Three-year veteran Paul Brothers was released earlier this week.

B.C.'s newest acquisition is flanker Brian Kelley. Kelley, 6-foot-1 and 205 pounds, was claimed from Montreal Alouettes on waivers Friday after the Alouettes managed to sign United States world class sprinter John Carlos to a contract.

"Kelsey won't be doing much on Sunday because he won't have had time to pick up our system," said Keys. Lions released ex-Alouette defensive tackle Bruce Taupier to make room for Kelsey. Taupier was placed on waivers without right to recall.

Former Argonaut Jim Tomlin will enter the line-up as defensive back. Tomlin takes over from Wayne Matherne, who moves to offensive halfback.

Calgary, with a six-one record and a rock-hard defence that has buckled only once this season, will be going with a slightly limited version of the line-up that defeated Eskimos 23-7 in Calgary's last outing Labor Day.

Fullback Hugh McKinnis has a pinched nerve in his neck and will wear a neck-roll collar, while quarterback Jerry Keeling has been taking cortisone shots for a bad shoulder.

Rams On Rampage

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rampaging Scarborough Rams won their fifth game in six starts by blanking Peterborough Panthers 15-0 Friday night to solidify their position atop the east division of the Ontario Junior Football Conference with 10 points.

Lakeshore Bears won a second-place tie in the division by trouncing Oakville Oaks 32-25. Each has four points and Peterborough lags without a win in six starts.

In the west division, Hamilton Hurricanes beat Brantford Bisons 44-15 to go three points up on the Blazers in the standings, a point behind Burlington. Sarnia, with three points, is in the cellar.

Senior Saints' String Helped by Holdovers

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

When you've got the world on a string, there are a lot of people interested in snapping it. Quinte's senior Saints are currently working on a 14 game win string in Bay of Quinte regular season football action in addition to winning 34 of 36 conference bouts over the past six seasons.

Head coach Rick Locke will be the man most interested in keeping the string linked. A big factor in his favor will be the fact that 18 of 24 starters from the 1970 Bay of Quinte champions will be returning to action.

"I think that depth might be our biggest problem, particularly on the line," concedes Locke. "We can field 12 top ball players for sure, but since we like to go with 24 starters (offensive and defensive platoons) we could be a little thin in spots).

With the possibility of some players seeing two - way action, "at least in the big games," Locke is increasing conditioning as the Saints prepare for their opening game with Centre Hastings Sept. 11.

The Saints offensive coach Jack Sloan has to be more than a little pleased about the condition of his offensive backfield, with four of the five starters from last year's OSSA game returning to their regular posts.

Bartering fullback Paul Hall is expected, once again, to spearhead the Quinte ground attack. Hall will be joined in the twin fullback system by Bill Kirkham, while wingback Paul McQuaid will provide outside speed.

Handling the controls for his second season will be Rick Meagher one of the league's top pivots last season. Meagher's strong passing arm lends balance to the Quinte attack.

Locke's defensive squad will be sporting something old and something new this season. The "old" is expected to be the outstanding standout play of linebackers Wayne Harrison and Ken Yon. The "new" is a trio of top defensive backs. "You'd have to say that linebacker is probably our strong est spot, but this is the first time in years that we've had three first - rate defensive backs," says Locke who played that position at McMaster University.

Safety Terry Meagher will be flanked by Steve Nash, a standout with Quinte's senior basketball team, with the other spot still open to a number of promising candidates.

Locke isn't making any predictions for the upcoming year except that "it looks as though Moira could be the team to beat", but if the Saints do emerge with the Bay of Quinte championship there's a string that THEY'D really like to break.

In their last three COSSA appearances the Belleville school has lost every time, including a 1-0 cliff - hanger to Sir Thomas A. Stewart of Peterborough last season.

Carbide Could Stand Loss

Industrial Softball League champions Dukes Carbide didn't mind taking a Friday night exhibition loss on the chin — it was for a worthy cause.

A good Alemite turnout watched the Beleville shoot an 11-7 setback at the hands of Eldorado Combines. The games was a benefit contest for Ted Marshall, the Union Carbide player who was injured earlier this season.

Loser Ken Osborne only allowed five hits, but the visitors managed to put them together when it counted. Osborne struck out eight in the blistering game, and was the best for the losers at the plate, connecting for two doubles and a single.

Eldorado stranded only three baserunners, against six for the losers, and committed six errors, while there were eight Union Carbide bobbles afield.

Bayside Joins Junior Ranks

It will be "business as usual" for the Bay of Quinte COSSA football league... this season, with a junior exception.

The exception is the new Bayside Secondary School which will have a junior team entered in the league's western division. Also competing in the western section will be defending champion Quinte, league finalists from Trenton, Centennial and Centre Hastings.

Moira will be back attempting to defend its eastern division crown from Napanee, Picton and BCI.

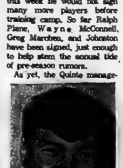
The teams will play a five-game schedule, meeting each team in their own division once, as well as two opponents from the opposite division. In the play-off setup the first place finishers in one section will meet the runners-up from the opposite division with the winners of these games clashing for the league championship.

The high school season will get under way Tuesday, September 21st.

Johnston Latest To Join Quintes

If Ray Johnston has had luck, most local senior hockey spectators would say he asks for it.

Johnston, one of the few players in organized sport you'll see flaunting superstition and wearing a sweater numbered 13, has signed for his third senior hockey season in Belleville, Quintes' manager Ken Murphy announced today.



The 22 - year - old Peterborough native dabbled down as a fine defensive hockey player last winter after breaking in with the Quintes in boisterous fashion the previous season.

But Johnston's 54 penalty minutes last season, fourth highest on the Belleville roster, bears witness to the fact he doesn't take many back seats.

Despite his defensive effectiveness, Johnston also found time for eight goals and 17 assists last winter, a 19-point increase over his first - year output.

Manager Murphy indicated this week he would not sign many more players before training camp. So far Ralph Pierce, Wayne McConnell, Greg Marchen, and Johnston have been signed, just enough to help bring the squad this of pre-season rumors.

As yet, the Quinte manage-

ment has not indicated where or when the 1971 training camp will take place. The earliest ice is available in Trenton or Belleville appears to be Sept. 22-25, two weeks before the Quintes open their 40-game schedule at home to Kingston Aces.

Some Saints!

They call them the Saints, but even in an inter-family feud things can get a little un-saintly. Quinte Secondary School defensive tackle Mike Whalen connects with an elbow smash to the jaw of teamate Rod Hinze, while Randy Van Norman evens things up by latching onto Whalen's sweater with an effective, but illegal block. Fellow lineman Greg White keeps an eye on the festivities as he assumes the role of ballcarrier for the drill. The Saints are hoping to repeat as Bay of Quinte champions for the third consecutive year.

Gordie Took off with the Tarts!

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The big guy lolling in the lounge chair shaded his eyes, and blinked into the afternoon sunshine.

The lush lawn of the well appointed cottage of the late Larry and Mrs. Eggert at Consecon was sprinkled with bathing - suited guests.

The big guy in the chair waved his glass at host Eggert and blinked "Cheers".

"Many of them Gordie," repeated Mr. Eggert. Co-hosts Truman and Audrey Cullen, daughter and son - in - law of the Eggerts, echoed the sentiment.

It was one of the many summer weekends some 15 years ago when the Eggerts hosted members of the Detroit Red Wings hockey club. Mr. Eggert was a wealthy Detroit business man, a dedicated down - to - earth Red Wings fan. He also entertained many Red Wings players and officials at a lovely home in Florida.

On this occasion, Howe, Kelly, Marty Pavelich, Johnny Wilson and Jolly Jack Adams, general manager of the Wings, and their ladies were the weekend guests.

Talking with a newspaper guest, the late Jack Adams who with Mrs. Adams hailed from Napanee, nodded at Howe, and said "That guy today is one of the best- and when-and-if he retires will be one of the greatest hockey players of all time.

"I told him," said Adams, "when I fond him playing goal for a Floral, Saskatchewan secondary school team, 'Son, you have a God-given talent. Use it but do not abuse it. And," he added "he has never abused it — and never will."

Marty Pavelich was the funny man of the weekend party. At 4 o'clock roast chicken dinner, Marty gave a comedic imitation of Henry VIII where to the over - the - shoulder bone-tossing bit.

Later, much later, on the lawn, Pavelich suddenly jumped to his feet and yelled: "Hey, we left Howe in the dining room with a dozen broken tarts. I'll fix him." He was back in a few minutes, shaking his head.

"Where's Gordie?" somebody asked.

"He's disappeared," said Marty. And added "So have the tarts."

Line Forms for Licence Plate

The last of three Belleville Fairgrounds motorcycle meets Sunday will represent the end of the licence plate lineup.

Top performers in Sunday's Stroker field in the Canadian Dirt Track Motorcycle Championships will be battling for the Number One Plate that goes to the top driver on this year's Canadian circuit.

Most of the points that decide the title will be scored in Sunday's expert final for 750 cc cycles, with defending champion Maurice "Moe" Fraser of Hamilton here to fight off the challenge of such top dirt - trackers as Michigan's "Corky" Keener, who beat Fraser in the Ontario Championships here in July.

Also entered in tomorrow's field is Jean Guy Bibeau, the newly - accredited Quebec expert who beat Fraser for the now - defunct national senior title in 1967.

There is an outside chance that former Canadian champion Yvon Duhamel could put in a Belleville appearance. Duhamel competed at a five-hour Mosport road race today as a member of Kawasaki's factory team, and could stop in Belleville en route back to Montreal.

Even without Duhamel, here will be no shortage of competition for the Number One plate. Fraser currently holds a 13-10 points edge over Keener and Sunday's 750 cc final could very well decide the crown.

Elimination heats for the $1,000 in prize money get under way at 2.30, following an hour of practice riding.

Proceeds from the races will be used by co-sponsoring city firefighters and the Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club for muscular dystrophy and under privileged children charities.

Balloon Is Going Up

This is one of three balloon launching stations located in Argentina as part of a joint French-U.S. meteorlogeal exploration program. The stations will launch some 500 - 12 foot instrument weather balloons and will transmit data to the Eole-1 satellite. Information gathered by the balloons, floating freely in the southern hemisphere, will add to a global effort aimed at increasing knowledge of the atmosphere. (CP Photo)

Hellyer Says Ottawa Liberals Too Slow, Remote, Insensitive

TORONTO (CP) — The federal Liberal party is "too slow, too remote and too insensitive," Paul Hellyer said Friday night.

The former cabinet minister was speaking to his riding association of Trinity for the first time since he quit the Liberal caucus to sit as an Independent Liberal last May.

Mr. Hellyer said the party was being led by fewer than five "cabinet ministers and half a dozen well-entrenched civil servants.

He told his audience of about 30 that he still is a Liberal, but, "I'm not sure the party is."

He could not continue in conscience to represent a working man's riding, he said, when his constituents were the first ones put out of work by the government's economic policies.

"I felt someone had to be spokesman for the people of Trinity riding and for the 20 to 25 per cent of Canadians trying to buck the system," he said.

Mr. Hellyer said the government has not grasped the fact that what it is doing to fight inflation is irrelevant and solutions that worked 40 years ago would not work today.

Mr. Hellyer, who founded Action Canada, a political pressure group, said the federal government now adheres to 20th century socialist philosophy and 18th century economic policies, "and that's the worst possible combination."

North Vietnam Hit by Floods

HONG KONG (Reuter) — North Vietnam's worst floods in 25 years threaten to undo much of the work done to rebuild the economy after three years of U.S. bombing.

The floods hit the thickly populated, rice-rich Red River Delta at a time when various sectors of North Vietnam's economy were just regaining production levels obtaining before the U.S. air war began in 1965.

Nova Scotia Group Afraid Oil Firms May Damage Isle

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia Resources Council is campaigning to gain protected status for Sable Island, a move that would curtail and possibly eliminate oil and gas exploration on the bleak sandbar 150 miles east of here.

Council chairman Dr. Benjamin Doane said Friday the council has received a "pretty strong commitment" from Environment Minister Jack Davis that the island will receive some type of protection. Mr. Davis has not spelled out what the protection would involve, he said, but if Sable is made a national park all exploration would be banned.

Dr. Doane said the council's main concern is not pollution, but the lack of control over vehicle traffic on the island.

"Mobil Oil has . . . apparently imposed their own restrictions over the activity of their crews with stronger prohibitions than were actually written into their lease for exploration," he said.

But the council says excessive traffic over the sand dunes could upset the delicate ecology. The sand dunes, if tampered with, could be blown away during severe winter gales and vegetation and wildlife could be destroyed.

Nixon Denies He Intends To Make School Aid Issue

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Press erroneously reported Thursday the Ontario Liberal party plans to make an election issue out of its belief that government aid to separate schools should be extended past Grade 10.

Party Leader Robert Nixon said Friday a CP story from Paris, Ont., "seriously misrepresented" the party position.

Mr. Nixon said the matter of extending aid past Grade 10 "must not be allowed to distort or distract from other substantial issues in Ontario."

"I did not say I will make this an election issue."

In a statement, he outlined the Liberal party's position:

"First: The Liberal party does not support grants to any private school system—only the extension of responsibility and grants to the democratically - elected separate school boards already established by constitution in Ontario.

"Second: Grants to assist in the purchase of textbooks and transportation should be available to students of all schools, as in several other provinces.

"Third: This matter must not be allowed to distort or distract from other substantial issues in Ontario. But the delay in Mr. Davis's decision not to extend grants after extending them from Grade 8 to the end of Grade 10 in 1964 has made this matter an issue of importance and sensitivity."

In his speech Thursday, Mr. Nixon said he personally believed the Liberal party position was right and "I am prepared to defend it in a campaign and implement it in government."

Second Cornwall Youth Says RCMP Tried to Frighten Him

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP investigation into complaints by alleged informers has spread to include a second Cornwall youth, Maurice Dupras, 17.

Deputy-Commissioner Geoffrey Martiner said Friday he has asked investigators to look into charges by Mr. Dupras that the force tried to intimidate him into becoming an informer on drug trafficking in the Cornwall area.

An inquiry has already been launched into statements by Robert Kadie, 21, of Cornwall that RCMP coerced him into becoming an informer when he was 18

New Democrat MP Frank Howard Skeens said his party will continue to press for a parliamentary inquiry into the allegations. It could be held behind closed doors to prevent vital police information getting to the underworld, he said.

School Bus Fight Probed

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — U.S. marshals, acting on the order of a federal judge, began an investigation today of local police enforcement of court-ordered school integration in Pontiac.

Judge Damon J. Keith of the U.S. district court Friday ordered Chief Marshal Anthony Roman to investigate the alleged failure of Pontiac police to halt disruption of pupil "busing" ordered by Keith as a means of achieving racial balance in Pontiac schools. Some 9,000 of the city's 24,000 public school pupils are being moved by bus.

The judge said that if the allegations are borne out, a large force of marshals will be sent in to make certain his integration order is enforced.

U.S. Labor And Nixon In Accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government and organized labor seem likely to agree on a national anti-inflation program after a meeting of top labor leaders and President Nixon.

George Meany, president of the powerful AFL-CIO, led six other union chiefs into a two-hour White House session Friday and came out to say "I told him Nixon, in effect, we would co-operate in any system that was equitable and fair."

"We were assured," said Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers of America, "that the president and his advisers will be giving serious consideration to the viewpoints expressed."

Elements of uncertainty over how the government and labor will finally stand probably will be resolved after Nixon meets next week with representatives of business, agriculture and the Congress.

500 Students Quit Classes

KINGSTON (CP) — About 500 students of Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute left classes Friday to protest loss of extra-curricular activities due to a contract dispute between teachers and the board of education.

Frontenac County secondary school teachers approved a work-to-rule program Thursday night to support demands for higher salaries. Withdrawal of voluntary services was part of that decision.

PROCLAMATION

"VOLUNTEER RECOGNITION WEEK"

WHEREAS: Belleville Voluntary agencies, public and private organizations depend heavily on the service rendered by volunteers of the community; and,

WHEREAS: Hundreds of men, women and young people give freely of their time working toward progress in human relations, health, education, recreation, community and environmental welfare, and many persons are also actively engaged as volunteers in planning and administration through board and committee membership; and;

WHEREAS: The strength of a democratic society may be measured by the extent of its citizen participation.

NOW THEREFORE, I, J. Russell Scott, Mayor of the City of Belleville, do hereby declare the week of September 12 - 18, 1971, as VOLUNTEER WEEK, and urge that the contributions of the citizens who are actively engaged in building a better community be acknowledged. I encourage all citizens to develop greater awareness, and keener understanding, to become better informed, and to move closer to the arena of activity so as to contribute toward constructive solutions, and ultimate progress in the community.

RUSSELL SCOTT, M.D., C.M., MAYOR.

Entertainment Briefs

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Steve McQueen, 41, was sued for divorce Friday by his wife of 14 years, Nelle Adams McQueen, a former actress.

Mrs. McQueen, 39, cited irreconcilable differences, the only causes needed under new California divorce laws, and said their marriage had broken up in June.

They were married in 1956 and have two children.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Director Franklin J. Schaffner and producer Joseph T. Nasr have formed a partnership to develop a film based on Paul Wellman's novel, A Dynasty of Western Outlaws, for Columbia pictures.

The film will disclose the actual bloodlines that existed between some of America's most legendary outlaws. It traces the reign of lawlessness from Jesse James to Pretty Boy Floyd.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Barbara Harris and Jack Lemmon will co-star in The Wer Between Men and Women, a Cinema Centre Films production. It is a contemporary comedy based on the book by Carmen Thurbey cartoons and stories. Miss Harris will portray a divorcee with children whose marriage to a bachelor cartoonist with failing vision, played by Lemmon, greatly changes his sour outlook on life, especially toward women, children and dogs.

Miss Bisset, who appeared in Airport and Greenkeeper, will play the role of a magazine reporter assigned to investigate the depth of the women's liberation movement. It will be filmed in Hollywood and Denver.

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington and 20 members of his band left from Kennedy International Airport Friday night for a world tour. Ellington will appear in the United States until Oct.13 under the cultural exchange program and then give seven performances in Europe and South America.

He will return to the United States Dec. 18.

St. Ola

ST. OLA — Mrs. Ruth Carol, Carlene Wyman and Pat Jonson enjoyed a week's vacation with relatives in Toronto and Sarnia.

Mrs. Charles Baker won eight first prizes, one second and one third prize for her exhibits at Cochill Fair.

Rev. John Hopkins, Cochill will return to his duties on Sunday September 12 at the Cochill-St. Ola United Church after a month's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Edwards returned to Hamilton on Sunday after a two weeks vacation with Mrs. Pearl Wood and boys.

Pier Angeli Found Dead At Home

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Pier Angeli, a delicate Italian beauty whose marriage woes sometimes overshadowed a promising acting career, was found dead Friday. She was 33.

Miss Angeli's body was found in her apartment by a drama coach who lived with her. Helena Sorrell told police Miss Angeli had been suffering from a stomach disorder and was being treated by a physician.

An autopsy was scheduled today to determine the cause of death.

Born Anna Maria Pierangeli on June 19, 1932, in Sardinia, the actress came to Hollywood in 1950 on a wave of European success in Tomorrow Is Too Late.

She was well-received in Hollywood with such films as The Light Touch, opposite Stewart Granger, The Silver Chalice with Paul Newman, The Devil Makes Three and A Story Of Lovers.

Miss Angeli married singer Vic Damone in 1954 and they bore one son. The marriage ended in divorce four years later.

The actress returned to Italy and in 1963 married conductor-composer Armando Trovajoli. They were divorced couple of years later. Friends said the breaking of her marriages deeply affected her.

Trouble Is Still Indicated By Economic Discomfort Index

The so-called discomfort index is something developed in the United States by Arthur Okun, a former member of the council of economic advisers, to show the combined impact of unemployment and inflation.

For Canada, this index rose to 9.2 in both 1969 and 1970, the highest it has been in the last 12 years since it peaked at 9.6 in 1958.

For the first half of this year, the index was 8.8, and indications are that it will require a sharp drop in unemployment or further marked scaling of the price surge to keep it below 9% for the whole of 1971.

Economists have long believed that there is a trade-off between high unemployment and rapidly rising prices. But their theory that a country shouldn't experience substantial inflation when there is substantional unemployment has been upset by recent experience in both Canada and the U.S.

The objective of economic policy in Canada has been to get unemployment down to between three and four per cent of the labor force, and not have prices rising much more than two per cent a year. This is the ideal advocated by the Economic Council of Canada.

Under the Okun discomfort index concept, this would mean Canada shouldn't have a combined index of unemployment and price rise of more than six in any year.

But the index has been more than that every year since 1957. Its best performance was in 1964 and 1965, when it was 6.4.

Last year, monthly unemployment figures averaged 5.9 per cent of the labor force, and there was a 2.3-per-cent increase in the consumer price index. This totalled to an economic discomfort index of 9.2.

A year earlier, unemployment averaged 4.7 per cent and consumer prices rose 4.5 per cent, again a discomfort index of 9.2.

But Canada's experience is better than the United States'. There the discomfort index mounted to 10.8 in 1970.

In the first six months of this year, unemployment in Canada averaged 6.3 per cent, topped in the last two decades only by the years 1960 and 1961 when the last long economic boom began.

With the latest blow to employment in Canada—the impact of President Nixon's 10-per-cent American import surcharge—forecasters don't expect enough improvement in the unemployment rate for the balance of 1971 to lower the 6.3 figure for the whole year.

And, latest indications are that consumer prices have started to rise again more rapidly, after the pace was slowed earlier this year. For six months this year, the price index went up as high—2.5 per cent—as it did for the whole of any year between 1958 and 1965.

Fresh reports on unemployment and consumer prices in August are scheduled to be released next Thursday by Statistics Canada, the federal government's central statistics bureau.

Friday Declines Cancel Stock Gains for Week

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets ended up almost unchanged this week, as sharp declines Friday cancelled small advances of earlier sessions.

Trading activity during the four-day week showed a sharp increase from last week. Markets were closed Monday, Labor Day.

It was the most active trading week since early July and observers said some investors returned to markets after waiting out August.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's Industrial index, a key indicator of market action, declined .12 on the week to 178.49.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index advanced .28 to 185.30.

Analysts attributed part of the buying strength early in the week to news last weekend of a United States administration decision against an excess-profits tax in the U.S.

Increased interest also was attributed to continuing enthusiasm for U.S. President Richard Nixon's economic program, announced Aug. 15.

Some observers anticipated that Mr. Nixon, in a speech to Congress Thursday, would announce economic developments that would buoy the market.

However, observers said it contained no surprises.

Mr. Nixon said the wage and price freeze announced last month would end Nov. 13. After the freeze, he said, there will be an unspecified system of wage and price stabilization.

After Mr. Nixon spoke Thursday, the Dow Jones average of key industrial issues slipped.

On the week, the Dow was down 1.68 points to 911.00.

Thursday, the Toronto exchange's western-oil index reached its highest level in about two years.

The steady advance was attributed in part to increased buying by U.S. investors of shares of Canadian resource concerns and to exemption of raw materials, such as gas and oil, from the U.S. additional import duty.

Base-metal issues dropped back a bit during the week and the Toronto exchange's index of these stocks was down .83 to 89.29.

The exchange's gold index slipped .49 to 174.06.

Hyperactive Child Requires Attention

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We have a 3-year-old boy who has been almost uncontrollable since about 2. He will not do anything we ask him to do.

He behaves badly. He throws things and talks back to us. When we tell him to do something, he tells us, "I'm not going to do it." We have tried making him go to his room and spanking him. Nothing helps.

I spend my whole day correcting him. He behaved badly when we go out. He yells and runs from us and throws toys in the stores. He is never still. He runs all the time and when standing he is jumping up and down, flinging his arms around.

We can't get him to sit still long enough to eat a meal. He jumps up and down out of his chair. If you correct him he says, "Don't tell me what to do." He throws his fork and spoon and has hit us.

We have done everything in our power to teach him to behave, but have failed. We are nearly sick with worry. Do you think it is advisable to give a child medicine to calm him down? We are afraid of this. — Mrs. J.

* * *

Comment: There has been much in the news lately about the problem of the overactive child. If you have read about it, you may recall that doctors are using special medicine to slow down the hyperactivity.

Your own doctor will know about it. Just how it works we do not know. We would expect it to overstimulate the patient, but it seems to calm the one who is already oversimulated.

I will not give you its name because self-treatment may aggravate the condition. As I said, let your child's doctor decide whether or not to use it.

Incidentally, has your boy been checked for possible brain damage? A consultation with a neurologist is in order. An electroencephalogram (EEG) may be necessary to determine whether or not brain waves are normal.

To sum up, Mrs. J., it is time for complete evaluation of the problem. With proper diagnosis and treatment, many patients like your son have shown great improvement. As many parents have sadly learned, spanking and other forms of punishment merely put off the day when the problem of the overactive child must be met head on.

For Mrs. D.: Since you are concerned about a "few spots" of vitiligo (smooth, light-colored patches), I think you will be interested in the following letter:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was especially interested in Mrs. V's letter in which she stated, "I am beginning to look like a clown." I have had vitiligo since the age of 3 and am now in my late 60's. I have it over my entire body. As I love to work in the yard, mowing, weeding and planting, I begin to tan in early spring. The white places become whiter and the other areas tan.

As a teenager I was conscious of my appearance, but now I take it with the proverbial grain of salt. I have been assured that it will not affect my general health.

My friends, relatives, husband and associates are used to my appearance. Very rarely is any comment made. I feel lucky that I do not have anything worse, and Mrs. V. should feel the same. — Mrs. R.

* * *

For Mrs. C.: I would not consider taking lemon juice in hot water every morning a bad habit, especially when it seems to promote bowel regularity.

As for preventing "rheumatism" that is something else again. For it, I have known some rheumatics who have felt better taking their daily quota of lemon juice in hot water. At least it is not harmful.

Convicts Attacked, Eight Hostages Die

Thirty Are Rescued As Rebels Crushed

ATTICA, N.Y. (CP) — Eight hostages were killed and 30 brought out alive today as police attacked rebellious convicts at Attica state prison, state police said.

At least four of the rescued hostages were seriously injured, officials said.

Police opened fire on the convicts while helicopters dropped tear gas as authorities moved in to break the four-day rebellion by 1,280 prisoners.

Police were backed up by National Guard troops brought secretly to the prison in western New York state.

There was no immediate word on whether any of the prisoners had been killed.

Police radio from inside the prison reported: "There have been homicides. There have been homicides."

Hundreds of New York state national guardsmen, wearing gas masks and carrying rifles, surrounded outside the prison wall as shots rang out inside and clouds of tear gas poured over the walls.

Reporters saw 23 of the 38 hostages who had been held by the prisoners come out the prison gate. Officials said four were seriously injured. There was no immediate word on the fate of the 15 others.

One of the hostages was clasped by his mother in a tearful embrace as he came out the gate.

Reporters tried to talk to him, but bystanders shouted: "Leave them alone! Leave them alone!"

From a helicopter circling over the prison, a loudspeaker told the prisoners: "Place your hands over your heads and surrender to the nearest police officer. You will not be harmed."

Three of the more than 500 state police who took part in the assault on the prison were taken away in ambulances, apparently injured.

The presence of the national guardsmen in the prison area had been a well-kept secret. They moved up to it at least 70 trucks and jeeps and were held in reserve outside the walls.

State Corrections Commissioner Russell G. Oswald said the decision to restore order by force was made with "extreme reluctance."

He said the situation was "seriously deteriorating" Sunday night. Prisoners were hoarding weapons, making booby-traps and setting up electrically-charged barricades and spreading gasoline, he said.

At 1 a.m. today, Oswald gave the prisoners an hour to release the hostages, but the ultimatum was ignored.

Oswald said the prisoners "callously herded eight hostages within our view with weapons at their throats."

Land Sale Report Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis says he expects to receive a full report later today from Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs, on the land dealings of Whiterock Estates Development Corp.

The premier said in an interview Sunday night he ordered Mr. Wishart to prepare the report after reading a copyrighted story in The Star Saturday, which said some purchasers of land from Whiterock in the Lindsay area had no clear title to their property.

Mr. Davis said he has little information on the issue to date.

"But some people are doing a little digging and very dilligently are coming up with out. If there is a problem, we'll fix it."

He said he had heard no complaints about Whiterock Estates in recent months.

Jack Wall, Whiterock's vice-president and sales director, said that all the company's deals were valid and he would hold a news conference later today to clarify the firm's position.

Meanwhile, Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales said in an interview his department has received no complaints from Whiterock customers that they didn't have clear titles to their land and wouldn't be able to resell it.

Mr. Bales said government authorities can't deal on the validity of land titles because there are too many individual complications involved.

"That is precisely why we have been warning people for some years now to retain solicitors to search titles for them when they are contemplating the buying of any property.

"The solicitors should also supervise all real estate transactions from the general inquiry level to the signing of any final and binding purchase agreements or completion of sales."

Mr. Bales said many transactions such as those of Whiterock Estates were agreements of sale, meaning the parties agreed to a down payment and fixed monthly payments for land.

"On arrangements such as that, you often can't get clear title to the land until the purchaser has full equity or, at least, until an agreement, in advance partial equity.

Six Euromart Finance Chiefs Study Money

BRUSSELS (AP) — The six Common Market finance ministers meet today to consider a proposal for reshaping the world monetary system in a way that would devalue the United States dollar, ultimately removing it from its leading role.

The meeting was called amid growing feelings within the European Economic Community that the system should be deutschmarked, meaning that it no longer would be based on any national currencies whether on the weakened U.S. dollar or the strengthened West German mark.

The ministers will attempt to fuse a single position for Wednesday's meeting in London of the Group of Ten leading industrial nations and the Sept. 27 meeting in Washington of the 118-member International Monetary Fund.

But because of basic difference between France and West Germany, there was little hope that agreement would be reached in today's session.

The ministers appeared to be looking beyond current differences toward the more distant goal of a new world monetary order.

Whiterock Will Sue

TORONTO (CP) — Whiterock Estates Development Corp. Ltd. announced today it is instituting a $26 million lawsuit against the Toronto Daily Star.

In a prepared statement, company President Gary Bloomstein said:

"Whiterock has instructed its solicitors to institute a court action against Toronto Daily Star for slander of title.

"Whiterock is claiming $25 million in general damages and a further sum of $1 million punitive or exemplary damages."

Legion Cornerstone Unveiled

Highlighting the official opening ceremonies of the Belleville Legion Branch 99 new hall, Judge J. R. Roche, Dominion president Royal Canadian Legion, right, assisted by building contractor Wieger DeJong, places cornerstone in the lobby of the one-quarter-million dollar structure.

Top Officers of Legion Here to Open New Hall

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville Legionaires opened their new Pinnacle St. building Saturday with a set of functions that lasted from late afternoon on into the evening.

Judge Redmond Roche of Montreal, Dominion President of the Royal Canadian Legion, officially laid the cornerstone of the $280,000 building at 4 p.m. Saturday to begin events.

He observed that many unemployed veterans had had an opportunity to work on the construction of the building.

"It has cost a great deal," he told Legionnaires, "but you have more in value in this city than money spent," he added, referring to united effort and co-operation in putting up the building. "By living up to our aims and objects we will be working for our community and our country," he told his comrades.

For the ribbon-cutting that officially opened the building, the scene shifted to the first floor, where Provincial President Donald Wilson did the honors.

Tours of the three floors of the building followed.

More than 375 people sat down at 6.30 p.m. for the opening dinner, when the head table guests included the Dominion and provincial presidents and their wives, federal, provincial and municipal representatives and officers of Branch 99 Branch 387 and the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Lieut.-Col. Angus Duffy was chairman for the dinner and program that followed.

Members of Legion Ladies' Auxiliaries from neighboring centres assisted in serving the dinner so that members of the Belleville Auxiliary could sit down for dinner with their husbands.

"Without the Ladies' Auxiliary I don't think we would have a Legion in Canada," he told them.

Before the opening, Mayor J. Russell Scott received Judge Roche and Mr. Wilson at city hall and invited the two distinguished visitors to sign the city guest book.

Japan, Canada Confer

TORONTO (CP) — Japan and Canada opened a closed-door meeting on co-operation today and heard a suggestion by the head of the Japanese delegation that the two countries form an alliance in the interests of free trade.

Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda told the brief opening session Canada and Japan are the "disciples of free trade in the face of emerging protectionism."

He said talks should naturally concern problems of mutual concern but should also embrace "world problems at large."

"The world is in an era of troubles of the greatest magnitude since the Second World War."

Mr. Fukuda did not elaborate on his reference to an alliance before the meeting concluded its formal opening ceremonies and then went into private discussions. The meetings last two days.

"The discussions we are to hold today and tomorrow will be wide-ranging and it is my hope that they will be productive and useful to both sides," he said.

Canadian spokesmen said it was taken for granted that recent U.S. economic moves, including a surcharge on imports, will be the prime discussion topic since both Canada and Japan are major exporting countries.

The Canadians were expected to press the Japanese to take necessary currency valuation action as a possible key to persuading the U.S. to repeal the import surcharge.

Tripartite Irish Meet In Danger

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government will go ahead today with arrangements for proposed talks between Northern Ireland, the Irish Republic and Britain amid speculation that Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic may withdraw before they have even started.

Lynch is reported perturbed by Northern Ireland's stipulation that neither the border separating Ulster from the Irish Republic nor the North's constitution will be discussed at the talks.

When Lynch accepted Britain's offer of a tripartite meeting Saturday he specified the talks would have no pre-conditions.

But Ulster Prime Minister Brian Faulkner made his position clear Sunday when he said that Northern Ireland will not be coerced and its constitution is not for sale.

Five Tropical Storms Slash Land and Ships

MIAMI (AP) — Edith, a deadly tropical storm that refuses to die, drifted 220 miles southeast of Brownsville, Tex., early today while younger sister Heidi barrelled up the Atlantic coastline.

As Edith and Heidi menaced the United States mainland, Hurricane Ginger slashed a path that endangered shipping in the Atlantic east of Bermuda, the remnants of tropical storm Fern were breaking up in the mountains of Mexico and a new tropical depression was moving toward Barbados at an 18 mile-an-hour clip.

Edith, which killed 22 persons in Nicaragua and Honduras when she passed through as a hurricane last Thursday, has been downgraded to a tropical storm with winds of 46 m.p.h. But the National Hurricane Centre in Miami said she is expected to strengthen as she headed northwest today at about 10 m.p.h.

The centre said Edith's path remained uncertain and interests in the west and central Gulf of Mexico were warned to remain alert in case she decided to head their way.

Tibetans Greet Trudeau

The 12 Tibetans brought here in June by the federal government met the Prime Minister Saturday as he was leaving Belleville. They garlanded him with scarves in the traditional Indian ceremony and Mr. Trudeau responded with the Indian gesture of greeting to the delight of the Tibetans. For story see Page 5.

Volunteer Instructor Keeps City Afloat

(Sept. 12 to 18 is Volunteer Recognition Week in Belleville. To highlight the immense scope of volunteer activities that keep community services running, The Intelligencer is bringing you the stories of people who have contributed their talents to others in the community. This is the second of a series.)

* * *

That's how long he has been involved in swimming and water safety — teaching people to swim and teaching swimmers how to instruct others.

Mr. Workman, principal of North Trenton Public School, is a qualified water safety instructor and one of the few Royal Lifesaving Society examiners in the district.

And all his extra-curricular has been done on a volunteer basis since he was a teenager.

Swimming instruction was a part-time job for Mr. Workman as a teenager and he has continued ever since, giving eight to 10 hours a week to the Red Cross swimming program sponsored by the Kiwanis of Quinte-Belleville at the Tops Motel during the winter. As well, he is an officer in the local branch of the Red Cross and its water safety committee chairman. In this capacity he acts as a clearing house for all local swimming programs, supervising pools at Ontario School for the Deaf and the Y and Kinsmen pools and handling all district records and awards.

Mr. Workman is incoming president of the Quinte-Belleville Kiwanis and for two years directed the community school program at Queen Victoria School in Belleville, where he was vice-principal. He put in about nine hours a week there in the evenings, and completed his degree work for a BA at the same time.

"I never had any trouble finding time for volunteer work," says Mr. Workman. "If people would make more efficient use of their time, I would find they have too time on their hands."

Why does he find so much time to keeping bodies buoyant in water? True, Mr. Workman loves to swim and, by the nature of his work, swimming instructor spends little time in the water. It's a lot of time standing at poolside. He even has to find more of that coincidental spare time for pleasure swimming and the workouts that keep him fit for water lifesaving and testing programs.

"It's a selfish reason," he says flatly. "I'm a water enthusiast by nature and I'm addicted to exercise."

Because of an inborn instinct for teaching, Mr. Workman pioneered the non-graded system of instruction long before it became "the thing to do" in the schools.

In teaching swimming the system works this way: Instead of his 13 instructors in the Kiwanis water program is responsible for a group of test items, instead of a group of children. Each child progress through the test items, from beginners' attempts to advanced technique, moving on to the next instructor when he or she has mastered all that the first has to teach him.

"If a child misses a few lessons through illness, he takes up again where he left off," says Mr. Workman. "He is always with others at his own level; there is no competition, except with himself. He has the benefit of the experience of various instructors as he puts in more and more time in the water and this way he gets more time in the water and less at poolside than by other methods."

And it works, because it has become very popular, especially among Belleville mothers that when all else fails, send him to Murray Workman and he can get the most water - shy youngster afloat in one lesson."

But besides the "immense joy", Mr. Workman gets from teaching swimming, he has a second reason for all the volunteer hours he puts in.

"It's part of my job as a teacher," he declares. "And you can print this: teachers should be more community minded, more involved."

"I'm disappointed that more teachers don't get involved in community work. They have the time. They should extend their work to the entire community."

Trudeau—

Respect for Individual Basic to Liberalism

The vital issue in Canadian Liberalism is respect for the individual's freedom of choice, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told a group of the party faithful gathered at the Four Seasons Hotel to meet him Saturday afternoon.

Before concluding his flying visit to Belleville Saturday, Mr. Trudeau spent a half hour with Liberal workers from Hastings and Prince Edward - Lennox ridings. He met with them in the Bell training school lounge in the north wing of the Four Seasons Hotel.

After leaving radio station CJBQ, where he appeared on the open line show, the prime minister went to the hotel for luncheon in a private suite, shared with only the party travelling with him from Ottawa. (After he had eaten (a steak) he made the rounds of party workers at the reception, signed autographs and gave a brief speech.

"The party needs dedicated and devoted people, people actively concerned with keeping Liberal values alive," said Mr. Trudeau. "The people's chosen values in the Liberals represent them better, and that will be true of the new waves of young people we want to attract," he added. "Liberalism means change by reliance on individual freedoms, rather than change by socialism that puts collectivism ahead of the individual."

"Things seem more disturbed in Canada than in the past," he went on. "But you only have to hear from abroad to realize how sane our values are now."

Speaking of the party sitting opposite him in the House, the prime minister told his listeners that "it is not so much an ideological opposition in parliament as an attempt by the opposition to channel dissent toward themselves.

"You can't please everyone, everywhere. It's a matter of priorities. Short term election means not only standing for your values, but fighting, talked by street and block by block."

Leaving the Bell lounge, Mr. Trudeau strolled to the north door of the hotel, down the outside steps and a few yards to his waiting helicopter, shaking hands with about 60 or 70 people lining the barricades to bid him farewell. Then in a whirlwind of dust and flying pebbles that accelerated the crowd in an instant, his helicopter took off across the bay toward the waiting crowds at Picton fair.

Convicts' Hostages Killed

"It became apparent to me that further delays would jeopardize the lives of hostages and would threaten the prison system of the state," Oswald said.

Lawyer William Kunstler, one of a group of outsiders called in at the prisoners' request to aid in the defense of the accused New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of ordering the Attica uprising quelled, and called it "a monstrous act."

"Officials never seem to learn that patience is a virtue and in this case would have been a life-saver," Kunstler said. "There was no reason for haste for negotiations if it took six months or a year."

Oswald delivered his ultimatum in a face-to-face confrontation with "Brother" Richard Clark, one of the convict leaders.

The written ultimatum said, in part:

"I am anxious to achieve a peaceful resolution of the situation . . . a resolution that seems to reconsider my earlier appeal that all hostages be released immediately unharmed and that you join with me in restoring order.

"I must have your reply to this urgent appeal within the hour. I hope and pray your answer will be affirmative."

Clark's only reply was that he would refer the ultimatum to "the people's central committee."

At least five of the hostages urged that full amnesty be given to their captors. One hostage expressed fears for his life.

A.D. Archibald

Retired Teacher's Rites Wednesday

Former teacher at Belleville Collegiate Institute and active in church work and many community organizations, Alexander Duff Archibald, 198 Dufferin Ave., died Sunday evening in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 82nd year.

Mr. Archibald commenced teaching at Belleville Collegiate in 1923 and retired at the school until 1956, when he retired.

Born at New Town, Nova Scotia, Mr. Archibald was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Archibald.

He was a veteran of World War I and received the Military Cross from King George V at Westminster Abbey and was twice mentioned in dispatches.

He enlisted in 1914 at Halifax with the Army Medical Corps, went overseas in 1915, joining the 85th Battalion of the Nova Scotia Highlanders and received his commission before going to the front.

He was wounded in 1918 shortly before the Armistice and was in hospital in England at Christie Street in Toronto before receiving his discharge in 1920.

Mr. Archibald was an active member of Tabernacle United Church where he was an elder and Sunday School superintendent for many years. Prior to the time that the John Street Church burned in 1937, he was active in that church.

He was chairman of the church administration board and was a former chairman of the local branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. He was a member of the War Amputations Board and was one of the pioneers of the students' lay foundation.

Mr. Archibald is survived by his wife, the former Mary Graham, two daughters, Mrs. Claude (L. Edith) Smith of North Hatley, Quebec, and Mrs. Robert D. (Jean) Boyce of Belleville; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Also surviving are a sister, Mrs. D. H. (Margaret) Gunn of Bannockburn and two brothers, Dr. R. E. Archibald of Melrose, Mass., and Ernest of New York City.

The funeral will be held Wednesday from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home where service by Rev. Leslie Dean will be conducted at 2 p.m. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery.

One Dead, One Missing On Weekend

FRANKFORD (Staff) — One man is dead following a single car accident in the area over the weekend and another, missing since Friday, is the object of a Provincial Police dragging operation of the Trent River today.

David Hamilton Barry of 139 Front St., Trenton, died Saturday evening when his car rolled out of control on a curve along a stretch of the Glen Miller Road.

Police said the 19-year old Mr. Barry was pronounced dead at the scene about three miles north of Highway 401.

At Frankford, Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police are using boom gun their second day of river dragging operations as part of their search for Robert Wayne Farland, 52, of Oshawa, formerly of Frankford.

Police began combing the river yesterday following reports that the missing man had been seen just north of the vehicular bridge here Friday afternoon.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away Sept. 13, 1969.
Sadly missed and always remembered
Though wherever our loved ones go,
There is a place in memory for you;
That you could ever be forgotten,
Is more than we can bear.
To lose you was the saddest thing,
That we could ever know;
May we then find our comfort,
In the love we used to show.
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Wife and Family.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to the relatives and friends for their many acts of kindness, cards and flowers received and for their many expressions of sympathy during my recent bereavement in the loss of my husband, Percy Parkin, the nurses of the V.O.N. and Dr. Ken Smith, Dr. Lloyd Ashley and their wonderful care and kindness. Also Rev. Leslie Dean for his comforting words. Thank you all from the bottom of my heart.
—Mrs. Annie Smith

I would like to extend my sincere thanks to all those who sent cards, flowers and visited me during my recent stay in hospital. Special thanks to Dr. Ken Smith and the nursing staff.
—Mrs. Edna Conaway

Well Known Educator To Rest at Marmora

MARMORA (Special — The man who became known as the bachelor who told parents how to bring up their children, Dr. Samuel Laycock, MA, MED, PhD, LLD died at his home in Vancouver, B.C. on Sunday, Sept. 5th in his 81st year.

The funeral for Dr. Laycock, who was born in Marmora Township and rose to become one of Canada's leading educators, will be held at the Howden Funeral Home on Tuesday, Sept. 14 at 1730 p.m. with the Rev. Peter Newberry of Alert Bay, B.C. officiating.

It is in accordance with Dr. Laycock's wishes that his body is being brought from Vancouver to Marmora for burial in the Laycock plot of Marmora Protestant Cemetery. He will be resting at the Howden Funeral Home from Sunday evening on.

Dr. Laycock was a member of the Saskatoon Masonic Lodge. A special Masonic service will be held at the Howden Funeral Home in Marmora at 7:00 p.m. on Monday evening, Sept. 13 under the auspices of Marmora Masonic Lodge 227.

Dr. Laycock was born to the late Ralph Laycock and the late Homer Minnie Grey. The family, which consisted of four boys and one sister, lived on the township road between Deloro and Marmora, the property now owned by George White.

He was the last remaining member of his family, his brothers Alex, William and Thomas and his sister, Mrs. F. Thompson (Jenny) having predeceased him.

Two sisters - in - law, Mrs. Thomas Laycock of Stirling and Mrs. William Laycock of Tofield, Alta., survive, as well as a few nieces and nephews scattered throughout Canada.

Dr. Laycock received his early education in Marmora, Madoc and Albert College in Belleville. He was always a brilliant student and at the age of 16 was studying and teaching Grade 8 with an eye to entering the ministry. He entered the University of Toronto and graduated with the degree of Doctor of Divinity but he never took charge of a church. Instead he went west and started teaching probationers at the College of Alberta in Edmonton.

In 1916, Samuel Laycock came east and enlisted as an army signalman and saw action as Passchendale. He stayed with the occupation forces for a short time and then returned to Canada.

Upon his return to Edmonton, he switched to studying and teaching psychology. He became dean emeritus of the College of Education at the University of Saskatchewan.

During his career, Dr. Laycock wrote 11 books and more than 700 articles for educational journals. He promoted the Home and School Association because he felt it was important for parents and teachers to work together for the mental health of children. He was a strong supporter of the Canadian Home and School movement for decades.

Even after retirement from that post in 1956, he continued to lecture at the University of British Columbia. At the request of then Premier T. C. Douglas spoke highly of Dr. Laycock's accomplishments.

In 1970 he was awarded the Medal of Service of the Order of Canada, for his work in the educational field.

Ed O'Connor, one of Marmora's dentists, who is still alert and active at the age of 86, remembers young Samuel Laycock quite well, having grown up across the road from the Laycock family. He and Dr. Laycock have kept in touch through the years and he received a visit from Dr. Laycock on his last trip east nearly three years ago.

In Centennial Year, 1967, on the morning that Mr. O'Connor received a letter from Dr. Laycock saying he had been awarded a Centennial Medal, he, himself received one in the mail.

It is rather unusual that two farm boys, who were born across the road from each other but who went different paths through life should be so honored.

WHAT IS A MISOCAPNIST?

You probably know a great many people who are misocapnists. So do most of several relatives are, as well as some very close friends. These days most people who are misocapnists do not hesitate to let you know about it. And with the aid of a misocapnist they will try to convert you to their way of thinking. For a misocapnist is a person who hates tobacco!

If you are a smoker but want to get started on a misocapnist career, we can give you some help. There are products available to get you over the first withdrawal hurdles. Of course, to be a true believer you also need some will power. But remember a misocapnist stands a better chance of living longer than a cigarette smoker.

Picton Fair Crowds Greet Prime Minister

PICTON (Staff) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau landed by helicopter at Picton Fairgrounds Saturday afternoon for a brief visit to the showcase of the garden county.

Hundreds of persons crowded the grounds to watch the prime minister step from the aircraft to be greeted by George Hess, MP, Prince Edward - Hastings.

The official party was also greeted by Prince Edward County warden Allan Anderson and Walter DeMille, president of the Prince Edward Agricultural Society.

Jostled by enthusiastic onlookers, Mr. Trudeau threaded his way from the field exhibit where his helicopter set down to a speakers' platform facing the grandstand. Here he was joined by Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman, Walter DeMille, Allan Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. George Cunningham, Liberal candidate Barry Young, Mr. and Mrs. George Hess, Bruce Price of Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. and Chris Lockyer, master of ceremonies for the addresses which followed.

A smiling Mr. Trudeau was presented with a copy of The County by warden Allen Anderson and also received a key to Picton as a welcoming gesture from Mayor Ackerman.

Bruce Price presented the prime minister with a painting by Prince Edward County artist Donald Dawson depicting a century - stone farm house. The painting was the winning entry in the 1967 "artist of the year award" sponsored annually by Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. and judged at the county fair.

"I came to talk with you, not to you," asserted Mr. Trudeau as he briefly thanked municipal officials and local, dignitaries for their presentations. He jokingly told county fair exhibitors he did not want his noisy helicopter to further postpone horse and pony classes being judged at the grandstand.

Before leaving the platform to take a seat in the grandstand to watch the horse judging the prime minister bestowed his "charisma kiss" on Colleen Anderson, daughter of Allan Anderson, as she presented him with a boutonniere.

An applauding audience urged him to similarly greet Mayor Margaret Ackerman which he did as cameras flashed and onlookers cheered.

After spending approximately 30 minutes watching Kingston show judge James Harvey place horses and ponies in their classes Mr. Trudeau crossed the infield to visit the County Centre and enjoy exhibits displayed there.

He paused once as his party moved toward the building to listen to the music of Prince Edward performer Jack Jones and his group, The Acoustics.

Mr. Jones sang a welcome song written for Mr. Trudeau's visit and a smiling prime minister heartily applauded the rollicking ballad which promised taxpayers would "foot the bill" for the tour of Picton fairgrounds.

As he moved among the people Mr. Trudeau reached to shake outstretched hands and warmly greeted onlookers. He even spared a wink for a freckle-faced ten-year-old who gazed rapidly at him as he passed.

The Trudeau visit, which lasted about an hour and a half, introduced Prince Edward residents first hand to the charm of Canada's colorful prime minister.

Family Honored For Participation

A unique ceremony took place Saturday night at the dinner marking the opening of the new Legion building.

The contribution of the former owner of the building was recognized by members of Royal Canadian Legion Branch 96, Branch 597 and the Ladies' Auxiliary, when the second floor room was officially named "The Holland Room".

Mrs. Irene Holland, whose family had owned a plumbing business on the site for 50 years before it was torn down and replaced by the new building, unveiled a plaques marking the room's name.

Provincial President Donald Wilson escorted Mrs. Holland to the plaque and assisted her with the unveiling. He commended Mrs. Holland and the Legion for their gesture of honor.

"Mrs. Holland, true to her family's record of devotion to the Legion, made her property available at a very attractive price," he observed.

Mrs. Holland's late husband was a veteran of World War I and a Legionnaire. One son died on active service in World War II and another son, also a veteran has died since.

With Mrs. Holland Saturday night to share with her the assembly's standing ovation were her two daughters, daughter - in - law and son-in-law.

Poles Victims

TWEED (Special) — Hydro poles took a beating over the weekend in centre Hastings, with two of them, one in Huntingdon township and one in Tweed, victims of cars.

A car driven by Edwin Lister, RR3, Frankford, was damaged to the extent of $800 when its radiator fan shot broke, it went out of control, and hit a hydro pole situated between Ivanhoe and West Huntington. No one was injured in the accident that occurred at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

John Hough, 21, of Toronto was charged with exceeding the speed limit after he broke a hydro pole at the crest of the Victoria Rd. South hill at 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

The driver and his passenger escaped injury but the car received $240 damages and the damage to the pole amounted to $175.

Purchasing Men Hear Professor

The Purchasing Management Association of Canada (Eastern Ontario District) held its opening fall meeting at the 401 Inn, Kingston, on September 8, 1971. Guest speaker was Professor C. A. Lawrence, Queen's University, School of Business.

Professor Lawrence outlined in his speech that purchasing groups may have to assess the impact of their products on the environment, while consumers would find it necessary to control their demands for goods causing the pollution problems. One particular area, he pointed out, was the disposal of solid refuse. Careful consideration must be made in future with regard to products, marketed and consumers' desires.

Trenton Police Helped Out

TRENTON (Staff) — Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said last week all available police force in force would be on duty for Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to the city Saturday, but it appears the same was also true of Trenton.

A late night call Friday to Trenton, police officials mobilized a small contingent of this town's police force to augment that of Belleville for VIP visit security.

In response to the Belleville call, Trenton sent two off-duty sergeants and three constables to the city's aid and when the Prime Minister arrived Trenton police uniforms were mingling with those of Belleville along the route.

Both Mayor Duncan McDonald and Trenton Police Commission chairman Hubert Campbell, indicated today that the town forces' participation in Trudeau security measures was good public relations and that Belleville people had helped the Trenton force whenever needed in the past.

Old Soldiers Never Die

Albert Glew of Belleville and J. L. Stevens, visiting here from Winnipeg, hoisted a draught beer together to open the new Legion lounge Saturday. Mr. Stevens, a veteran of three wars, was an officer of Valor Road Branch 101 in Winnipeg for many years and Mr. Glew is a former member of another Winnipeg branch. Mr. Stevens, who celebrated his 90th birthday a week ago, served overseas with the 8th Battalion in World War I.

Legionnaires Are Urged To Build for Future

Legionnaires here were urged Saturday to "get out into the community and become a vibrant part of the very fabric of Canadian life."

The Royal Canadian Legion is "too big and too vital a part of Canada to lock its doors," Judge Redmond Roche, Dominion President of the Legion said in a speech marking the opening dinner for Legionnaires and their ladies in the new building.

The average age of Legion members will increase, "and some of us will decline in vitality," said Judge Roche.

"By 1980 there will be one complete generation's gap between the Legion and our legislators in Toronto and Ottawa," he observed. "We need to infuse new blood and new ideas into our system. To be meaningful to the youth of our country we must be relevant to the 60 per cent of our population that is under 30."

The dominion president hailed some of the concerns of the age: breakdown in discipline, the permissive society, addiction, violence and the disenchantment of the young with university courses.

"This is the opportunity to ignite a torch that would provide a beacon to light the path to good citizenship," he told his comrades.

The need for the Legion, with its programs of care for veterans and their dependents, will continue until well into the 30th century, the president said.

He mentioned adequate allowances and better housing for the aging as priority items in the 1970s.

"If we are to remain effective, dramatic changes - are inevitable," said Judge Roche. "Re-organize now and launch this organization on another competent period of growth."

A Return to Basics

If there is dissatisfaction among the young with the way western society ticks, and with the way things are run, the adults who are caught up in it are often scarcely less bothered. For those who enjoy their work this is less of a problem; for those who do not, who are stuck with some dreary, monotonous, task, work is a drag.

Weekend Magazine looked at this problem a while ago in an issue entitled The Rat Race. In one segment a former Madison Avenue executive, a bright young man with the improbable name of Geronimo Yie, described how he cast off the shackles of a job in advertising, a $40,000 home, mortgages, three cars and living — like so many these days — grandly beyond his means — and took off with his wife and two small sons, toured the continent. They now live in splendid isolation and self-reliance, and on a modest income from writing and broadcasting, on Pender Island off the coast of British Columbia.

It was not an easy transition but the Yie family know it was worth it. One discovery was the fact that they can now rely totally on their own resources, are free not only of the relentless pressures and artificiality of big city life but also of the artificially-created debt resulting from having to keep up with their fellow cogs in the materialist machine.

Not everyone can extricate themselves in such fashion. Consider too the teenage society. Many, recognizing that this lifestyle is not for them, have gone to the other extreme; they have opted out of the work thing but in doing so have fallen prey to the perils of sloth, parasitism, permissiveness and of course drug abuse.

But there are other "squares" too, in the tradition of Geronimo Yie and his wife who are seeking a different way of life. Ken Wright, 36, for instance, and wife Kathy, 27, who were pictured recently in The Vancouver Sun en route from Thompson, Man., by bicycle, the first stage of a journey which will take them to Anahcim and Japan.

With the Wrights, as with the Yies, it is an attempt to get back to basics which so many of us have lost and for the most part, never to have restored again. The simple life, back to nature — but not copping out hippie style or letting go of fundamental values. An escape too from the government paternalism which Ottawa correspondent Richard Jackson has noted may take half and maybe more of our dollar earnings in welfarism in the years to come.

The Socialist Line

There is a long rambling letter in The St. Catharines Standard, from one John McMurray, who describes himself as organiser of the Young Socialists in the Niagara peninsula city, and he attacks the Waffle financial interests which have kept the English ruling circles in Ireland for the past 800 years."

McMurray says he worked in the Belfast linen mills and that the claims of most of them are owned by English gentlemen."

Actually most of them are owned by Irish gentlemen, as he terms them, and indeed they can fairly be termed gentlemen, in the true sense of that word and have provided work for many Irishmen, particularly in Northern Ireland where the bulk of the industry is concentrated.

Reading the leftist diatribe by the St. Catharines Young Socialist, his reference to the real enemy in Ulster as "the class enemy," his talk of an independent, socialist Ireland, his support of the godless organization that is the Irish Republican Army, make him and his followers blood brothers of the Maoists in Canada — the likes of Robert Cruise for instance — who have been busy trying to stir up support for the "revolution" in Canada, a campaign which, allied to the urban guerrilla movement in the United States aims at the overthrow of established order in this country, the creation of public disorder, and assassination of elected establishment figures, government leaders and the like.

Slow Down

A New Zealand government release says there has been a slowing down in the country's rate of population growth during the past five years. As of last March the population totalled 2,860,475; this represented an increase of 183,556 or 6.9 per cent since the 1966 census, but between 1961 and 1966 the percentage growth was 10.8. The main reason advanced for the slower growth was a drop in immigration. Females outnumbered males slightly while the Maori population continued to increase faster than the population as a whole and totalled

Keeping Up With the Chinese

Kosygin Visit One of Emerging Soviet Political Moves

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The announcement of a visit to Canada next month by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin is one of several major developments which are keeping the international diplomatic front in ferment.

Insofar as the Russians figure in them, these developments may form part of a single pattern which has taken shape largely as a result of the increasingly wide-ranging rivalry between Moscow and Peking for leadership of the Communist world.

The Russians themselves have apparently been trying to counter spectacular Chinese diplomatic moves with some attention-winning initiatives of their own, notably the projected visits to Canada and to such key European areas as Yugoslavia by their top political personalities.

The Russians are apprehensive about the continued flirtation of their maverick ally Rumania with Peking and they also consider it vital to mend fences in countries such as Yugoslavia, where a strong Chinese bid for favor can be expected.

With world leaders ranging from President Nixon to the Emperor of Ethiopia scheduled to visit China soon, the Russians have been noticeably active of late directing a carefully selected series of diplomatic smiles towards the West—though not necessarily towards Washington.

This policy is reflected as much in the new four-power agreement on Berlin as in the coming top-level visits to Canada and elsewhere.

Moreover, Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany has accepted a Soviet invitation and was swiftly singled out by China's (perhaps) European ally, Albania, as part of an alleged Russian plot against Peking and its friends.

For his part, Brandt has reactivated his policy of greater friendship towards Russia and Eastern Europe following the Berlin agreement.

Meanwhile the tough bargaining between West and East Germany to fill in the practical details of the agreement has begun and Heath seems so eager to the recent lull in dealings between the two parts of the once-united Reich.

Some West Berliners are skeptical about the significance of the four-power pact. Yet the Russians halt it as paving the way for the European security conference they have been seeking.

Moscow is pressing, too, for a world disarmament conference. Interest in an event of this kind was heightened by Canada's call for a nuclear test-ban treaty, even without provisions for on-site inspections.

But the Soviets are likely to have reasons other than those directly connected with East-West relations for their latest expressions of enthusiasm for disarmament conference ideas.

To previous Russian pressure for such a meeting in one form or another, Peking has replied with a refusal to participate.

Now the Russians are probably hoping to embarrass the Chinese by placing them in a position where Peking would again be caught responding in a negative way to what ostensibly would be an initiative favoring world peace.

Thus anyone trying to evaluate the latest developments in the diplomatic arena must bear in mind the rivalry between Russia and China along with world political factors which are more readily apparent.

She's A Whiz At Crosswords—Her Own

From The Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A 21-year-old Italian - born woman who says she has a "gift for words" uses it to create her own crossword puzzles — in five different languages.

Adriana Farina of Hamilton has created about 120 of them and has signed a two-year contract with an Italian magazine, Il Gazzettino, published in the Hamilton area, to supply it with puzzles in the Italian language. She plans to sell them in batches of 10 for $10 apiece.

"The puzzles are on general knowledge," she said in an interview Wednesday.

Adriana also composes simple crossword puzzles in French, Latin, Yugoslavian and English. She said she is fluent in Italian, English and French. She studied Latin in high school and is now learning Yugoslavian.

She tried to centre her English and French puzzles around a specific theme such as inventors' name and what they have discovered, or on fish or horses of the world.

Adriana, who was born in Trieste and came to Canada with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dante Farina, at the age of two, has been travelling around the province trying to interest newspapers in buying her puzzles. She hopes eventually to be able to syndicate them.

Not content with creating them in the usual form, she has also devised some in cubes and overlapping circles. The three-faced cube puzzle is ideal in a multi-ethnic community. It is really three puzzles in one, each in a different language.

"Words just seem to come out in a rush, you know, and I just write them down as fast as I can," she said. Then she works hours to get them to match up to the numbered squares vertically and horizontally. The shades in the squares at the ends of words or to separate words.

She got the idea for her inventors' puzzle when she looked into Canada's patent laws. She has also created humorous puzzles using simple jokes to give clues to the words.

Adriana, who completed one year of a general arts course at McMaster University and then quit two years ago, also writes poetry. She has written about 65 poems both in Italian and English but so far all of them are unpublished.

What do her parents, who are not crossword puzzle fans, think about her novel venture?

"They think it's another way out trip," she giggled.

Playing Politics

Windsor Star

The head-on discussions held by British Prime Minister Edward Heath and the prime minister of the Irish Republic, Jack Lynch, have done nothing to calm the bitter situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Lynch, in particular, is showing poor judgment. If his aim is aiding the cause of peace and bringing an end to the violence and brutality in the streets of Belfast and Londonderry, he hardly contributes to it by claiming to be the spokesman for the Catholics of Northern Ireland and calling for unified Ireland. He is meddling in the affairs of what is legally another country. Some might find it an incitement to foment violence.

Its effect is the same as that of African leaders urging Biafran rebels to continue their fight against Nigerian federation in the recent bloody conflicts. Or, similarly, its effect is the same as when Charles de Gaulle of France encouraged Quebecers to separate from Ottawa in creating a new Confederation by his shout of "Vive le Quebec libre!" from the Montreal City Hall.

Obviously Mr. Lynch derives much support in his own country for his tacit approval of the Northern Irish Catholics But such politicking cannot be justified against the mountain cost in lives of the conflict raging there.

U.S.—Wants Upward Revaluation of Japanese Currency

WASHINGTON (CP) — The current talks in a state department conference room between Japanese and American cabinet ministers are being viewed here as among the most crucial of the last three weeks for the long-term prospects of President Nixon's plans in a reform world trade and finance.

Given the wide gap between the positions of the two countries, it would take a miracle to produce anything like a firm agreement in only two days of talks before the Japanese move on to Ottawa for further discussions.

But few observers underestimate the importance of these meetings in making at least the vital first steps towards some kind of agreement that will relieve the pressure of Japanese competition on American domestic industry and foreign sales.

The United States has made it unmistakably clear that, whatever progress there is with other nations it is trying to straighten out, Japan is the chief target for the international measures announced by the president Aug. 16.

Japan, in the U.S. view, has a prime responsibility to help correct imbalances in world trade and monetary exchanges.

U.S. officials contend that by flooding foreign markets with the products of its low-paid workers and protected mills, while keeping prices down through an undervalued currency, Japan has contributed mightily to the current U.S. economic dilemma.

The U.S is aiming primarily at a major upward revaluation of the yen. It also wants Japan to open its home market wider to U.S.- exports and capital while cutting back on some of the export incentives and other help to Japanese industry which have contributed to Japan's astonishing growth.

Dodging questions about revaluation, Fukuda concentrated instead on the 10-per-cent additional levy the U.S. is imposing on dutiable imports, calling for an early end to the new tax lest both economic and political relations "deteriorate" between the two allies.

Already aggrieved and embarrassed that, despite extraordinarily close ties with the U.S., they were not consulted well beforehand on Nixon's Nixon's proposed visit to Peking or about the Nixon economic program, they have tended lately to look again at their whole relationship with the U.S.

Japanese spokesmen feel their position has been unfairly presented to the American public. They find U.S. explanations about U.S.-Japanese trade are grossly oversimplified and one-sided, if not downright misleading.

Their own economy has been winding down after its heated growth of recent years, and some of the economic problems which could be expected now in times of prosperity have emerged to plague them in these less-certain days.

There are shortages of labor and raw materials in Japan as well as serious problems with the environment. Foreign demands against the economy appear likely to increase, at a time when government there feels ready-taken pains.

As to balance of payments problems, the Japanese general objective is declined to ascribe any role of villain to the current strictly technical policies.

A Reprint of Fantasy From School Paper

DEAR READERS: If the column today is macabre or depressing, I apologize to those of you who look to me for a laugh. But I was deeply moved by a Kalamazoo teen-ager who asked me to reprint this fantasy which ap- peared in the Tiger Tattler the school paper of Lawrence.

Here it is. Title: In Love With Life — Or How It Would Be If I Were Killed in an Automobile Accident.

ANN LANDERS

Agony fills my mind. I am a statistic. When i first got here I felt very much alone. I was overwhelmed with grief and I expected to find sympathy.

I found no sympathy, I saw only thousands of others whose bodies were as badly mangled as mine. I was given a number and placed in a category. The category was called "Traffic Fatalities."

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheedled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive." When the 2:58 bell rang I threw my books in the locker. I was free until 8:48 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot — excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard a defening crash and felt a terrific jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened. It was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything. Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head. I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I have lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a c over. My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes — he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please — somebody — wake me up! Get me out of here. I can't bear to see my mom and dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can barely walk. My bro' er and sister are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze everyday. No one can believe this. And I can't believe it either.

Please don't bury me! I m not dead! I have a lot of living to do I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance. Please, God. I'm only 17.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Sweet Crisp Dill Pickle

By MARY MOORE

"For years I have had this recipe which came with this recommendation "best dills ever".

Because they took two weeks to finish, I have never had the inclination or time to test them until late August. They are a sweet crisp pickle with a dill flavor and easy to do although the time span is long. But can also be sure and admire then while they "work".

SWEET DILLS

(Approximately 7 pints)

6 qts. dill-size cucumbers

7 or 8 dill blossom heads

Grape and/or cherry leaves (optional)

3 cups salt — divided (see below)

20 cups cold water — divided (see below)

8 cups granulated sugar

4 cups white vinegar

1½ cups water

1 cup whole mixed pickling spices tied in bag

Scrub cucumbers under running water until clean.

In large pickle crock (or two medium) put one layer of cucumbers. Cover with one dill blossom head (and a grape leaf and a few cherry leaves if used). Continue this layering until all cucumbers are in crock. Dissolve 1 cup salt by stirring into 2 cups of cold water. Pour over cucumbers and add 12 more cups water. Cover with small plate, put clean stone on top to keep all cucumbers submerged. Let stand one week. A filmy scum will form on top but do not worry. After one week pour off brine, wash cucumbers under running water, return to crock and repeat the layering with same dill and leaves and cover with second amount brine, using up remaining listed salt and water, being sure again cucumbers are submerged for one more week. Drain and wash and scrub off any mould which may form on cucumbers. Cut each in four lengthwise.

In preserving kettle, combine sugar, vinegar, water and spices tied in bag. (J Cloth is excellent.) Bring to boil. Add quartered cucumbers and heat to just below boiling point. Remove spice bag. Pack pickles in sterile jars, pour solution over to cover and seal at once. Do not open for least one week.

NOTE: I had about 3 cups solution left over but that was better than running short. If you are thrifty it can be used for making French dressing or barbecued spareribs.

Highly recommended.

Successful Living

Rumors of Fiance's Past Threatens Happiness for Widow

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Have been employed as a housekeeper for a widower with three grown children. We have fallen in love and plan to be married. He has been wonderful to me. But recently I have been told some awful things about him.

People say he put his wife in the mental hospital. He would go on a drunk, never come home for meals and when he did come home would beat her up. He is supposed to be an alcoholic.

Why does he keep all this concealed from me? He could know that sooner or later I would find out. — Anxious

Dear Anxious: If the stories have the ring of truth, face him with them.

He may well be a reformed alcoholic, and he must should have to carry for life the stigma of past mistakes. If he has successfully given up drinking he deserves the right to a new and happier life.

If he confesses this freely and determines to stay dry, he should prize the loving, forgiving woman who, knowing all, takes him on for life.

If he badgies when you ask him, look a little farther before you leap.

• • •

Dear Doris: We are planning a trip to Scotland. Myself, husband and two sons will be staying with my husband's parents.

I would greatly appreciate any information on the proper etiquette when staying with relatives whom you are meeting for the first time. — Tripper.

Dear Tripper: For a start, I'd say:

1. Take a hostess' gift: a set of Canadian souvenir spoons or other item truly Canadian. Or buy something they need after you get there.

2. Carry your own weight helping with the dishes or other chores.

3. Encourage the boys to keep their room tidy, to run errands. If your hostess' cat needs washing — how about that?

4. When you have laundry to do, don't spread yourself all over the kitchen.

5. Provide some time periods when you are out from under foot. Do a little sightseeing on your own.

Would you like my leaflet "On Being A Good Guest" and the Air Canada booklet "For The Woman Who Is Going Places"? Send along 25 cents for each leaflet you would like, plus a seven-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am 17 years old and am not pretty. My problem is that I don't know what to say to a boy. I am a very quiet, shy person and get excited over little things.

How can I talk to any boy easily and know what and when to say things? Also, how can I get to talk to this certain boy without making him think I am either pushing myself on him or flirting?

No One To Ask

Dear No One: You don't have to be pretty to go over with the boys. All the surveys show that it is personality that counts, most. So that jumps one hurdle.

The tough part is to learn to relax and be yourself — without thinking of yourself! Getting involved in school activities is about as good a way as I know to be where the other boys and girls are and have things to talk about.

Don't make a dead set for the one boy who caught your eye; practice on all of them. There may be a hidden treasure among those not-so-glamorous lads.

My "Tips For Talking" are on their way to you. (And available to others who are finding it tough to get easy talk going. Send in 20 cents and a seven-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

• • •

Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Tweed Overcome

TWEED — Cayuga were down, but refused to be counted out of their Ontario Rural Softball Association final series with the Tweed Seven-Stoll hostess.

Tweed carried a 4-3 lead into the ninth inning Sunday needing the win to give them a two-game sweep of the series. Cayuga managed to rally for four runs in the final inning however, with a 6-4 victory.

Union Carbide employee Herb Hewitt (left) thought he'd taken top fishing honors for the weekend with his heavyweight muskellunge, but he couldn't shave Belleville barber Jim Stalker, who boated the twin brother to Hewitt's prize. Both muskies were landed just minutes apart in the Moira River Sunday night. Hewitt had help from fishing partner Dave Burrows to boat his muskie, while Garnet Adams looked after the netting duties for Stalker. Both anglers were using surface plugs to hook their best-ever catches.

Quinte Card Scratched Up

There were no Sherman tanks in the Corby Distilleries Stake at the Quinte Raceway Saturday night, but there were plenty of Sherman paceers.

Lindsay Driver Sherman Moore gained three-year-old Moorecastle Don to a first place finish in the $1,000 stake race, while stablemate Prince Jay managed a fourth-place finish.

Moorecastle Don turned in a winning time of 2:10.2 to best Jonnie Caper and Cakeys Juli. One of the pre-race favorites, Edgewood Sharon, owned and driven by Carl Payne of Elmira was a late scratch. A total of nine horses in the course of the night were scratched from the card.

Derek Newman's Wil Lee Ben turned in the fastest time of the night with a 2:08.2 effort for his fifth win of the season on the Belleville track.

Only One Note Sour

Ottawa Nepeans provided the only damp note on a successful awards day for the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association by handing the novice all-stars a 4-3 exhibition setback.

Costello (G), Oliver and Mike Gray scored for the Ottawa club, while Laurie Wilson and Ron Isaac replied for the local novices.

In a preview bout Dave McBride counted two goals to lead his Belleville squad to a 5-3 win over Cobourg. Ron Hand, Jeff Hutchings and Joey Bonnette tallied the other goals for the winners.

In a midget play Belleville took a 8-3 verdict from Cobourg with Rick Barbeau and Kerry Reid each scoring twice. Rounding out the winners total were Pete Cox, John Loder, Jim Scott, Reid Mallory and Rick Bell.

A midget house league team took, on the bantam all-stars bantams 3-1. Chris Kalsay scored twice for the midgets with single goals going to Bill Donald, Joe McMoon and Reid Mallory. Brent Walmsley counted two bantam goals with Roger Chapman getting the other.

Trophies were presented to the top players in each age division, while the crests for playoff champions will be given at a later date.

Root Right On

Entrants in Barcovan Golf Club's weekend mixed tournament were serious for at least half the time.

Nine holes of the competition were played on the Barcovan Club's regular nine, with entries playing the club's par-three layout in "donkey golf" style to complete their round.

Larry Root's 81 topped the male participants, Evelyn Webster took top women's honors.

Carleton Upsets Blues to Open College Grid Schedule

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Carleton University Ravens opened the Ontario Universities Athletic Association football season on a Saturday note Saturday with a 12-3 upset victory in Ottawa over University of Toronto Blues.

In other OUAA games Saturday, University of Ottawa Gee-Gees blanked York University Yeomen 21-0, University of Western Ontario Mustangs defeated University of Guelph 11-0, Waterloo Lutheran University humiliated McMaster 36-13, University of Windsor Lancers edged University of Waterloo Warriors 6-5 and Queen's Golden Gaels trounced Laurentian University in Sudbury 35-5.

For Ravens and Blues, it was a tight defensive battle and a scoreless first half before Carleton's Russ Field recovered a Toronto fumble on the Varsity four-yard line and went over for a touchdown for a 6-0 Carleton lead. Keith Gold converted.

Don Thomson of Toronto kicked a 25-yard field goal to reduce Ottawa's lead to 7-3 but Carleton added a safety and a four-yard field goal in the final quarter to make it 12-3.

In Kitchener, Waterloo Lutheran was paced to victory by Bill Hogan, who scored two touchdowns, one on a 65-yard pass and run play with quarterback Wayne Aitken in the last minute of play.

Other Waterloo touchdowns were scored by Ted Passmore, Tom Walker, and Jerry Blacker. Wally Parker added four converts.

McMaster also got points on a convert, a single and a 40-yard field goal by Ken Bean plus two points on a safety touch.

At Windsor, the University of Windsor Lancers turned a fourth-quarter fumble into the game's only touchdown.

Lancers recovered the fumble on the Waterloo Warriors six yard line and two plays later, quarterback Mike Urban ran around right end for the winning score.

Out West, the University of Calgary Dinosaurs held the defending Canadian champions Manitoba Bisons to 160 yards of offence Saturday and defeated them 15-1 in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Football opener for both clubs.

In Vancouver, the University of Alberta Golden Bears defeated the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 27-2. The score was 6-2 at the half but Alberta broke it open with two quick touchdowns in the second half.

Jonas Does Most Damage

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Blue Bombers have won three straight games for the first time since 1965 and have a share of second place in the Western Football Conference, but coach Jim Spavital says they still "can't afford to look past our noses."

"We're pleased to win," Spavital said after the Blue Bombers beat last - place Edmonton Eskimos 36-14 Saturday night.

"But we had some lapses and now we head into four games in 11 days."

Winnipeg's next game is Wednesday night against Calgary Stampeders, who dumped British Columbia Lions 25-10 Sunday to stay in first place six points ahead of Big Blue Bombers and Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Quarterback Don Jonas did most of the damage as Winnipeg beat the Eskimos trailing to the eighth defeat in nine games. Jonas had a touchdown and kicked three converts, two singles and a field goal.

Mack Herron and Jim Thorpe got the other touchdowns as the Bombers improved their record of second place WFC playoffs for the first time in five years.

The game may prove costly for Winnipeg. Defensive tackle Ted Richards suffered a fractured hip and may be lost to the club for the remainder of the season.

Dave Mims scored the other Calgary touchdown while Larry Robinson kicked a field goal and three converts and pla...er Bill Van Burkleo contributed a single.

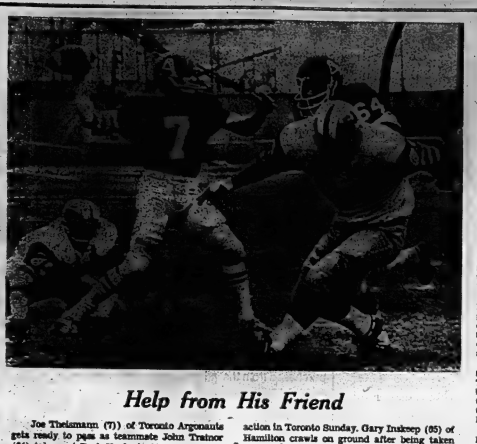
B.C. started the game with rookie Don Moorhead calling signals, but switched in the second quarter to Tom Wilkinson, who made 42 of 69 on the day's list.

Calgary dominated the game on the ground, stacking for 264 yards to B.C.'s 65. Mims had 97 yards on 18 carries and Hugh McKenzie 94 on 16.



In the air, the Lions collected 241 yards as Wilkinson completed 11 of 19 passes and Jim Young for 168 yards.

Keeling and Lindsey completed 12 of 26 passes, including Lindsey's 47-yard pass-and-run toss to Mims for the game's first touchdown.

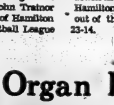
Gets All Rider Points

Ottawa's Organ Plays Solo

Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders scored all the points Saturday night in his team's 36-4 loss to Montreal Alouettes to maintain his lead in Eastern Football Conference scoring.



The flat kicker booted two field goals, his seventh and eighth of the season—and the points increased his total to 51. He has also scored a touchdown and kicked 17 converts and four singles.

Running back Leon McQuay of Toronto Argonauts, held scoreless in his last three games, broke loose for a 64-yard touchdown run against Hamilton Tiger-Cats Sunday. The touchdown, his seventh of the season, gave him 42 points and tied him with kicker and team-mate Ivan MacMillan for second place. MacMillan kicked three converts.

Tommy Joe Coffey, Hamilton's offensive—and place-kicker, kicked two converts in his team's 23-14 loss to Toronto to remain in fourth place with 36 points.

Barton Primary Target For Rock-ribbed Ticats

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Hamilton Tiger-Cat football club has long been noted for its rock-ribbed defence, and now Toronto quarterback Greg Barton has the marks to prove it.

The Argonauts won a 23-14 decision over the Tiger-Cats in an Eastern Football Conference game in Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition Stadium Sunday, but Barton had praise for the Ticat defence.

"They're a tough team," said Barton, who was left with bleeding lips and several loose teeth from the relentless pounding of the Hamilton defensive corps. "That defence is good."

In another EFC game, Ottawa Rough Riders scored six early points on two field goals Saturday night but the Montreal defence held and Alouettes went on to defeat Riders 35-6 in Montreal.

The Ticats were reported affronted when Joe Theismann, Toronto's other quarterback, blamed his poor passing and not the Hamilton defence for Toronto's 30-17 loss to Ticats on Labor Day.

So on Sunday a pugnacious Hamilton defence came into the game apparently bent on making Theismann eat his words. They mauled and clawed Theismann and Barton, but a weak offensive team spoiled the effort.

The Hamilton defence was responsible for both Ticats' touchdowns. In the first quarter Garney Henley intercepted Theismann's first pass of the game at the Toronto 17-yard line, and on the next play quarterback Joe Zuger passed to Gord Christian in the end zone.

Hamilton's other touchdown came early in the fourth quarter when linebacker Emery Hicks, a newcomer, tackled Theismann in the end zone and recovered the fumble. Tommy Joe Coffey converted both touchdowns.

Wide receiver Jim Henderson, playing his first game for Argos after coming off the injury list, scored two touchdowns for Toronto. His first came on his first catch, an 11-yard pass from Barton late in the first quarter, and the second in the second quarter on a 13-yard toss.

Halfback Leon McQuay raced 64 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter and Ivan MacMillan kicked three converts. The other two points came on a safety touch.

The robust Hamilton defence took 13 penalties for 138 yards, including six penalties for unnecessary roughness. Ticats took nine penalties before Argonauts got one.

Hamilton's offence was an incredible 75 yards, while Toronto's was 295. McQuay was top Argo with 105 yards rushing on 14 carries and four pass receptions for 49 yards.

For Hamilton, Zuger completed 16 of 19 passes for 156 yards and had one intercepted. Wally Gabler, the other Ticat quarterback, completed one pass for 12 yards and had two intercepted.

Theismann was good on three of eight passes for 64 yards for Argos, with one interception, and Barton completed 12 of 15 for 88 yards and one interception.

Alouettes, after spotting Rough Riders a 6-0 lead on Gerry Organ's two field goals in the opening quarter, dominated play although they lost three of four fumbles and gave up three pass interceptions.

After Organ's second field goal, Montreal quarterback Sonny Wade led a 75-yard touchdown march which culminated with Bruce Van Ness scoring from four yards out.

Wade, who completed 16 of 31 passes, also threw a nine-yard touchdown pass to Terry Evanshen and one of three yards to Tom Pullen. Justin Canale converted two of three touchdowns and kicked a 48-yard field goal and a single on a missed field goal. Bill Mazey kicked the other convert after Canale was bothered by a right knee in the fourth quarter.

The game saw the debut of former U.S. track star John Carlos, who caught two passes for 17 yards playing flanker.

"I'm going to break him in slowly," said coach Sam Etcheverry of the American who is listed in the Canadian Football League as a non-import because he never played organized ball in the U.S. "He's eager . . . and he's not afraid to run into people and block them."

Montreal had 34 first downs compared with four for Ottawa.

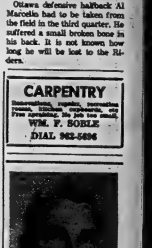
Montreal had 34 first downs compared with four for Ottawa.



Ala had 157 yards rushing and 223 passing and a net offence of 380 yards.

Riders could muster only 96 yards, 50 yards rushing and 36 passing. Quarterbacks Rick Cassata, who started the game, and Gary Wood were thrown for a total of 39 yards in losses.

Ottawa coach Jack Gotta described the play of his team as "horrible."

Ottawa defensive halfback Al Marcella had to be taken from the field in the third quarter. He suffered a small broken bone in his back. It is not known how long he will be lost to the Riders.

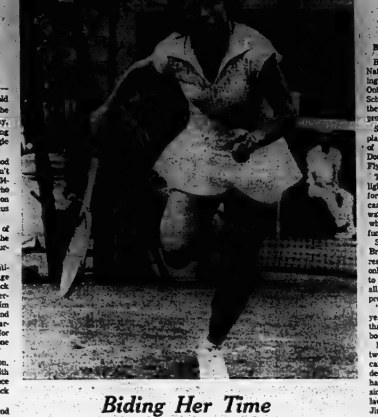
Coody Claims Crown

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Charles Coody, who had to hold off Jack Nicklaus to win the World Series of Golf Sunday, was talking about the shocking loss of four strokes on a single hole.

"It wasn't feeling too good when it was over and I wasn't thinking good," said the 34-year-old Masters champion who shot a seventy, two over par, on the second hole while Nicklaus made an eagle three.

"That gave Nicklaus a share of top spot in the chase for the $50,000 first prize in this four-man tournament.



But Nicklaus, playing erratically, couldn't take advantage of his opportunity, handed back the lead with a string of over-par holes and let Coody claim his second title of the year and third of his seven-year pro career with a three-over-par 73 for 141 on the 7,180 yard Firestone Country Club course.

Nicklaus, the PGA champion, was next with a 71 for 142 with Australian veteran Bruce Crampton one more stroke back at 143 after a final 70.

Nicklaus picked up $18,000 for second, pushing his career earnings from this course alone to $303,750.

In Cy Young Running

Top Pitchers Won't Knock Wood

The American League's Cy Young sweepstakes now is a three-way affair—and nobody is knocking Wood.

Wilbur Wood, the veteran knuckleballing reliever-turned-starter who has been the mainstay of Chicago White Sox pitching staff this season, became the American League's third 20-game winner of 1971 Sunday by five-hitting Kansas City Royals 3-0.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit trimmed Boston Red Sox 3-2, Cleveland Indians beat New York Yankees 5-2 and Milwaukee Brewers downed California Angels 4-3. The doubleheader between Washington Senators and Baltimore Orioles was rained out.

The shutout by Wood, 20-11, lowered his earned-run-average to 1.97 over 292 innings pitched.

By comparison, Mickey Lolich of Detroit Tigers has a better record—23-11—and has pitched more innings—333—but has a much higher ERA, 3.05.

And then there is Vida Blue who started for Oakland Gunslingers, gave up five runs in eight innings and was not involved in the decision as Minnesota Twins defeated the Athletics 7-5 in 10 innings.

On statistics alone, Blue would have the award locked up. He has the best record of the trio, 23-8; the lowest earned-run average, 1.80 over 255 innings; and the most strikeouts, 291, high in the majors.

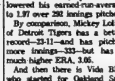
But he has not won a game in September, has lost four of his last five decisions and has compiled only a mediocre 6-6 record since the All-Star game.

All of which leaves Wood as a legitimate contender for the honor as the American League's outstanding pitcher.

Wood, a relief pitcher until this season, was turned into a starter by Chuck Tanner, who is in his first full year as manager.

"At first I was reluctant about coming out of the bullpen," Wood declared. "I had been quite successful over the last three or four years in the bullpen, but Chuck is the boss, so I went along with the starting deal 100 per cent."

"Winning 19 isn't too far away from winning 20—but 30 is 10 times better," he added.



"I feel physically hurt," Blue moaned, after going eight innings against the Twins. "My body is tired, not my arm. I feel I can go a strong six innings, but that's about all."

Oakland manager Dick Williams said if Blue was leading in the fifth or sixth inning of his next start he would take his ace out for a rest, but made no mention of changing his pitching rotation.

Wood was not the only pitching star in the American League Sunday. Detroit starter Tom Timmerman, 6-5, pitched one-hit ball over the final 5 1-3 innings as the Tigers edged Boston. Home runs by Tony Taylor and Al Kalie accounted for the Detroit scoring.

Two home runs by Craig Nettles and one by Roy Foster provided the batting support for Cleveland's Sam McDowell, 12-14.

A three-run outburst in the sixth inning, plus clutch relief pitching by Ken Sanders, who came on to relieve Marty Pattin in the eighth and recorded his 32th save of the season, highlighted Milwaukee's triumph.

Bruins Out to Prove Point; Parent, Favell Skip Camp

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins opened their National Hockey League training camp Sunday in London, Ont. and general manager Milt Schmidt says the players feel they have "something to prove."

So apparently do two other players, goalies Bernie Parent of Toronto Maple Leafs and Doug Favell of Philadelphia Flyers.

The powerful Bruins had a light skating workout Sunday for 39 players in the main camp. The only player missing was defenceman Dallas Smith, who had permission to attend a funeral.

Schmidt, referring to the Bruins' playoff defeat by Montreal Canadiens, said: "It's not only my thoughts but in talking to the players themselves they all feel we have something to prove.

"Maybe getting whacked last year could be the best thing that happened to us. We had nobody to blame but ourselves."

Parent was missing the first two days of Toronto's training camp at the Maple Leaf Gardens and may be suspended. He has not been seen by Leafs since Thursday when he and his lawyer told general manager Jim Gregory he wasn't to negotiate his contract. The 26-year-old goalie, acquired from the Flyers last season, is in the third year of a three-year contract.

"I'm looking for him to call," Gregory said Sunday. "Why should I go looking for him? He's broken his contract and unless I hear from him and he has a good story, I'll have no choice but to suspend him."

Parent's former partner in goal in Philadelphia is missing from the Flyers' camp in Ottawa. Favell and the Flyers took their contract dispute to Ed Houston, the NHL arbiter, but Favell refused to accept Houston's arbitration.

The only other player missing in the Flyers' camp was centre Bobby Clarke, leading team scorer last year, who is in Philadelphia for surgery on an abscessed tooth.

Most of the 14 NHL teams now are in training camp and when Chicago Black Hawks and Pittsburgh Penguins start today, the whole league will be in training.

The first exhibition games will be played Friday when Philadelphia takes on St. Louis Blues at Flint, Mich., Oshawa Golden Seals play Pittsburgh Penguins at Brantford, Ont., and New York Rangers meet the Bruins at London.

Richard New Hab Captain?

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens opened their National Hockey League training camp Saturday at the Forum with 51 prospects in tow and all of last spring's Stanley Cup championship squad regulars signed.

New coach Scotty Bowman put the players through a scrimmage Sunday morning and line drills in the afternoon workout.

He was impressed with the play of rookie Guy Lafleur, who led Quebec Remparts to the Memorial Cup championship last spring.

"Lafleur said he was nervous and had a bit of a cold but he still looked good," Bowman said. "I know he played a lot right wing as a junior but there's a big opening at centre without Jean Beliveau."

Beliveau's place as captain will probably be taken by veteran centre Henri Richard, who typified most of the regulars by reporting at less than his playing weight.

One who did not was spunky Rejean Houle who apparently did what he promised last spring after the Canadiens won the Stanley Cup. Houle promised to gain some weight and he did—18 pounds.

Bowman was not annoyed, saying Houle could probably stand a few more pounds to fill out his five-foot, 11-inch frame.

HENRI RICHARD

Defencemen Jean-Claude Tremblay, Guy Lapointe and Pierre Bouchard all reported with a little more than last year but it was in the shape of muscles and sideburns.

"I don't intend to change the human equation—at least at training camp," said Bowman obviously more concerned with the condition of his charges than their mod looks.

"I'm really pleased the way the players accepted my request that they report in shape," he said.

Serve Savard, hoping to make a comeback from the second fracture of his left leg in two years, was the first man on the ice Saturday after the team went through stiff army-like medical examinations.

Savard won the Conn Smythe trophy in 1969 as the most outstanding player in that year's Stanley Cup championship. Bowman said he plans to work the lanky defenceman back into the lineup slowly.

Only Winning Counts

"It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game," the old saying goes—but don't tell that to San Francisco Giants, Los Angeles Dodgers, Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals.

Winning is the only thing on the minds of the four National League teams—and winning is what they did Sunday, keeping a couple of divisional races as tight as when the day's play began.

The Giants, snapping out of a seven-game tailspin, struck fast to beat Atlanta Braves 6-1 and retain their meagre three-game lead in the West Division over the charging Dodgers, who won their sixth in a row with a 6-3 victory over San Diego Padres.

In the East Division, Nelson Briles held Montreal to six hits and blanked the Expos 4-0 to keep the Pirates 5½ games ahead of St. Louis, which got a four-hit shutout from Bob Gibson for a 4-0 triumph over Chicago Cubs.

"I think we're back on the track, too," said Bobby Bonds, who helped get the Giants going with his 29th homer, a two-run shot in their four-run first against the Braves, then added a run-scoring double in the ninth.

Bill Sudakis drilled a pinch double in the fifth inning that cut the Padres' 3-0 lead to one run, then the Dodgers erupted for four runs in the seventh for the victory.

The Pirates gave Briles the only run he needed in first inning as rookie Rennie Stennett doubled and scored on Bob Robertson's single. Robertson also scored in the fourth and singled in another run in the eighth giving Pittsburgh the finals of their three-game set against the Expos.

Briles' win, his seventh in 10 decisions, spoiled what started out to be a good day for Mauch. The Montreal manager had his contract renewed through to the 1973 season, Originally his agreement was to run until 1972.

The Expos have won 63 games so far this season and are in fifth place in the National League's East Division. In 1970, they won 73 games and two

Sehl Surprise To Both Fans And Foes

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

The Waterdown, Ont., rider who, along with older brother Dave has been doing most of his racing on the more lucrative United States circuit, surprised the Belleville race organizers by showing up and brought the overflow grandstand crowd to its feet with a daredevil performance that won him the expert 750 cc class.

Sehl, only 22, virtually clinched the Number One Plate as top rider on the Canadian dirt track circuit with his eight - point Belleville outing — six for winning the expert open race, and another two for a third-place finish in the 250 cc final.

Until a week ago, the race for top honors looked like a two-sider deal between defending champion Maurice "Moe" Fraser of Hamilton and Flint, Michigan speedster Cliff "Corky" Keener. Fraser had 13 points, Keener, who won the Ontario title in Belleville July 4, had accumulated 10, and nobody even noticed Sehl well down the list with a measly three.

"I really cleaned up at Quebec last weekend," Sehl beamed after Sunday's nationals. "I won everything at Three Rivers and Drummondville and picked up 13 points.

"This is only about my fifth race since I got back," he added, referring to the broken wrist that sidelined him for six weeks.

Sehl's main opposition was provided by the bespectacled "Corky" Keener, who won every heat he raced at the July 4 Ontario championships in Belleville to take both 250 and 750 expert classes.

For the first two 10-lap heats Sunday, it appeared the Michigan rider was going to make it another one - sided day at Belleville racing. Keener won both ahead of Sehl, the semi-final by no more than two wheel widths.

"We were touching tires in the corners," Sehl said in the pits.

In the final, Keener again moved his Triumph out in front of the pack, but this time was overhauled after five laps by Sehl, who widened his lead by the finish to 60 yards over Michigander Charlie Chapple and Keener.

In the process, he set a 10-lap track record, touring the half - mile oval in 4:48, or an average of 25.6 - second laps. Kehl matched the single - lap record of 37 seconds three times en route to his win.

Sehl's win before more than 2,000 spectators climaxed a Canadian sweep of the four final events as the homebrews withstood the challenge of 16 United States riders.

First - year expert Dave McLean of Valcourt, Quebec pulled off a big upset in the 250 cc final, beating Keener and Sehl to the wire with room to spare. McLean punished his Spanish Bultaco to a winning 3:59 ride in the eight lap windup.

Hamilton's "Moe" Fraser saw his chances for a repeat Number One plate go up in cinders when he finished well back in the 250 cc pack, and failed to finish the 750 final.

Nick Hapka of Denfield, Ont. was the top performer in a packed junior field which saw 14 machines go in one heat. Hapka drove his German Maico to a first in the 250 cc final, clocking 4:16 for the eight laps.

Hapka was second in the junior 500 cc final, won by Val d'Ors Yvan Duval in 4:12.3 on a Jawa.

Sunday's attendance, almost as large as that of the first two summer races here combined, enabled the sponsoring city firefighters and Pinton Brothers Motorcycle Club to pay $1,200 in prize money, with Sehl taking home upwards of $200.

A donation of $500 will be split between the firemen's muscular dystrophy and under privileged children charities.

Best Team Cards 60

With a born Lietzer on your team it's only natural that you'd list, or rather lead the golfing parade.

That's just what the team of Don Lietzer and Ron Richardson did at the Bay of Quinte two-ball Better Ball Tournament Saturday. The pair carded a net score of 60 to pace the 47 twosomes entered in the event.

Deadlocked in second place with a record of 62 were teams of Ron Cass and Ray Jeffery and Vern Goodwin and Hyla Bryant. In a fourth-place tie came the Ivan Hilborn-John Dow, Jack McCabe - Ralph Bridges and Cliff Bell - John Edwards teams.

A total of 19 prizes were distributed to the top teams in the tournament.

Watch Your Toes!

Rollins Can't Corner Bunnies

A pair of unearned runs in the seventh inning snapped a scoreless tie and paced Oshawa Bunnies to-a 3-0 win over Belleville Rollins Construction here Saturday night.

The victory gave Oshawa the OASA Intermediate "A" Zone Four softball title two games to none.

"It was a disappointing way to go — they only had one earned run in two games — but we had our chances and blew them," lamented Rollins' coach Garry Alexander. "But I hope we get another crack at them next year."

Scott Reid, who pitched a strong four-hitter on the Rollin's rubber, set up his own defeat in the seventh. His throwing error on Graham's hot drive back to the box put a runner on third to start the frame. Cliff Scott's pinpoint throw from left kept Graham there for the first out but he raced home on John Mosier's slow grounder to short, beating the play at home by inches. Mosier knocked the ball from Reid's head, covering home in a rundown play, for the second marker. Bo Burke slammed a long home run blast to left to make it 3-0 in the eighth.

Don Calder, strong under pressure, fanned seven-bit ball to earn the Oshawa victory. He cut down 16 on strikes, most coming with men on base, and did not walk a man.

Drop Does Trick

Wayne McConnell's drop was good enough to drop Point Anne 3-1 Sunday night, dropping the Cementmen behind in their Commercial Softball final series with Rollins Construction.

The Rollins hurler checked the Cementmen on only three safeties to record the shutout win and give his team a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The only Point Anne run came as the result of a fielder's choice, a passed ball and an error. The winning Rollins tally came in the fourth frame on a single by Wayne McTaggart, 'Dale Duvall's double and sacrifice fly. Duval appeared to score on an ensuing fly ball but was called out for leaving the base too soon.

McConnell fanned 13 batters, walking four for the victory, while Jamie Hunter allowed eight hits and one walk with five strikeouts for Point Anne.

SACO Stopped

The Belleville SACO squirts were on a see-saw Saturday, but found that North Bendale carried the most OASA weight.

The Toronto-area minor softballers came up with a 5-4 win, in a game that saw the lead change hands four times, to win the OASA semi-final series in two straight games.

Tim Soule went the distance for Belleville, giving up 12 hits while striking out two and not walking a batter. The SACO hurler provided his own support with a double and two singles, while Danny Vance added a triple and double and Darrell Coleman a double and single for the only other safeties.

The squirts finished their season as OASA champions of Eastern Ontario in their division, advancing further in the play-downs than any squirt team in Belleville history.

Additional Sport On Pages 8, 14

He Earned It!

Even Mountain View supporters would have to agree that Clark Alexander earned his uncarned victory Sunday. The Hillier hurler fired a two - bit shutout to lead his team to a 1-0 victory in the seventh and deciding game of the Prince Edward North Shore softball finals. The champions' only run was unearned coming in the second inning on an errant throw.

Earl Colton came close to matching Alexander's efforts, pitching five - hit ball and allowing only the unearned tally before giving way to Gary Eardley, who retired the last batter.

Bill Crystalyn had two hits for the winners with the others going to Paul Pettingill, John Allison and Jim Bell. Peter Moran and Fred O'Brien rapped the only Mountain View safeties.

One place that the losers did emerge ahead was in individual awards for the season as Mountain View's Ed Callow won the batting championship with a .500 average while Eardley was picked as the most valuable pitcher. Ron Reeder of Bayview Orchards copped the home run crown with three, while Belleville's Lyle Shaver took Most Sportsmanlike honors and teammate Ken Kerik walked off with the rookie award.

Uniroyal Decisive

It was the deciding game of the Belleville Minor Baseball tyke finals, as Uniroyal hands sure that there wasn't any indecision about the outcome. The new tyke champions hammered out a 17-5 victory over Alhambra 109 to win the series two games to one.

Dave Bennett and Bruce Bell stopped the losers on four hits, while their teammates banged out 11 safeties off Alhambra hurlers Ken Revoy and Dale McTaggart.

Bennett paced his own batting attack with three doubles and a single, while Bell followed with a trio of two - baggers. Peter Manderville and Larry Hanlon each added a double and single with Glen McQuaid picking up the other bit. For the losers it was Revoy and Mark Crawford with two hits each.

In a peewee division semi-final opener Collins Mile rolled to a 9-4 win over Desoronto with Brian Loveless and Gary Sander carding the win. Simon Bennett and Andy Lopeszta showed the way for Golden Mile with three singles each. Anderson and Thompson had two hits each for Desoronto.

The winners of that series will meet the Foster Thurlow peewees, who gained a berth in the Bay of Quinte finals with twin wins over Trenton Legion this weekend.

Thurlow overcame a six-run Trenton lead Saturday to emerge with a 10-9 victory as Brian Masterson and Randy Adams pitched the win with Tony Lattone and Billy Sullivan collecting two hits each.

Foster's wrapped up the series Sunday with a 17-9 victory. Adams and Masterson again looked after the pitching chores with Sullivan and Masterson each cracking double. Glen Leclair had the only extra base hit for Trenton.

In the midget division, CNR Yardmen swept to the Bay of Quinte championship with a 14-3 pasting of Tyendinaga. Ron McTaggart buried a seven - hitter for the win, with Ron Barberstock and Jason Morris taking the loss. Steve Rushlow powered a homer for the winners with McTaggart and Gary Christopher adding two hits each. Farrell lined three singles for the losers.

71's AT BIG DISCOUNTS!
FROM THE "DEVIL"

Go To The "Devil" For a Good Deal on a '71 Right Now!

We're DEVILS to the competition but when it comes to our customers . . . we are angels. We believe in honest dealing and that means giving our customers the most value for their car buying dollar.

AND RIGHT NOW WE ARE IN A JAM — The 1972's are just around the corner and we've got too many 1971's still here. These are Brand New and Demonstrator models — PLYMOUTHS, DODGES, DUSTERS, DEMONS, CHRYSLERS AND SATELLITES with various equipment and a selection of colors. You can get a real "Devilish Deal" on any of these cars — so come in and look them over.

To top it off, our normally courteous salesmen are not being quite so courteous about the fact that our Used Car Lot isn't full. They want good Trade-ins for their waiting customers and that means a good high allowance for you when you trade up to a 1971.

Canning Corn at Consecon

Each year the economy of the Consecon area receives a shot in the arm from the harvest of corn for canning at Alex Lipcon factory in the village. The processing of corn provides pay cheques for 100 men and women for five weeks in August and September.

Manned Habitats on Seafloor Could Yield Canada Profit

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could profit greatly by pioneering the recovery of oil and gas through manned habitats resting on the ocean floor, says a report to the Science Council of Canada.

The ability to do this would be valuable in harvesting huge potential hydrocarbon deposits under the continental shelf, especially in the Atlantic and the Arctic.

In addition, the technology for drilling from the bottom would be applicable elsewhere and to other problems.

Investigation of these techniques is just one of many suggestions in the report by Dr. Robert W. Stewart, a University of British Columbia professor, and Dr. L. M. Dickie, director of the Marine Ecology Laboratory of the Bedford Institute, Dartmouth, N.S.

Their study formed the basis for Science Council recommendations to the federal government last Nov. 25 calling for a major effort to develop the expertise for harvesting the mineral and living resources of the sea.

Among the Stewart-Dickie proposals passed along to the government by the Science Council were an experiment in climate control by keeping the Gulf of St. Lawrence ice-free the year round and a major effort at integrated management of mineral, recreational and fishing resources of the Strait of Georgia on the West Coast.

On the matter of bottom drilling, the two researchers note that Canada already has one big advantage in the small manned submersible craft of International Hydro-Dynamics Inc., of Vancouver.

The company operates "the only wholly privately owned and profitably operated small submersibles in the world."

The report says the potential applications are great for such craft in oil recovery, arctic survey, pollution control, search and rescue, fisheries research and defence.

"It is in the general Canadian interest to ensure that this important pioneering industry is encouraged to continue and to expand its activities in Canada."

In thinking such craft with its recommendation that Canada pioneer in bottom drilling, the report notes that they can perform sophisticated operations at great depths with crews working at normal surface atmospheric pressures.

The report also notes that in developing the equipment for bottom drilling and the ability to use it, much more must be known about the environment of wind, wave, sea-ice, current and icing conditions.

The ice-free St. Lawrence gulf experiment would provide valuable knowledge. And Canadian undersea expertise would be in wide demand.

The report provides greater detail on the proposed Oceans Development Corporation which the Science Council also recommended to the government last November.

It says that a $150 million investment by the government through the agency would yield at least a $250-million-a-year increase to the gross national product—the value of all goods and services.

The corporation's chief task would be to stimulate the development by industry of the technology needed to exploit the sea's resources, including the fisheries.

Kingston Students Walk Out

KINGSTON (CP) — Hundreds of high school students left classrooms without permission today to attend a rally to protest loss of extra-curricular activities due to a contract dispute between teachers and the Frontenac board of education.

Most of the students arrived in home rooms, but instead of going to the next class, marched to the board offices.

Board chairman T. D. French left his office to address the students. When he appeared, a great shout went up from the students, followed by applause.

Mr. French said he would meet with student leaders later in the day and a news conference would follow.

Students are backing teacher demands for higher salaries. The teachers approved a work-to-rule program Friday and withdrawal of voluntary services as part of that decision.

The board has offered a 6.6-per-cent wage increase, 3 per cent less than what the teachers want.

Starting rate for Category 1-A teachers with the maximum at Category 4 is $15,300.

Kosygin's Trip to Canada Seen Answer To Nixon's Scheduled Visit to China

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet diplomacy seems far from sure where it's going, but in a hurry to get there.

In particular the plan of Premier Alexei Kosygin to visit Canada seems part of an effort to get in Soviet licks before President Nixon goes to Peking.

The Russians are in a tough spot with regard to China. Moscow purports to speak for the Communist world. For 22 years Moscow has raised indignant protest against exclusion of China from the United Nations. Now Peking seems about to get into the world organization and the Russians can do nothing openly but support it.

In any case, the Russians have expressed a long bill of particulars available for anybody's use. It charges:

—That China is the wicked world peace. Moscow points to China' rejection of Soviet proposals for conferences on disarmament and nuclear weapons. It's alleged that China propagandizes for war at home, opposed collective security in Europe and Asia, encourages "military psychosis" in Albania and tries to create tension in Southeast Europe.

—That China pursues a deliberate policy of hostility to the U.S.S.R. To support this, there is the statement in talks about the border areas where shooting erupted in 1969. Moscow speaks of "constant hostile propaganda against our party and country" and "subversive activities" against other Communist-governed nations.

—That Peking is a menace to small countries of the third world. On this, Pravda says Peking assumes a special liberating mission in Asia.

Pravda claims weighty grounds for suspecting a behind-the-scenes deal between Peking and Washington at the expense of "the peoples," a term Moscow uses for pro-Soviet governments. China has been investigating against the super-powers, but Moscow clearly suspects Peking is much more against one super-power—the U.S.S.R.—than the other, and is profit even trying to draw the United States into an anti-Soviet front.

Moscow suspects China of trying to penetrate East Europe and set up an enclave of Yugoslavia, Albania and Romania. This suspicion may figure importantly in the decision of the Soviet party chief to visit Tito of Yugoslavia. Leonid Brezhnev may have some not-too-subtle hints to drop the Yugoslavs as well as to balky leaders in Romania. Brezhnev also is going to France next month.

The Soviet offensive has a look of emergency improvising, something selected because it seemed better than doing nothing. But it could be to Moscow's profit.

For one thing, it is aimed at paving widespread suspicion of China's intentions in the United Nations. For another,

CFB Broncos' Simpson Puts Foot in Right Place

Quarterback Jim Simpson put some kick in the CFB Broncos to lead his team to a 7-7 tie with the RCMP Mounties Sunday. The deadlock leaves the two teams tied for first place in the National Defence Football League with identical 1-1-1 records.

Simpson had given his Trenton team a 6-0 lead when he scrambled into the end zone from five yards out in the final quarter. The RCMP stormed back to pull ahead 7-6 on a converted touchdown with a minute left to play in the game.

The Broncos then managed to march to the 40-yard line, where Simpson lofted a tremendous punt over the end zone on the frail play of the game to salvage the tie.

India Plans Legislation To Break Press Monopoly

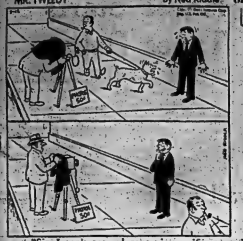
NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The Indian government plans to introduce legislation designed to break up what it regards as the monopoly press owned by business magnates.

A draft bill aims to give employees greater say in running the papers.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and several of her ministers have recently been critical of foreign papers, several of which are controlled by powerful industrial concerns.

The bill, which will probably be introduced at the session of Parliament beginning in November, provides that no one will be able to hold more than five per cent of the paid-up equity capital of a newspaper company either alone or with relatives. Preference in distributing ex-cess shares will be given to company employees who would also hold half the seats on the board of directors.

But whatever the number of shares he owns, no individual will be entitled to voting rights exceeding one half of one per cent of the total. The residual votes will be exercised by a public trustee appointed to the board.



Privately-owned newspapers with circulations of under 35,000 and those owned by registered societies with circulations of less than 50,000 will not be covered by the proposals. Also exempt will be papers owned by political parties, public trusts and workers' co-operatives.

It is believed the bill will lay down procedures for the appointment of editors and regulate prices by the number of pages, a principle rejected by the Supreme Court some years ago.

Companies which account for 70 per cent of the total Indian circulation of eight million papers daily are likely to be affected.

Latest official figures say there are 659 daily papers in India. Hindi language papers represent about 25 per cent.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am depressed. Let me say it a t first. Otherwise you won't think my letter appropriate for a medical column.

Yesterday I was a happy-go-lucky middle-aged housewife. I rarely thought of myself as getting older. Today, as I said, I'm a bit depressed.

I feel old. Recently I had my 25th high school reunion. I could hardly believe what a quarter of a century had done to the faces of my classmates. For the first time I've become aware what time has wrought. My reason for writing? A warning: Don't go to class reunions! — Mrs. A.

COMMENT: There will always be reunions — and always brave souls to attend them. Many agree that seeing an old classmate can be more shock provoking than merely flipping the pages of a calendar. Sad it is.

Few have expressed it more piquantly than Albert Camus in one of his essays: "In the evening, in the crudely lighted cafes where I took refuge, I read my age in faces I recognized without being able to name them. I merely knew that they had been young with me and that they were no long er so."

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been reading your column and wonder whether I should write to you. My complaint is that I never get tired or weary. I am 37. All my friends (many much younger) always keep complaining of being exhausted at the end of the day.

But I can go on and on. I go to bed at 11 p.m. only because my husband does. I be awake, not tired or sleepy. I never sit down to relax during the day.

Perhaps I should, even though I don't seem to need it. My sister thinks I have an overactive thyroid. However, I've just had the diagnostic "works" and my doctor says I'm healthy. My question is: Am I normal? — Mrs. T.

COMMENT: I cannot extend advice, only congratulations. In an age when tension and exhaustion are the most common complaints, all I can say is I wish there were some way your excess energy might rub off on the rest of us. Normal, Mrs. T.? Let's say, thankfully, "abnormally normal".

* * *

For Dr. W. of Vanderbilt University: I believe readers will be interested in the following quote from your letter regarding methods for determining congenital defects in unborn children.

"It is now possible to detect defective embryos long before birth by relatively simple methods. An amniocentesis is performed at about 10-14 weeks of pregnancy and chromosomal studies are then performed on the fetal cells found in the amniotic fluid.

"For the mother, this procedure involves only a simple needle puncture in the abdomen, a very safe procedure for both mother and embryo. If the chromosomal study proves to be normal, reassurance is in order, at least as far as Down's syndrome (mongolism) is concerned. If the definite evidence of genetic damage is found, it's a matter may then be offered a therapeutic abortion.

"Such procedures remain in the experimental stage, of course, and have great implications for the future — n o t only in genetic abnormalities but also metabolic abnormalities such as cystic fibrosis — and possibly some day may even assess damage produced by drugs or viruses."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For September 14

Your birthday today: Successful normal existence, including many bright moments of emotional satisfaction, experiments on career projects, further studies are promised for this year. Today's natives generally have unusual mental talents, specialized personal interests, but are not always very practical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Material interests are favored, so take brisker initiative. Top off an active day with complete rest, abstinence, and medication.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): There's just enough of an obstacle to provoke you into a really healthy effort, but try to avoid upsetting sensitive people. Leave the afternoon and evening open.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Strive for an even balance — the serenity of clear knowledge should project outward for all. See old times, past cries in context, deeper understanding.

CANCER (June 1 — July 22): New contracts at hand have to be settled promptly and early. If things don't come readily to conclusion, leave off and try again another day.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Practicality turns out to be the main consideration, even to the point of falling short of an idealistic commitment made a long time ago.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): All eyes turn to what you are doing. How you fare depends on your recent choices, but there's no way to judge from today's events what the eventual outcome will be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Social contacts compete w i t h business opportunity. See that you don't skip over one right in front of your nose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Add to your resources and reserves. Strive for a m i d d l e course and stay in production.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Future plans hang on details settled today. Seek supporters for your ideas; sign them up for definite commitment wherever you have details worked out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): At a low point in our material cycle, you nose-the-less get some special encouragement. Take a break this afternoon for meditation, prayer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb 18): Routine may not intrigue but you have quite a lot of it to work out. Now is a better time than most.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 6): You can convert desirable temporary conditions into more permanent form early today. Be satisfied with verified progress.

Doctors Advocate Daily Report On State of Nation's Health

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The College of Family Physicians of Canada hopes to set up a board of doctors that would report daily from across the country and provide a readily-available national picture of illness for use in health-care planning.

"What we need is the whiteflu thial to do it," Dr. D. I. Rice of Toronto, executive director of the college, said Sunday night.

The college has applied for a federal grant of set up the project, called the "Illness observation unit," he told a news conference. It would like to get $35,000 to $35,000 a year for three years.

"The concept is that across the country we would have our membership reporting on a regular basis on what is happening in their practice—measles, flu, side reactions to drugs and venereal disease incidence, for example."

A director and staff would coordinate the data and provide weekly reports based on the members' findings.

"If one then had a map of the country, you could show changes of disease in particular areas," Dr. Rice said. "If you studied those over a period of years you would begin to notice trends of disease."

The Illness observation unit was one of four projects discussed at a board of directors meeting preceding today's opening of a four-day educational assembly of 820 family practitioners from across Canada.

The board also recommended studies of the role of family doctors and the number of family doctors available in Canada, their present role, where they are practising and what are the needs of the public.

U.S. Urges Interpol To Resist Legal 'Pot'

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States, maintaining that cannabis drugs are harmful, has urged Interpol members to resist any pressure to make marijuana or hashish legal.

Such pressure exists in several of Interpol's 111 member countries, notably Canada, where a youth committee appointed by State Secretary Gerard Pelletier has recommended that marijuana be made legal.

A 26-member U.S. delegation to the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol), including James J. Rowley, director of the U.S. Secret Service, led the debate against cannabis.

As the conference ended Saturday, delegations representing countries from Algeria to Vietnam had supported resolutions that would put more pressure on the illicit drug trade.

Canada's representative on Interpol, a Paris-based clearing house for information on crime, is the RCMP. Commissioner W. L. Higgitt was elected Interpol vice-president for the Western Hemisphere.

Major resolutions including one asserting that the latest research indicates that use of cannabis "is indeed harmful" and leads to stronger drugs.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Cheesemen Milked U.S.

As you probably know by now, I spend my summers in Wisconsin, up in the cheese and cherry country. It is a rural region, populated by sturdy individualists, most of whom vote straight Republican ticket and decry "government waste and extravagance."

But I think the real reason that the opponents of such "waste" and "extravagance" have made so little headway (no matter which political party is in power) is that they themselves are ready, a the first opportunity, to take advantage of the old Uncle Sam.

Some years ago, I recall, the U.S. District Court had to change the rules of price supports for cheese, because the cheese dealers and makers were milking the government as if it were a herd of Holsteins.

For an unconscionably long time, it was a common practice of dealers and makers to produce cheddar cheese just barely good enough to meet government grade, and then unload it to Uncle Sam at the prevailing support price.

The government paid for storage, and months later, when the cheddar was aged and cured, dealers bought back the same cheese with a 2-cent a pound markup. In addition, the government took any spillage or shrinkage, the dealer receiving back only what he wanted.

No maker could store or cure cheese for so low a cost, and therefore it was common practice of the cheese makers to use the government to carry their inventories and to age their cheddar only when the commercial market needed supplies. Cheese was "sold" to the government one month and "bought" back the next month, without moving a pound of cheese.

The government was used for the risks, the storing and the curing — until the courts finally stepped in and changed the ground rules. The whole system, of course, was an unlimited windfall for the cheese makers, and violated all their impassioned rhetoric about individual initiative, the sacred role of risk capital, and The American Way.

I cite this specific instance at length because I have some personal knowledge of it; but it is by no means the exception among groups loudest in their protestations against "welfare handouts" and "galloping socialism." The right hand salutes the flag while the left darts into the government till.

What too many groups seem to want is rugged competition for others and a form of socialism for themselves; for what else are such devices as widespread price-fixing but a form of "socialism at the top"? And it seems to me that this Janus-like attitude creates a public cynicism about our economy that does more to subvert capitalism than copies of "Das Kapital" deposited in every hotel room in the country.

You and The Law

Infant Anyone Under 18

The word "infant" brings to most people's minds a picture of a small gurgling baby done up in diapers and booties. However, legally the word "infant" applies to anyone under full legal age — much to the distress of many children and teenagers.

Until recently, the legal age or age of legal responsibility, was 21 in all provinces of Canada. But this is now changing and in some provinces it has been reduced to 18 or 19. Changes along these lines may be made in other provinces as well.

An infant's legal position differs materially in a number of ways from that of a person who has reached legal age. A person of legal age is, generally speaking, bound by any agreement into which he enters. He can sign a contract to buy a white elephant and is legally bound to it.

However, an infant is only bound in two circumstances:

1. Agreements for the purchase of necessaries;

2. Agreements that he does not repudiate within a reasonable time after reaching legal age.

Dealing with the first point, what is or isn't a "necessary" will vary from person to person. It is legally defined as being any item suitable to the infant's station in life and his actual needs at the time.

So, for instance, a $250 suit might be held to be a necessary for the teenage son of a millionaire, but not for the teenager son of an ordinary working man.

On the other hand, if the millionaire's son already had a closet full of suits, another suit might be held not to be a necessary. Then he would not be legally bound to any contract for it.

Similarly, if the suit was more reasonably priced, it might be a necessary for the working man's son.

Dealing with the second point, any agreement — even for something that was not a necessary — will become legally binding on a person if he does not repudiate it within a reasonable time after reaching legal age.

Take for example, a 17-year-old unemployed laborer who somehow persuaded a car dealer to sell him a Cadillac on credit without a co-signer. The Cadillac is obviously not a necessary. If it is the age of legal responsibility in province in which he lived, he would have to repudiate the agreement within a reasonable time of turning 18. Otherwise he would then be bound to pay for the car.

Infants are also in a special position in regard to suing or being sued. They have legal rights against other parties, and other parties have legal rights against them.

However, an infant does not personally have the legal capacity either to sue or defend an action in his own name. He must sue in the name of a "next friend" who would most logically be his father. And he must defend in the name of his guardian, who would also most logically be his father.

The courts of every province have special rules dealing with actions by or against infants.

That's the law!

THE BETTER HALF. By Bob Barnes

"To be honest now, how often do they let you run barefoot through the money in the vault?"

PM Hears Cornwall Critics

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister heard some tough talk, and dispensed some hard truths of his own, on his two-day tour of Eastern Ontario that ended Saturday.

Most of the complaints heard on the trip through seven centres dwelt on the country's economic ills — continued inflation and unemployment and the plight of the poor and the old.

Some of the toughest talk came at the last stop of the tour, the town meeting in Cornwall.

Mayor Nick Kanelos accused the government of pursuing anti-inflation policies that had led to unacceptable levels of unemployment, without eradicating inflation itself.

Cornwall, with unemployment running about 20 per cent, had been especially hit by speeded-up tariff reductions that were squeezing out the products of the city's textile and chemical industries.

Mr. Trudeau agreed unemployment was high — especially in Cornwall — but noted that Canada had the lowest inflation rate of the western world.

Regional incentives were helping slow-growth regions, however. And the new textile policy — including temporary tariffs to allow firms to improve their plants — would aid Cornwall.

A broader range of tariffs would endanger the free trade that helped Canada export a quarter of its total production by prompting other countries to protect their own industries.

House Starts Taxes Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — A decade after federal authorities decided it was time to reform Canada's tax system, the legislation rewriting at long last from the decision comes before the Commons today for debate.

The outcome of years of argument before a royal commission, Senate and Commons committees, in Parliament and inside the government is Bill C-259, a massive document three inches thick and 707 pages long.

The bill was presented to the Commons for routine first reading as the House adjourned for summer recess June 30, just 12 days after its highlights had been outlined by Finance Minister E. J. Benson as part of his budget for 1971-72.

After lying fallow for the summer, the main principles of the legislation now will be debated at second-reading stage. Then the Commons will go into committee for detailed study, followed by final reading.

Election October 21

Davis Makes Vote Personality Issue

Leadership Question Raised by Premier

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario votes Thursday, Oct. 21, on what Premier William Davis said Monday was "a question of leadership."

In issuing the general election call, the premier, who has not led his party in an election battle, asked for a personal mandate to continue his 6½-month-old government.

In his formal statement, the 42-year-old Brampton lawyer appeared to ignore his Conservative party and focused instead on a personal request for a mandate to lead Ontario through a period of international political and economic difficulties.

He said he believed one issue will be which party leader the electorate will back to deal with problems such as the economy.

"We are, as all of us recognize, undergoing a difficult period in Canada's history," he said. "National problems not of our making and external decisions not of our choosing all combine to present difficulties and challenges to our provincial economy . . .

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon, 43, a teacher and farmer outside politics, said the Liberals see the issues as "essentially pertaining to the economy and job opportunities, decentralization of power away from Queen's Park and into the community, our concern for the environment and the role of Ontario in Confederation."

Stephen Lewis, a 33-year-old former teacher leading the New Democratic Party for the first time in a general election, said there will be a de-emphasis on personalities by his party.

Standing in the legislature when it was dissolved at 3 p.m. Monday—a scant nine hours before time would run out on Mr. Davis to call an Oct. 21 vote—there Conservatives 68, Liberals 27, NDP 21 and one independent.

There were no vacancies in the 117-seat house. The NDP captured the only byelection—to fill a seat left vacant by death of a Conservative—since the 1967 general election when then premier John Robarts' Tories won 69 seats, the Liberals 28 and the NDP 20.

Mr. Davis, who said he hadn't made up his mind on the election date until last weekend, preceded his announcement by dipping into his bag of election goodies.

He announced exemptions from medical care premiums for senior citizens and those in low-income brackets and reductions for all Ontarians. A second announcement promised more financial aid to book publishers.

The premier also released the report of a provincial inquiry into land deals on the Niagara escarpment. The report exonerated his government of corrupt practices but found its security weak.

All three parties have been expecting the election call but the Tories and Liberals are behind the NDP in nominations. There are nine ridings where there is no NDP candidate and the PCs and Liberals have to nominate 35 more each.

Nominations close Oct. 7. Returning officers will begin enumerating voters on Sept. 22 and the voters' list will be revised on Oct. 8, 9, 12 and 13.

Advance polls will be held on Oct. 16 and 18, the Saturday and

Some Quinte Posts Open

Countdown to the provincial election has begun with Premier William Davis' announcement yesterday of the Oct. 21 polling day. Mr. Davis is expected to kick off the PC campaign next Tuesday.

But vacancies still exist to be filled in the ranks of candidates in the Quinte area.

Prince-Edward-Lennox Progressive Conservatives will nominate their candidate in Napanee tonight at the secondary school. Norris Whitney, a Prince Edward county sheep farmer, has been the Conservative MPP for the riding for the last 20 years.

The NDP have yet to nominate candidates in Prince-Edward-Lennox, Hastings and Quinte ridings. A spokesman said today that nomination meetings will be announced "soon".

All candidates are set to go in Northumberland - Durham. Glenn Cole, a Plainville dairy farmer, was nominated Liberal candidate last night and sitting member Russel Rowe, Cobourg, was again nominated to be Progressive Conservative standard bearer. Earlier in the summer Art Cockerill, a profes-

Euromart Lands Have Uniform Monetary Policy

BRUSSELS (AP) — Closing their ranks for negotiations with the United States, the six Common Market countries have agreed on a uniform monetary policy including a call for the U.S. to devalue the dollar and abolish the U.S. 10-per-cent supplementary duty on imports.

The president of the Common Market Commission, Mario Ferrari-Aggradi, flew to London today in an effort to win Britain's support for the six-nation policy.

Odds appeared favorable that Ferrari-Aggradi, Italy's finance minister, can persuade Britain to line up with the Common Market in time for a crucial monetary meeting opening in 24 hours. Britain is a prospective Common Market member.

Ferrari-Aggradi will talk with Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, about the Common Market position reached Monday.

The stand is expected to have considerable impact on Wednesday's meeting in London of the Group of 10 leading industrial countries and the Sept. 27 meeting in Washington of the 116-member International Monetary Fund. The United States will take part in both conferences dealing with President Nixon's new economic policies.

Canada is a member of both the Group of 10 and the IMF.

Baby Bonuses Scrapped Under New Federal Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — A new family income security plan, by which existing family and youth allowance schemes would be scrapped and more money directed to families on low incomes, was unveiled by the government Monday.

Welfare Minister John Munro said he hopes the plan, to be known as FISP, will be in operation by next May.

The legislation, which received first reading in the Commons, would eliminate about 1.4 million higher-income families from present benefit rolls and greatly increase monthly payments to many low-income families.

While the existing plans provide $6 a month for children up to the age of 10; $8 for those 10-15, and $10 for those 16-17, the FISP payments would provide a maximum of $15 for children under 12, and $20 for children 12 to 17 inclusive.

The maximum benefits would be paid to families whose incomes remain below a "floor." This "floor" is $4,500 for families with one child, rising by $500 with each additional child.

This means that families with 10 children could receive maximum benefits until annual income reaches $9,000. Benefits would decrease by 33 cents for every $100 of income above the "floor."

The health department says that more than two million families will receive the new benefits compared with the 3.5 million now receiving the universal benefits. Some 1.25 million will get the maximum benefits, including about 150,000 mothers raising children by themselves.

Mr. Munro told reporters: "We're asking people at high income levels to give up their benefits and we're asking taxpayers generally to increase their contributions to help those on low incomes."

In its first year of operation, FISP will cost $800 million compared with $640 million for the existing programs.

Under the existing universal programs, a family with four children aged 2, 4, 6 and 8 receives an annual total of $288. Under the new scheme the maximum benefits would be $720. And if the four children were aged between 14 and 17, the new maximum benefit would be $960 instead of the present $432.

But as the income increases above the floor, the benefits decrease. Families with one child would lose all benefits when income reaches $10,500; those with children the cutoff level would be $11,000, and with three children, $11,500.

Frontenac Mediator Proposed

KINGSTON (CP) — Frontenac County Board of education will accept a mediator to settle a salary dispute if high school teachers will end their withdrawal of voluntary services, board chairman T. D. French said Monday night.

Mr. French said he did not know whether the teachers would agree. The teachers have indicated they would accept either arbitration or a conciliation board.

Wishart Asks Court Ruling on Whiterock

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government will ask the Ontario Court of Appeal within two or three days to consider questions on real-estate transactions "in certain parts of the province."

Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and comercial affairs, said conflicting legal opinions have been given over the validity of certain titles and these should be resolved by Ontario's highest court.

Nine Hostages' Throats Slit

Twenty-eight Rebel Convicts Slain

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Order has returned to Attica state prison after bloody clashes in which the arsenal of a small army of prison officers and National Guard troops was pitted against the baseball bats, knives and gasoline bombs of rebellious convicts. Thirty-seven men died.

Nine of the dead were hostages from among the 38 guards and prison employees held for four days by the convicts. Twenty-eight of the dead were prisoners.

Most of the dead hostages apparently were killed in the first minutes of fighting. In some instances prisoners were seen slitting the throats of hostages.

In at least three cases prisoners extended mercy to hostages they were assigned to kill. In another, a state police sharpshooter stilled a knife as it moved across the throat of a guard with one well-placed bullet to the convict-executioner's head.

A medic who treated seriously-injured prisoners after the fighting in the grey stone prison Monday said the death toll was likely to rise.

Early today, Judge John Curtin of U.S. District Court in Buffalo ordered prison officials to allow lawyers to enter the maximum-security facility to interview and counsel convicts. He also ordered the admission of doctors and nurses.

A group of lawyers, doctors, nurses and legal assistants was turned away at a prison gate at 3 a.m. when they attempted to present the federal court order. State corrections officials in Albany said they would answer the order at a hearing today in Buffalo.

For Other Stories On Prison Rebellion See Page 18

State Corrections Commissioner Russell G. Oswald, who ordered the assault, said autopsies showed that two of the slain hostages had been killed prior to the time state police, guards, sheriff's deputies and National Guard troops moved in to smash the rebellion by about 1,200 prisoners. He would not say how much earlier the two had died.

The attack plan had the approval of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, on whose authority the use of National Guard troops rests.

President Nixon telephoned Rockefeller after the rebellion had been put down and told the governor he supported the state's actions.

Two of the convicts found dead after the assault were discovered in cells, stabbed to death. One had been emasculated, Oswald said. Prison officials speculated the two had been slain by fellow prisoners.

"Some of the crimes that took place in there bordered on atrocities," said Oswald.

More than 100 prisoners were injured or wounded in the fighting Monday. Three state troopers were hurt.

Armed with shotguns and high-powered rifles with snipers-copes and assisted b ya helicopter that bombed prisoners with tear-gas canisters, officers and troops were ordered into the prison after four days of frustrated attempts to bargain with representatives of the rebels.

North End Road, Bridge Work to Get Priority

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

City council yesterday moved to speed up street and bridge construction projects in the city's north and northwest sectors in an attempt to alleviate traffic congestion resulting from the opening of the new Quinte Mall.

Council approved a report from City Manager J. R. Reynolds urging extension of Bell Blvd. to Sidney Street as soon as possible along with a construction start on the new Sidney Street bridge and reconstruction of Sidney Street between Catherine and Moira Streets.

In a motion from Alderman Donald Soutter to approve the city manager's report, it was recommended that the city engineer prepare cost estimates for the Bell Blvd. extension and if possible have construction commence this year.

In his report, Mr. Reynolds noted that construction of the Bell Blvd. extension was scheduled for next year as a capital works project and suggested it may be possible to persuade the Ontario Municipal Board to grant approval for the project this year on condition that it become a first priority against the city's 1972 capital works quota.

But the decision to speed up, if possible, construction of the Bell Blvd. extension to Sidney Street didn't sit too well with two city councillors — Alderman Ben Corke and Jack Ireland.

Alderman Corke said it did not seem quite right that council would suddenly approve a report urging early completion of Bell Blvd. extension when nothing was being done about traffic problems downtown.

He noted that council had been waiting since July for the North-South arterial route study from consulting engineers.

The alderman asserted that more attention must be given to the downtown area. He said the worst single problem was traffic congestion on North Front Street which was badly in need of widening. Lights in the downtown area were 30 years old and in need of replacement.

Alderman Ireland was critical of council action serving to increase land values in the north end of the city when nothing was being done in the downtown area.

The city traffic committee had done nothing in three years to alleviate traffic in downtown Belleville, he said.

"Everything is postponed and here, all of a sudden we set a priority for Bell Blvd.," he said.

Mayor W. Russell Scott agreed that action was needed in the downtown area: that something-definitive must be done.

He urged that once the north-south arterial study is received, an expediting committee would be set up to determine definitive - priorities over the next three years.

So urgent was the need that several projects might have to be hurried on at one time.

"I have always said that we must do something" (for the downtown area) he said, "that there is no point in fiddling around with individual projects."

Alderman Gerald Joyce said he would like to see what the extension of Bell Blvd. would do to funnell traffic away from North Front Street.

At the same time he felt that it would be a reasonably inexpensive job to widen North Front Street where he said traffic was now "God awful".

Alderman Enos David echoed Ald. Joyce's remarks claiming that priority should be given to North Front Street widening.

Diana Cole and Student

Music Is Her Contribution

Diana Cole has a vision — or rather — she hears "joyful noises" made by everyone with a burning desire to express himself in sound.

That's why she, as a rank newcomer to Belleville has offered her services as a volunteer, as one of the many modern young people with an ideal of service who is giving herself to the community.

Mrs. Cole, wife of a Loyalist College teacher of Establish and remedial reading, is finishing her ARCT at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto. But she is part of the new wave, believing in a "better quality of life" for her fellows, an attitude that dictates a sharing of her knowledge with everyone else who can gain pleasure by it.

In short, she teaches piano — free of charge, to low youngsters who could not afford the price of piano lessons at today's rates. Through her intervention, pianos in two city schools, unused from one weekly assembly to another, are now available for practice by children whose families could not afford a piano of their own.

And in the short year that Mrs. Cole has been pursuing her dream — music for all — she had learned more than she has taught, she claims.

"I was interested in finding some experience in teaching, and I believe the study of piano should be accessible to all," is Mrs. Cole's explanation for the work she undertook in her first year in Belleville.

Mrs. Cole's dream focuses on a community centre for music, equipped with all the standard musical instruments, including pianos, where instruction would be offered free or for a nominal sum, and practice time would be readily available for everyone.

"At such a community centre, piano teachers would donate their time and senior students would gain needed experience in teaching," she muses.

In the meantime she carries on with her pilot project — teaching piano to two youngsters recommend to her by Ruth Burrows of the Volunteer Bureau of United Community Services when Mrs. Cole appealed to her for help with her vision.

"The study of an instrument call develop a sense of discipline and self esteem, give an appreciation of beauty," says the piano teacher.

"I can see these qualities develop," she says of her short year's work.

"I had trouble getting my ideas going," and then I met Ruth Burrows, and she got organized," she says in tribute to the director of the Volunteer Bureau.

The four pupils she began with have dwindled to two, but Mrs. Cole is not discouraged.

"It's a credit to mothers that the children have continued," says Mrs. Cole. The pupils practise on their school's piano at lunch hour, through the co-operation of the principals of their schools.

"I would like to see piano teaching on the elementary school curriculum. To me it is as vital as reading or math They teach art; why not music?" asks Mrs. Cole.

The answer goes beyond a mere ability to tackle the scales at grade six level.

"I have picked up learning problems through my piano teaching," says Mrs. Cole. "Reading music involves special relationships, counting and adding. It involves co-ordination between hand and eye. Because playing piano involves both the left and the right hand, it develops both the right and the left sides of the brain."

Mrs. Cole believes that study of piano offers a short route to discovery of, and therapy for, learning disabilities.

It it serves only as a quick diagnostic aid, its incorporation in the curriculum will be justified, she believes.

Zoning Changes Are Requested

Procedural discussions regarding the referral of motions and recommendations to the newly formed Quinte Planning Board took up much of the time at yesterday's four-hour-long session of city council.

One of the matters involved was a request from east end market owner Dave Kerr of Belleville Motor Hotels Ltd., for a change of zoning for part of his property to allow use of the premises as a convalescent hospital.

After considerable discussion, the request was referred to the various city boards — city parks, traffic committee and the planning board advisory committee before it will be considered by the city planning board.

Local lawyer Rod Cameron, appearing for Mr. Kerr, said he was aware the public hearing might be ordered by the Ontario Municipal Board but it said, the matter was urgent and suggested early approval by city council might speed final approval on the matter.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey noted that the rezoning asked would also allow construction of highrise apartments and asked what assurance area citizens had that such a development would not take place.

The Ontario Hospital Services late in the year proposed taking over the motor hotel premises for use as a pilot project convalescent hospital.

But present zoning does not permit the intended use and the zoning change is therefore needed.

In other business, council received the report of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board respecting the status of the consulting function of the city's official plan and the current planning situation in the Belleville and Suburban planning area.

Council, at a previous meeting, took no direct action on the residential rezoning proposal and draft bylaw, but instead referred it to the planning board.

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board in turn referred the matter to the new Quinte Planning Board.

Alderman Donald Soutter wanted to know how close the city was to having its zoning bylaw changed and what had been gained by referring the matter to the planning board.

Mayor J. Russell Scott replied that consultants were to be hired to draft an official plan for the area but was unable to state when this would be completed.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey said the residential section of the plan (prepared by planner Bert Kenny) should be considered by council at its next meeting.

"Many citizens feel we are going around in circles ," she said.

Province Helps With Snow Removal Costs

The city of Belleville will get a $2,950 payment from the province to aid with its normally heavy snow removal cost last winter.

The announcement as to the amount of the payment for additional maintenance was made by Hon. Charles MacNaughton, minister of transportation and communication in a letter to city council. Council earlier had made a request for assistance due to the heavy snow removal costs.

Mr. MacNaughton noted, however, that the $31,950 was to be considered as a separate approval due to large extra winter expenditures by the city and should not be considered as a precedent for possible approval levels in 1971.

In a second letter to the city Mr. MacNaughton advised that a study of the city's arterial road subsidy would be made shortly. The purpose of the second study, he explained, he said, was to increase the cash flow from the provincial to the municipalities in order to reduce the cost of short-term municipal borrowings.

Cleanup Demanded By Area Residents

Residents of the Moira and Sidney St. intersection area are disgusted with partly demolished houses cluttering up their district and want city hall to do something about the matter.

Accordingly, acting city manager Adam Stalker has been directed by council to take the necessary action to get the area cleaned up.

The partly demolished houses are being moved to make way for the approaches to the proposed Sidney Street bridge over the CN double tracks but have remained untouched for several months and alderman Gerald Joyce says area residents are complaining — again.

Acting city manager Stalker says the first requirement to getting action will be to determine ownership.

In a related matter, alderman Ben Corke stated if it was reasonable to expect that a proposed new bylaw respecting the upkeep of property would be ready for the next meeting of city council.

In reply city solicitor John Miller said the five marshal's bylaw could be ready but not the upkeep of property bylaw.

Quinte Liberals, who are putting Trenton businessman Hal Vanest in the field, will hold an organizational meeting tonight to choose a campaign committee, pick a headquarters and plan strategy.

Napanee solicitor Barry Turner will be running on all area candidates. He has been actively campaigning as Liberal candidate for Prince Edward - Lennox for the last three weeks.

His committee rooms on Main St. in Picton are already open and another committee room is slated on Market Square in Napanee tomorrow. With his campaign manager, Mayor Reedy of Belleville, Mr. Young will hold a press conference in Napanee on Thursday, followed by an organizational meeting for party workers.

"I am not in this campaign to lose," said Mr. Young this morning. He has proved his worth by giving up the law practice he has conducted in Napanee for the last five years. His firm has already hired a replacement for him.

Obituaries and Funerals

MRS. JOHN DAVIDSON

Funeral service for Mrs. Bertha Jane Davidson, who died in Belleville General Hospital Friday, Sept. 10, was held at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Monday, Sept. 13, after resting at the Howden Funeral Home.

Capt. J. H. Thompson conducted the service and interment was in the Fox Cemetery, Ekfrid.

Mrs. Davidson, born and educated in Millbrook, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Macintyre.

She was a member of St. Paul's Church and the Marmora Senior Citizen's Organization.

She is survived by her son Clayton of Coe Hill and two daughters Mrs. George (Dola) Marriott of St. Catharines, Mrs. Margaret Tompkins of Trenton, Mrs. Cecil (Verna) Neal of Marmora, Mrs. Grace McMurray of Valley Mrs. Clifford (Myrtle) Coe also of Marmora.

MISS MARGARET "JANE" RENOUF, BN

Injured in an automobile accident near Casnithon about a week ago, Miss Margaret "Jane" Renouf, of 45 Campbell Cres., Kingston, died this morning in Belleville General Hospital. She was in her 25th year.

Miss Renouf, a registered nurse was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Renouf of 74 Sidney Street in Belleville.

She received her RN degree in August of 1969 after training at the Ontario Hospital in Kingston. Her sister Mrs. Scott Anderson received her nurse's training.

Miss Renouf was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and attended Belleville Collegiate.

Resting at the Thompson Funeral Chapel with visitation hours Wednesday evening. The funeral will take place from the chapel on Thursday with service at 2 p.m. conducted by Rev. Laura Sutherland. Interment, Belleville Cemetery.

MRS. PERCY SMITH

Funeral service for Mrs. Ida Adalia Smith was held, Tuesday, Sept. 14 at 3 p.m. in the chapel of the Howden Funeral Home, Stirling, with Rev. W. C. Cox officiating.

Born in Rawdon Township, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thompson.

She was educated in Belleville, Picton and Napanee and was a member of Springbrook United Church and is survived by her brother Kenneth Thompson of Springbrook, and her sister Miss Ethel Thompson of Campbellford.

Interment was in Mount Nebo Cemetery.

MRS. JESSIE B. FRENCH

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie B. French was held yesterday from the Grant Funeral Home to Bethesda United Church cemetery, service was conducted by Rev. Douglas Heard of Madoc. Interment was in White Lake Cemetery.

Bearers were Charles Martin, Kenneth, Cecil and Elvin Holland, Leslie Blakely and Ken Fraser.

MISS TILLIE E. WHITE

Tarsata

Funeral service for Miss Tillie E. White was held Sunday, Sept. 12, in the chapel of the MacKenzie Funeral Home.

Rev. D. W. Heard conducted the service and interment was in the Lakeview cemetery.

Bearers were William Derry, Presley Nickle, Kenneth West, Ray Birch, Percy Naylor and Clarence Farrow.

He plans a "basic, no-nonsense, door knocking campaign to bring as many people out to vote with this election as possible" and estimates he has already knocked on about 1,000 doors in his riding.

His campaign will be directed at the government, not the local candidate.

"Many issues have been on the record of the past few years," says Mr. Young.

Immediately after Davis' announcement last night Liberal party workers were out putting up Lloyd Rose, Liberal candidate Edward - Lennox riding.

In the north, where PC Quinte MP Lou Hanna contenents Hastings riding, he will be opposed in this campaign by Liberal Rev. Ian Minnie, United Church minister in Tweed.

Mr. Rollins will kick off his election campaign tonight in Thurlow at a social night for PCs at Club Cedars.

Mr. Rollins campaign manager in Hastings riding is Kenneth Smith of Actinolite, warden of Hastings county.

Mr. Munro's campaign manager is Frank Chapman, RR 1, Corbyville, and he will conduct his battle for votes from Tweed.

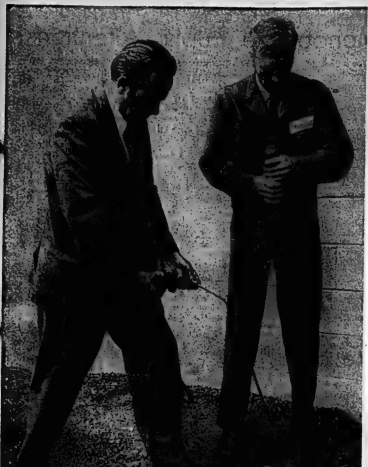
IN MEMORIAM

MARRIAGE — In loving memory of our uncle Harvey Wellington Sprague, who passed away Sept. 14, 1970.
God gave us a wonderful Uncle,
His memory we'll ever prize
He fashioned his smile out of the sunshine
His heart out of pure gold
He needed a new star in Heaven,
So selected light to shine
So out of this old world of ours,
God took one of the best.
Sadly missed by his loving nieces and nephews, nephew Bob Easterbrook, great nieces, nephews and cousins, Cora Maloney, Lala Reg. Vicki, Donald, Jeffrey, Lisa, Lori, Mary, Ruth and Janet.



HUNTER — In loving memory of mother (also grandmother William Hunter (Curly) who passed away Sept. 14, 1967.
Years have passed since that day
And time
Will never take away
The memories we have of you
Or the love we had for you.
Sadly missed by her loving daughter Ethel Hunter (Curly) who passed away Sept. 14, 1967.
His life was earnest, his actions kind
His memory is a sweet relief
Sadly missed by his loving daughter Ethel Hunter (Curly) remembered by her son-in-law Carl Mosher, grandchildren Allan Shackleton and grandchildren Sandra, Lisa and Stephanie.

HUNTER — In loving memory of dear husband and father William (Curly) who passed away Sept. 14, 1967.
Sudden sudden was the call,
Sadly missed by all,
His memory is as sweet today,
As in the days of yesterday
—Lovingly remembered by wife Ora and son Bert.

SAYERS — In loving memory of dear husband, father and grandfather Elizabeth Sayers who passed away Sept. 14, 1970.
Years have passed since
That day
And time
Will never take away
The memories we have of you
Or the love we had for you.
Sadly missed and always remembered by husband Richard Sayers, children and son-in-law Ron and great grandchildren Kimberly and Christopher.

CARDS OF THANKS

I offer heartfelt thanks of appreciation to my family, friends and neighbours for their many acts of kindness and sympathy during my recent bereavement. We would like to thank Dr. Hall, Dr. Hamilton and the nursing staff of Belleville General Hospital for their kindness and excellent care, and a special thanks to Rev. Heard for his comforting words at the death of a loving husband and father.

Probing for Leaks

Many reports of possible leaks concern underground pipelines and Lakeland Natural Gas employs a gas-sensing meter to determine the exact location of them. Area supervisor John H. Fearce holds the device as serviceman John Skillen bores a hole deep into the ground for insertion of the probe.

Gas Distribution Expanding in Quinte

By JIM WILLARD
Staff Reporter

The natural gas industry has expanded to the extent today in Belleville that over 80 percent of its streets are supplied and over 4,000 companies and households in the city employ the fuel for all heating purposes. In Trenton, just over 2,000 consumers are using natural gas.

Latest figures from the Air Pollution Bureau of the federal department of energy resources rank natural gas as 99 percent pollutant - free, mainly for the fact that sulphur is absent from the fuel.

Distribution systems for natural gas are virtually the same for all communities in Ontario which feed off the interprovincial pipeline running from Alberta.

The Lakeland Natural Gas company located in Belleville is the agent here for distribution and maintenance of its pipelines and stations, and the company maintains a mutual relationship with Bell Canada and the city water works system whereby each will contact each other whenever digging is projected.

Just north of Highway 401, on what is an extension of Sydney Street is the border station that initially receives the fuel from the interprovincial pipeline for distribution in the Bay of Quinte area. It is at this point that essential changes are made to the natural gas before being fed into the local system.

"When the gas is fed into the station, the pressure is about 850 pounds per square inch. Naturally, we can't distribute the fuel at that level, so we use several steps here to reduce the pressure, heat it and add the odor that's prevalent whenever the public smells natural gas in their homes," district supervisor Jack Pearce explained.

Through a series of regulators, the pressure is reduced drastically and the fuel is heated for purposes of easier distribution and ensuring that customers receive the exact amount they contracted for.

"You see, when the fuel gets below 60 degrees, it reduces in volume and you may receive more fuel than the meter may read. However, all our meters are temperature compensated at 60 degrees," Mr. Pearce added.

Before natural gas is distributed in the area, an odor is added to it in order that detection can be easily obtained, especially whenever leaks occur.

"Many people don't know this ,but natural gas as it comes from the well has no smell whatsoever," Mr. Pearce stated.

The amount added totals approximately one pint per 100,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

The distribution system flows from the border station under the 401, where release valves prevent overloading in emergencies, and loops at various points throughout the city to key districts and industries. As an added measure of safety, if any or all regulators at the station malfunction a release mechanism ensures that the gas is cut off before distribution in cases of emergency.

When it finally reaches the home, the pressure has been reduced to one-quarter pound per square inch.

Servicing of the large system requires 24-hour surveillance, using four full-time servicemen and contracted local repair companies. Customers can call at any time of the day or night for service.

"We are obliged to answer all calls whenever people say they smell something funny. It may be only sewage, but we must go. If it's not a leak, but let's say, a leak in the sewage system, we call the city immediately," Mr. Pearce pointed out.

Most calls centre on leaks in the main pipeline or a rip in a pipe that has been torn open by construction or digging crews.

"When we know there's a leak somewhere along the line, we use a special gauge to determine the exact spot of the leak. We first bore a hole and insert a thin copper pipe into the ground. Then we pump up through a suction device some of the gas into the meter where it registers a certain percentage. When we reach 100 percent level, then we've found it," Mr. Pearce explained.

The company's servicemen have all undergone extensive training, involving some three and a half years of schooling and on the job training. In the past three years, no one accident or injury has been reported and regular monthly safety meetings are held for the entire staff, reviewing defensive driving, on the job safety measures and knowledge of the gas itself.

"The city's fire department has been trained in collaboration with us to handle emergency situations. They know how to shut off the gas and close off leaks and holes," Mr. Pearce stated.

The company's staff also serves as part of the area's mutual aid society which swings into action whenever an emergency occurs in the Quinte region, aiding authorities and acting as a quasi-official civil defence group.

"You know, most people take us for granted. They call us, usually when their pilot light goes out for any reason, and we're soon there. And we always check out why pilot lights go out. In many cases our servicemen are familiar where meters and appliances are located in homes, stores and industrial plants," Mr. Pearce pointed out.

Among the large users of the fuel are Loyalist College, many downtown stores, the air force installations at Trenton and the majority of local industries.

"You'll see today many high chimney stacks which have disappeared because those companies were worried about pollution. I remember years ago when there was a lack of communication between the natural gas industry and construction crews which ripped open many holes in the distribution system, causing scores among the public," Mr. Pearce stated.

"That's when the oil companies jumped on the bandwagon, and it was only when workable safety regulations were worked out and the advent of concern over air pollution that natural gas returned to the public's attention," he added.

In winter, service as more difficult, but added measures are taken to ensure prompt attention. Majority of calls occur during the night when pilot lights go out, or vehicle accidents cause disruption of the sub - stations feeding lines which are located at key points throughout the area.

With pollution combed becoming more important with each passing year, the re-discovery of natural gas as an economical and premium fuel in the Bay of Quinte area will likely propel the industry into new prominence.

"And, who knows, we might get into nuclear fuels someday," Mr. Pearce concluded.

Workers Strike Bayside Secondary School Job

Construction at Bayside Secondary School is at least two days behind schedule as the result of a strike by about 60 members of Local 247 of the Laborers' International Union.

The men walked off the job Friday morning and returned this morning, in what a Convey Construction Company spokesman on the site termed a "wildcat strike".

Other workers on the job site honored picket lines set up by the laborers and construction was halted for two days. There are about 200 men in all trades involved in construction of the school, expected to open Jan. 1.

Contract negotiations between the laborers and the company had been in progress and the men here had been told to strike Friday morning if the contract was not signed by that time. The contract was approved by the union Thursday night, but the men on the Bayside site refused to accept telephone direction to that effect from Toronto.

They wanted personal notification from the Toronto shop steward, said plant controller Keith Hawkins at a board of education meeting last night.

"I was told Friday that the shop steward would come down that night to confer with the men," said Mr. Hawkins. "However, this morning (Monday) they had not received any direction from him, or from their business agent in Kingston to remove the picket line."

The Convey Company and the union had come to an agreement and the matter rested in the hands of the construction company head, Mr. Hawkins told the board last night.

But this morning the picket line had been pulled off and the men were back at work.

Convey's superintendent on the site, Ted Fox, said this morning he believes "the men made the decision themselves" to return to work. The union business manager in Kingston could not be reached for comment for the last two days.

The laborers were not the first trade to strike at the construction site halfway between Belleville and Trenton.

Roofers and excavation workers were on strike but have now settled work agreements and will be back on the job when the weather permits, Mr. Hawkins said.

The steel workers, previously out, are now on the job.

The plant controller continued to assert that the school would be ready for use by the target date of Jan. 1, 1972.

But a trustee from the area that the school will serve disagreed.

Common sense tells you, just by looking, that that school will never be ready on time," said Raymond Rowe of Frankford.

REAL ESTATE
HOME BUYERS SHOULD TAKE THE ARCHITECT APPROACH

ED McKINNEY
Rollins Lumber Realty Ltd.

When a family decides to buy a house it should begin not by looking at houses but by looking at itself.

What are your family's needs? From the answers will come guide rules for cost, design, size and type. The guiding measurement should be "people" requirements.

If you want seclusion then don't consider a built-up area; if you entertain a lot you'll need a large kitchen, dining and recreation area; if your children lead individualistic lives you'll likely need a lot of bedrooms.

This is the procedure of an architect designing a family home. He may not fill all of the needs but he must decide with the family what is important to their life and what is not. He must match the home to the occupants, in that order.

By defining these personal needs first you will save yourself useless home inspections and lessen the danger of buying a property not basically suitable — a frequent pitfall when you are viewing charming, well-appointed residences.

A trained Realtor knows his market and this knowledge is what you require to match your needs to the right dwelling.

ONE MORE STORE IN QUINTE MALL
This is your last chance to secure representation in the booming Quinte Mall. This 25 x 96.5 foot vacancy will place you next to the gigantic Miracle Mart which along with Simpson-Sears will be the principal draw of this area for decades. Ideal for a complex including hardware, farm equipment, sporting goods, bicycles, etc. Business is so good that tenants are demanding that the Mall expand its present 1,700 car parking capacity. Secretary for Youth

Young people around the province will be pleased to know that the Hon. Richard T. Potter, chairman of the provincial government's youth committee has presented the case for a youth secretariat to the cabinet.

Dr. Potter's committee rejected the proposal that a separate department be set up. The Quinte member has said that experience gained over the past year has indicated that young people do not want to be considered as a separate body but rather have expressed a desire that youth concerns be part of the main stream of government.

Hence the secretariat proposal. As a co-ordinator for summer employment, it would perform a useful function. As the clearing house for the ideas of young people it could play an even greater role in the continuing development of the legislative process.

A Paris Commission

Seventeen park and campsites — along with two historical attractions — have made the St. Lawrence Parks Commission a vital instrument in protecting the recreational aspects of the 145 - mile stretch between Cornwall and Adolphustown.

With the tremendous pressure of population increase which is forecast for the next 30 years, coupled with the anticipated designation of the Quinte - Kawarthas - Highlands of Hastings as a recreational area, it makes good sense that a look should be taken now at resources in this area.

At the moment we have provincial parks scattered throughout the area — they are almost always full on good summer weekends — and operated under the jurisdiction of the department of lands and forests.

There would appear to be a strong argument for replacing this operation with a commission approach. Without question, the sand beaches of Prince Edward will be under development pressure in the years ahead. The earlier paper mill vs recreation controversy will no doubt crop up again in one form or another. A more recent flurry is the utilization of the sand dunes by Lake Ontario Cement under a previously - signed contract.

Along the Moira River the conservation authority has done a most excellent job and in fact made a neat and tidy parks and campsite operation in addition to its conservation function.

But under the legislative umbrella governing conservation authorities, their land-acquisition powers are restricted to their immediate purpose This leaves many areas in limbo when it comes to potential development as parks.

A perfect example is the shoreline between Belleville and Trenton and that along the northern boundary of Prince Edward County bordering on the Bay of Quinte.

If the population explosion materializes, and both the federal and provincial governments' planning considers this automatic, then it behooves us to acquire additional property now and not wait for the crisis.

A perfect example can be made for the Highlands of Hastings and the Peterborough area.

As the potential recreational playground for neighboring urban populations we should have a growth plan designed to keep pace with the industrial and residential development. A parks commission might well be the answer.

Volunteers to the Fore

Each year residents of the Quinte area are cognizant of the United Appeal and contribute to the fund raising to the degree their budgets will allow.

However, to what degree do we give thought to the massive contribution made by our fellow citizens who match their financial giving with donations of their time?

The volunteer worker is the real backbone of the community's resources and each year when the budget is struck, Belleville has on the credit side many thousands of hours donated by her citizens.

An effort to bring this fact forcibly to the attention of everyone is being made this year with the recognition of volunteer week. On now, this week will be capped by a dinner party Wednesday evening at the Four Seasons which is open to the public and a two-day volunteer display in the memorial arena on Friday and Saturday.

Residents of this community who are in debt to the volunteers could despatch their responsibility by attending some of the functions planned this week.

Part of Overall Plan to Undermine Society

Militant Minority Weirdos Monopolize Public Attention

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The homosexuals were demonstrating on Parliament Hill the other night.

Which, by now, should not really surprise you since just about every other minority — the "free" (courtesy of the taxpayers) abortionists, the marijuana smokers, the hard-narcotic addicts, and a half dozen "blow-it-up" bands, the "hang Trudeau Maniacs," among a score of other lunatic fringe and way-out groups — have marched and chanted, howled their obsessities and tried their objectionable best to provoke the police.

But this was something else.

In the drenching rain—it had pounded down for 36 soggy hours — there were the homos, whom Prime Minister Trudeau had persuaded Parliament to permit doing their own thing in the privacy of their bedrooms, out sloshing around, campaigning for "equality."

They chanted in quick-march time, limp as they might have been in the downpour.

"Two, four, six, eight, "Gay is just as good as straight."

Well, so what?

Just this . . .

Conservative Whip Gerald "Ged" Baldwin, for 14 years MP for Peace River, saw it as more evidence of the alarming drift in recent years of organized society into the political domination and threatening control of militant minorities.

"More and more," he warns, "these small groups, tightly-organized, strictly - disciplined, with frightening determination and intellectual violence are monopolizing the attention of the news media, the public, and so, the Government.

"The average man who sets the standards of work, and well, to be old-fashioned, of morality, too, who grows food, builds homes, mans industrial plants, keeps the economy producing the goods and pays the taxes, just is not being heard.

"Unless he speaks up soon, he will find he has lost his public voice entirely."

He remains mum, if not dumb believes Ged Baldwin, because he senses that major political parties — including, he is frank enough to say, his own Conservatives — are so fascinated by the militant minorities and so busily occupied trying to appease them, the politicians no longer represent nor even reflect the opinions of the average man.

Ged Baldwin worries that Canada could be in peril of being tyrannized by these many activist minorities.

He is not alone in his concern. Ask almost any MP. Find out what your own member of Parliament thinks.

Chances are he will tell you that in the unending stream of letters reaching him, there is one note sounding above all the rest by its insistence and characteristic repetition.

"What can we do about it?" is the refrain when phrased as a rhetorical question; or else in tones of submission, "I'm afraid there is nothing now that can be done."

Your MP, unless he is one of the young political activists — and there are a radical few in Parliament — will concede that the average man believes he is watching, helpless and not so much unregarded as positively derided, the deliberately calculated dismantling of the frontiers of decency, morality and respect in a far-reaching effort to change society.

This average man, your MP may be honest enough to confide in you, does not believe that the permissiveness of crime, pornography, sexual license, growing acceptance of the drug culture, and dissent - by - violence are simply reflections of spontaneous, naturally developing social change.

He is becoming increasingly convinced that it is the intention of these small, often elusive but powerful minorities and that it is working.

The average man finds himself bound and gagged by the demands of his job and the consequent lack of time to "do something about it," and worse, without representation where it counts — in Government — fueling a prospect that appalls him.

You can see it all happening on Parliament Hill — where Ged Baldwin and other MPs have watched it, worried and wondering "what to do about it" — the dirty, demented, destructive, seamy underside of Canada out marching in a score of "demos" on the streets.

Watch it long and often enough and the conclusion is unavoidable.

The cult of activism is shrewdly and ruthlessly organized under the air and hair of socially disheveled spontaneity, but reeking with psychotic venom.

It is led by the self-appointed guardians of the True Freedom, the "New and Real Society," the practitioners of violence in the name of non-violence.

What to do? Who, you? Face it, it has to be you.

There is an election just over the horizon. Take the time and trouble to talk to your MP — cross-examine him — be tough take no soft answers. Find out where he stands and for whom. As the violent practitioners of non-violence in - social-change might phrase it: "Put him up against the wall — with your index finger — and make him come across with some hard answers."

Toronto's Foray Into World of Fine Art

The Globe and Mail

Toronto is about to make another foray into the treacherous world of fine art. This time a trio of artists has been engaged by a cigarette company to spruce up the walls of three downtown buildings.

In two or three weeks time, the old Flatiron building on Wellington Street, the Edna Shoe Manufacturing Co. on York Street and Ryerson's Neill-Wycik student residence will all be sporting giant murals.

The hope is that the program will encourage other corporations to brighten up the city, but whether the artistic efforts will be appreciated is another matter.

After all, Toronto does have something of a reputation for mangling whatever it comes to art. And, with all deference to King Edward VII, the Archer and Company, the city's treasures into public art have not been marked by overwhelming success.

The last major artistic venture here was the Centennial Sculpture Symposium that was designed to turn High Park into a permanent artistic Mecca.

No pilgrims wend their way to the site these days. And the remains of Armand Vaillancourt's 120-ton, $100,000 work, aptly titled Je Me Souviens, never did get assembled. Eventually, it was laid to rest (or rust) in a private sculptural graveyard.

It's certain that the Flatiron Building will never rust away, but that's a small consolation to Gordon Rayner, Donald Solomon and Rita L'Etendre if they ponder the history of other artists who tried to transform Toronto the Good into a kind of Florence on the Don.

Social Credit Debacle

Grassby La Voix de l'Est

The national leader of the Social Credit party blames former premier Manning, and not Premier Strom, for the Social Credit defeat in Alberta.

Naturally, Real Caouette is not happy and is not mincing his words about those defeated. But his analysis of the causes for the Social Credit defeat to the Progressive Conservative, he ignores the fact that they had been in power since 1935, the year William Aberhart succeeded in defeating the old parties.

After 36 years of directing public affairs, a political party, whatever it is, is vulnerable. To defeat it, the Conservatives resorted to their opponent's tactics in 1935: "It is time for change."

Besides, Social Crediters were not practising what they were preaching for 37 years. They attributed their progress as any other political party would have done.

An Answer to Violence?

Catholic Bishops' Labor Day Message

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Canadian Catholic bishops presented for Labor Day an important message on "violence and Christians."

This message, which is surely the result of long studies and careful reflection, was prepared by the Episcopal Office of Social Action of the Canadian Catholic Conference. . . .

"It is more urgent, more Christian, more human to fight against the profound causes of violence than to limit ourselves to deplore and condemn," the bishops said.

This document displays a new style. It is more concrete, more hitting than all other messages of this kind presented so far. It makes an urgent call for the commitment of all Christians faced with all sorts of injustices, the source of violence.

The bishops begin first by describing the phenomenon of violence.

"The violence phenomenon can be described as that physical or psychological force which exerts itself on man or a group of men in order to obtain what neither dialogue, right, nor speech would allow them to obtain."

The Canadian episcopate takes care not to offer answers to problems of violence. It seems more realistic, they say, "to admit that, to answer it, we must together progressively learn the profound significance of the human and social stakes with which we are living." . . .

In the fight for justice, through the tensions and conflicts inherent to the dynamism of a society, the Christian will give priority to persuasion, to the influence of right and morality. He will attempt to "awaken the conscience" to prevent fanaticism or the hardness of the heart, the bishops' message says.

They invite Christians to collaborate in social animation, in organizing popular and professional movements to participate in political life and a more equitable share of goods inherent to human dignity for developing countries.

More concretely, they propose to pastoral councils, social and apostolic movements, to all Christians . . . to pursue their research in the current year and find in their respective environments authentic forms of commitment.

Some will reproach the bishops with not going far enough by not proposing solutions. It is not up to the Canadian episcopate to substitute itself for political and legislative powers. . . .

Concentrate this does not mean that bishops must limit their action to the spiritual. On the contrary, they must carry the message of hope. They must share the sufferings caused by all the social ills.

The church must be present everywhere there are injustices everywhere the rights of man are torn down, to denounce such situations and give the orientations to correct or cure them.

The latest message from the Canadian episcopate justly confirms this presence.

Marmora Council in Marathon Session

MARMORA (Special) — The lights burned late in the Marmora Town Hall as the village council worked to catch up on the volume of business caused by their August holiday.

Three young men, whose business and home is on the main street of Marmora, were on hand to complain of noise, drinking, breaking of beer bottles, speeding and rowdyism, particularly on Friday and Saturday nights.

The council is aware of the problem and was very sympathetic, promising to contact the officer in charge of the OPP detachment at Madoc who had, at an earlier meeting with council, promised that some police surveillance would be carried out on foot, and a closer check kept on Marmora streets on weekends. The delegation claimed that police surveillance has not lived up to expectations.

Council members decided that it would be advisable to have the Marmora by-law enforcement officer, Fred Parcels, patrol the streets for a few hours at night, so that any developing trouble could be reported to the police.

In joint meetings with a committee from Marmora and Lake Township Council, agreement was reached on the purchase of property for a new waste disposal site. Agreement was also reached on the date of Oct. 31 for closing the old site, equally shared expenses for legal fees, cost of fencing, supervision, set open hours and the barring of outsiders.

Clerk William Shannon reported that he had attended a meeting of clerks from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties with representatives of the Department of Municipal Affairs, Assessment Division, and found it most informative.

The village has received a subsidy allocation of $3,100 from the Ontario department of transportation and communication, reported Clerk Shannon.

A letter from the Hastings and Prince Edward County Board of Education requested Marmora's mill rate for elementary and secondary schools for 1972.

Clerk Shannon was instructed to complete and return a questionnaire from the department of labor regarding uniform building standards.

All members of council were named to the Marmora Planning Board and their names will be submitted to the department of municipal affairs.

A letter, signed by several people from Oakawa who had camped at Booster Park this summer, highly commended Keith McCoy for the fine job he had done supervising the park. They inquired if more wood could be made available and better boat docking facilities provided, which they felt would improve the park facilities considerably.

A letter of appreciation to council from the Savage family was received.

A copy of the canine count taken by a representative of the assessment department in Trenton was received and filed for reference.

A cheque for $9,507 was tabled, this being the second half of the mining grant.

An application for land division was granted Mrs. Isabella Nayler.

Council asked works superintendent William Bishop to remind the village's employees to report immediately to him any injuries received in working hours.

Water tests at the Legion Park taken by the county board of health were reported to be within satisfactory limits.

Keith McCoy reported a successful summer's operation of Booster Park. He said that the remaining nine owners of trailers have been notified to move them so that proposed work at the park can be carried out.

A payment of $34,791 to the county treasurer was authorized by council on county requisition for roads and general levy.

Works Superintendent William Bishop reported that the water extension project is in the final stages and that crews are starting on the cleanup this week. Council will recommend the removal of an Ontario Hydro pole on Norwood Road which, due to the widening of the road, now stands in the way of snow removal.

Mr. Bishop promised to look into the feasibility of removing some dead elm trees on the cemetery property, as requested by Howard Bleeker.

Council instructed clerk Shannon to notify all motels, hotels and restaurants outside the village who are presently procuring water from the village that they will be assessed $22.50 a month for water and that they must make arrangements with Mr. Bishop for the designation of hydrants to be used.

Councillor Gray reporting for the fire department, stated that attendance at practice sessions had been good and that a new door was being installed on the front side of the fireball at a cost of $175, the work being done by Spencers.

A certificate of approval was read by the clerk for the consignation of 940 feet of water extension from Old Norwood Road, south on Roscoe St. to serve the residents of the village of Marmora on that street. The council, believing that the authorized amount for this extension to be excessive, has asked OWRC to invite new tenders.

A motion was passed that the clerk inform Paul Davidson, department of energy, waste disposal branch, Kingston, of the purchase of a new waste disposal site and the proposed status of, the village - township agreement and invite him to a joint meeting of the two councils for the purpose of final direction.

Consideration was given to a letter from OWRC asking council to rescind the agreement of Oct. 15, 1970 with regard to the provincial sewage work program and replace it with a new standard provincial sewage form.

A letter from OWRC regarding the proposed sewage program advised that the Ontario municipal board has set 10 a.m. on Wednesday, Dec 29, 1971 at the Marmora Town Hall for the hearing of objections and for those who wrote letters of objection and approval.

Monday preceding election day when polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Ontario lowered the voting age to 18 from 21 this year which will add 412,000 young people to the voters' list. In addition, there are about 400,000 more potential voters aged 21 to 25 who were too young to vote in 1967.

In the last election, 1.6 million of Ontario's 7.7 million residents were eligible to vote. Enumerators are predicting the figure this time could reach 4.4 million.

"We are confident that our organization is at a peak of efficiency and that we will win," said Mr. Nixon, the only party leader entering a second campaign.

Mr. Lewis expressed buoyant optimism. He said his party surveys have shown "a steady shift away in Conservative support" in 81 ridings.

The voters "look upon us as the logical alternative to the existing government."

Mr. Davis declined to single out which party he feels will be the main opposition, saying "I'm out to win in every riding."

The two opposition party leaders are expected to start firing political punches from today's official opening bell of the campaign as Mr. Nixon visits Kingston and Ottawa while Mr. Lewis travels to Thunder Bay.

Mr. Davis, who has been bothered by a nagging back problem, isn't expected to hit the hustings hard until next week but he will attend riding nomination meetings.

"Davis is not going to be doing much for a week," a party official said Monday. "He knows he can't go full blast for 37 days."

The Conservative government will seek to extend the Tory string of eight consecutive election victories and 28 years in office.

At a later news conference, the premier was asked whether he could confirm that the Tory war chest was between $3 million and $6 million.

"It may come as a great shock to you but I cannot," he said.

Mr. Lewis said his party's campaign fund will total between $210,000 and $230,000 and the NDP will rely on a force of party workers that currently numbers 8,000 and that he hopes will swell to 35,000 by election day.

"This election will probably be Canada's classic test of people versus dollars," he said.

In his prepared election statement, the premier said:

"On becoming prime minister of Ontario on March 1, I was aware, as you would be, of the fact that I was holding office without any personal mandate.

"It is natural in such circumstances that a head of government would be anxious to confirm his leadership at some early date.

"It seemed only reasonable that I would want to give the people of Ontario an opportunity to make some judgment of their new prime minister as to the kind of leadership he would provide them in that office."

ELEANOR DAHL

Fred Nelles, Manager Fraser & O'Neil Ltd., Realtor is pleased to announce the appointment of Eleanor Dahl to the firm's Belleville sales staff.

Mrs. Dahl, a well known long time resident of the City is looking forward with great enthusiasm to serving her many friends and associates in her new endeavour. Residing at 180 Bridge Street East, 962-6561, she will work from the office at 180 North Front Street, 962-3418.

Duke of Edinburgh Unit To Take Over Quarters

Members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans Association are finally going to get to officially own the Front Street Belleville headquarters which they have been using for the past 30 years.

Council at its regular meeting Monday passed a resolution to have the ANAF headquarters officially conveyed to the Unit.

Until now, ownership of the building has been vested in a trusteeship, the members of the trustee body being the Mayor of the city of Belleville, the Judge of the Hastings County Court and the commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Jack Lundberg of Belleville, Dominion president of the ANAF outlined the service record of the local service organization, stressing its work in youth and citizenship development.

He said that the veterans' association, although not officially owning their headquarters at 187 Front Street, had paid taxes on the structure since 1931 and over the years had spent more than $100,000 in maintenance.

Now, he said, the structure was in need of major repairs and other maintenance and said it was not reasonable that this should be done on a building which was not owned by the veterans.

He asked that the "loose trusteeship" be terminated, and that the building be officially conveyed to the unit.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said that to his knowledge the trustee body in which the building was vested had never met.

Council unanimously passed the resolution to officially convey the building too the ANAF.

Area United Church Men's Club Representatives Attend PEI Convention

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ray and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hamilton were delegates from the Westminister Men's Club, while Mr. and Mrs. George Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Myles and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Winter represented the Trenton clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Ross Goodmurphy, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Southorn and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Wilson attended from the Consecon club, and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Adams represented the Bay of Quinte conference on behalf of the National Association.

The convention opened on Friday at 1 p.m., with special greetings from general chairman, Dave Murphy, of Charlottetown, National president Jack Cleave, of Sarnia, Ont., and Her Worship, the Mayor of Charlottetown.

The convention leader was Ray Bonisteel, moderator of the CBC program, 'Man Alive', who, with his family, have recently moved to their farm near Trenton. Mr. Bonisteel gave two theme addresses, one on Friday evening, the other on Saturday morning, using as his topic, 'The Challenging C's of the 70's'.

The men concluded the Saturday morning session conducting convention business, while the women were entertained at a coffee party at Government House.

The Provincial government of Prince Edward Island donated seven buses for an afternoon tour of Green Gables, Cavendish Beach, Woodleigh Replicas, and were hosts to 470 people who attended the lobster supper at Summerside, where Premier Alex Campbell addressed the guests.

The delegates returned to Charlottetown, where they attended the Summer Festival, made possible by the Trinity Church Men's Club.

The communion service on Sunday morning was most impressive, as city police led over 100 cars from the University of Prince Edward Island to downtown Trinity United Church for the worship service led by the Moderator of the United Church, Rev. Dr. Moore, assisted by the Trinity United Church minister, convention leader Roy Bonisteel and newly elected National President of Men's Clubs, Douglas Phillips of Toronto.

The National Men's Club Committee was also installed at this special service by past National president, Lorne Thomley of Toronto.

The 1973 biennial convention will be held at the University Campus in the city of Winnipeg.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Douglas Nauss, Belleville wish to announce the engagement of their daughter Linda Ann Knox, to Thomas Clarence Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Johnston of Belleville. The marriage will take place October 2, 1971 at 2 p.m. in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. GARY ALAN ROBERTSON

Robertson – Knox

Rev. J. W. Lamb officiated at the wedding ceremony in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville on Saturday, August 28, when Leila Dolores Knox was united in marriage to Gary Alan Robertson of Toronto, son of Mrs. A. Robertson, Brantford and the late Mr. Robertson. Miss Linda Johnston presided at the organ and accompanied the soloist, Harold McNish.

Given in marriage by Mr. Steve Geneja, the bride wore a full length gown of bridal sole with the fitted bodice featuring a high collar and tapered lace sleeves extending from short cap sleeves of peau de soie. The hem of the gown was trimmed with lace to match the sleeves as was the elbow length veil of tulle which was caught to a floral headdress encrusted with tiny seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white daisy mums and yellow tea roses interspersed with baby's breath.

Miss Lee Stevens as maid of honor, wore a floor length gown of blue flowered voile with lace edged neckline and matching lace flounces at the hemline. The empire waistline was accented with blue velvet ribbon. The bridesmaid Miss Kathy Heeney and junior bridesmaid Miss Lynn Knox, sister of the bride were identically attired to the maid of honor but in green flowered voile. All carried bouquets of white daisy mums with matching flowers in their hair.

Wayne Robertson of Toronto attended his brother, while the ushers were Bill Shellington of Hamilton and Paul Knox, Belleville, brother of the bride.

At the reception in the church hall, the bride's mother wore a floor length gown of gold chiffon over gold taffeta in empire style and featuring pleated bell sleeves. Beige accessories and a green orchid corsage completed her ensemble. The bridegroom's mother wore a lilac shade lace ensemble with yellow and mauve accessories and a yellow orchid corsage.

On return Mr. and Mrs. Robertson will reside in Toronto.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. John Lyon, Belleville, are pleased to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Wanda Batson, to James' Kaiser, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kaiser, Belleville. The wedding will take place in Tabernacle United Church, on Saturday, October 16, at 3 p.m.

Two Special Events Mark 25th Anniversary

Two events in one day were held recently to mark the occasion of the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McFarlane of Melrose.

A family dinner party was held at the Sun Luck Gardens, Belleville and those present were their daughters Mrs. Charles (Janice) Callaghan, her husband and son Sean of Toronto and Gloria, Joyce and Carol; also Mrs. Roy Badgley, Miss Beatrice McFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Don McFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Max Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Badgley and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kimmerly.

On returning home they found about 45 friends and relatives there to greet them. Charles Bates was master of ceremonies and Mrs. Ken McMechan read a short address wishing the honored couple many more years of health and happiness. Mrs. V. Pascoe and Mrs. N. Demille presented them with a set of dishes and Earl Badgley and Harold Kimmerly presented them with a card table set on behalf of the family.

A barbecue supper was served and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Successful Living

Don't Compete: Co-operate Says Counsellor

By DORIS CLARK

I have told women who cause for marital or premarital counselling that, if they want a man, they have to show him that he is a man. Similarly, when men want a feminine partner, they must make her feel that she is a woman.

Rather than competing with each other, they should try together to find the best division of roles, regardless of whether these are traditionally masculine or feminine of this intermingling of roles, it is essential for marital partners to be compatible in all major aspects of living, in order to be able to work as a team and not against each other.

Certainly, the stigmas of the traditional division of roles have to be removed . . . Both partners can only perform at their highest level when they receive encouragement from each other and when they can adapt to the new concept of equality. — Steven Denner, Ph.D, MSW, Marital Counsellor, Scientific Introduction Centre, Toronto.

Dear Doris: I have been overweight since I was 13, and now that I am 18 I still have the same problem. I admit that it is because of the fact that I am always eating. If I go on a diet, it is fine for a while, but later I get a craving for all those foods I miss, and suddenly there goes my whole effort of dieting.

Of course, it does not help in the summer time when we have a lunch in the middle of the afternoon and then do the chores and not have supper until about 8.00 at night, since we live on a farm. Then, in the winter time, I miss having the lunch at 4.00, when supper is only a few hours away.

Three meals don't satisfy me; there just seems to be something lacking and that is probably that my body is not used to doing with less food than usual. — Weak Willed

Dear Weak Willed: You are probably eating at the same table with farm laborers. When delicious, calorie-laden food is set before you, it takes uncommon will power to look the other way.

Concentrate on protein content and cut down on the carbohydrates. Detergine to be selective and you can even nibble between meals.

Use a few tricks like pasting up a picture of a shapely movie actress on your mirror; record your measurements and weight beside a picture of yourself. Bring the records up to date weekly.

If you want chapter and verse of just what to eat, write in for my Simple Reducing Diet, enclosing 20 cents and a seven-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: Once in a doctor's office I read a poem, "God and the Doctor," the last two lines of which were:

"The danger past, both are alike requited:
God is forgotten, and the doctor slighted."

Anyone ever heard of it? — Mary

Dear Mary: Oh dear, I'm afraid it sounds a bit ungraciful. Maybe a reader can jolt us the rest.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief — here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. In pain-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions — even cases of long standing.

This was accomplished by a new healing substance, (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. Liver Lauded As A Weekly Must

By MARY MOORE

You encourage me to preach the gospel of good nutrition.

As you know our Canada's Food Rules list liver as a weekly must. So quietly I have been inserting methods of cooking it that will coax non-liver likers into tasting it.

Today I have a new idea for you that will attract even more converts. And, folks, it is comparatively low in cost for it will serve six.

CHICKEN LIVERS WITH MUSHROOMS (Serves 6)

3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 med. onion chopped (or ¼ cup bottled flakes)
½ lb. mushrooms, scrubbed and sliced
1 lb. chicken livers, each cut in half.
1 foil envelope chicken gravy mix
1 cup water
1 cup dairy sour cream
1½ cups raw long grain rice
3½ cups water
1 tsp. salt

In a large frying pan melt butter or margarine and in it sauté the onion until limp but not brown. Add mushrooms and livers and cook gently, stirring, for about 5 min. Sprinkle gravy mix over top and mix in. Add water and simmer 10 min. or until livers are barely cooked through, stirring two or three times. Just before serving time, stir in sour cream and heat to just below boiling.

Serve over hot fluffy rice prepared by pouring water over rice and salt in heavy pot 1 hr. before cooking time. One-half hr. before serving time, cover rice, turn heat on high and bring to boil. Turn off heat for 5 min. Do not lift lid. Turn on heat for 20 to 25 min. longer. Makes lovely separate grains of rice.

Ann Landers

Claims Father Right On Both Counts

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was very much interested in the letter from the mother of the 18-year-old boy who was having an affair with the 35-year-old woman next door. The boy's mother was not only mad at the neighbor but furious with her husband. When she told him what his son was doing he replied, "It's better than fooling around with a dumb 15-year-old. The boy goes away to college soon. He needs some experience." In my opinion the father was right on both counts.

ANN LANDERS

Forty-five years ago, when I was 16, I had a similar experience. A 34-year-old widow who lived downstairs in my mother's apartment house offered to help me with my homework. After my third visit she seduced me. My mother found out about it, went to the woman, thanked her and lowered her rent $10 a month.

If all mothers were as wise as mine we wouldn't have so many kids in trouble today. Why don't you spearhead a drive for better sex education via the Experienced-Older-Woman-Tutor System? It would be a public service, not only for the young boys who would profit from the experience, but for the young girls who should be let alone. It would also benefit the older women who are divorced, widowed or married to men who are incapacitated, lazy or busy. — C.T.A.

DEAR G.T.A.: Sorry, but I'm too busy right now to spearhead anything. Furthermore, I can think of a few people affiliated who might not go along on the "public service aspect" of your plan.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You once wrote in your column, "Everybody can learn from somebody." It is with this in mind that I write to you. I have been a cleaning woman for 22 years and I have learned something that many well educated, college trained people don't know. I have discovered a 100 per cent foolproof way to tell if people have money. Look in their broom closets.

Rich people have brat-up, worn-out vacuum sweepers, so ancient that parts are no longer available. Their floor mops shed all over because they are worn to shreds. Their waxers don't work and their wiping cloths and sponges are full of holes. Rich people think they are saving money by hanging onto crummy appliances and worn-out junk. They are wrong. A cleaning woman can get the place twice as tidy in half the time if she has modern, functional equipment. When will those dumbbells with the six-figure bank accounts and the 1931 junk wake up? — FIRED OF WORKING WITH RELICS.

* * *

DEAR TIRED: Hopefully when they read this. Are you awake out there, ladies? Check your broom closets and if you need new equipment, get it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In one of the doctor columns in the paper I read that it is not possible for a doctor to tell on examination whether a woman has had a baby. Several months ago you said just the opposite. Your answer was given as one of the reasons a girl should not try to cover up the fact that she has had an out-of-wedlock child when she marries.

How about a little more research? Either you are wrong or the doctor is. Who is it? — SAN FRAN NIT-PICKER.

DEAR S.F.: I'm right. I tripi-checked with three O.B.-Gyn specialists and they tell me that in 99 cases out of 100, the physician can determine whether or not a woman has had a child. If she had a Caesarean section the scar is evident. If the birth was by natural delivery the cervical opening is larger and sometimes fissured.

Tax Debate Starts

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"When I ask you how it looks, I want to hear something besides 'like five hours of hard work at the office'!"

Trudeau's Watered Wine Is Slop to Saltsman

OTTAWA (CP) — To Prime Minister Trudeau the government white paper on taxation was a batch of wine that he had to water down and swallow with a smile.

But NDP finance critic Max Saltsman suggested in the Commons Monday that the diluted end-product should be spit out instead.

The House began second-reading debate on the government's bill to revamp the taxation structure, which was given first reading in June following the budget.

When asked about the bill in a town meeting in Port Hope, Ont., last Friday, Mr. Trudeau said "we added a little water to the wine."

The bill was neither as radical or progressive as the white paper leading up to it had been, the prime minister said.

But criticism had been forthcoming from the provinces, the public and pressure groups, and the government had decided the final bill represented the best mix of policies.

Mr. Saltsman was more harsh. He said the government had "capitulated completely" on real tax reform and had caved in to the wishes of "that very small group at the top."

Although Mr. Saltsman's views on taxation reform differ with those of Marcel Lambert, Conservative finance critic, he voiced support for an amendment offered by Mr. Lambert that would kill the giveaway.

The proposed amendment, which survived a lengthy procedural scuffle, would have the House decline second reading, "to a bill which does not provide sufficient stimulus to the economy . . . with appropriate tax cuts and incentives, does not contain adequate tax exemptions and is not calculated to materially improve business and labor conditions."

Mr. Saltsman said that when the white paper came out, with its "white paper" the NDP had kept relatively quiet—because it had seen hope for at least some tax reform.

But all hopes for reform had disappeared when the government had later presented this "thoroughly-bad legislation."

Debate on the bill, which will continue today, is expected to last at least a month, including committee-of-the-whole consideration.

Mr. Saltsman said the bill was still loaded in favor of industries that stripped off the country's raw materials. Such industries were favored over manufacturers who created more jobs.

The argument is identical to that former Liberal Minister Eric Kierans has made since quitting the cabinet last spring.

Mr. Trudeau also said Friday he liked Mr. Kierans' economics but not his politics. Pressure groups had raised a "helluva stink," Mr. Trudeau said, when the white paper proposed to cut back on concessions to non-renewable resource industries.

The bill takes a much more gradual approach as that direction, cutting off oil and gas depletion allowances in 1976 and replacing the three-year tax holiday for new mines with speeded-up depreciation write-offs.

Mr. Saltsman said favoritism for extractive industries represented "national suicide."

No Hint Seen Of U.S. Levy On Aided Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says there is no indication that the United States will slap extra duties on imports from Canadian firms receiving grants from the governments's proposed $2-million fund, which is aimed at protecting employers from the U.S. supplementary duty.

"We have always felt . . . that it would not take that decision," he told the Commons Monday.

The remarks came in response to a question from Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin, who referred to a statement by a U.S. treasury undersecretary that countervailing duties against the Canadian goods were possible, depending how the Canadian government dispensed the funds.

The bill setting up the grant program—intended to offset a slowdown in Canadian production and employment created by the month-old 10-per-cent U.S. surcharge—now is being studied by a Commons comittee.

Mr. Trudeau also said the government has no intention "to draw away from any of the benefits which have been so great" under the Canada-U.S. auto pact.

That was in reply to a question by Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby), who referred to a U.S. report to President Nixon urging reconsal of the pact's special safeguards protecting Canadian auto production under the agreement.

But the prime minister said the government was "always ready to discuss the application of the auto pact, as provided in the pact itself.

"We are assessing our whole position," Mr. Trudeau said.

"These pronouncements are not government policy. We are reacting to the policy that has been established by the president of the United States and not to hypothetical suppositions by various people in that government."

On the same basis, Mr. Trudeau declined invitations to outline government policy in case the U.S. implements President Nixon's proposal to allow U.S. firms to set up tax-exempt subsidiaries to increase U.S. exports.

"Our position cannot be made on a United States program which is not law as yet but is just something that is talked about," he said when Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) raised that issue.

Government Planes' Travels Are Reported

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has logged 101,090 miles on government planes since the June, 1968, general election.

A Commons return has been filed for Robert Coates, Conservative MP for Cumberland-Colchester North, who keeps close tabs on Mr. Trudeau's travels.

Mr. Trudeau listed a trip to Nassau last November as "personal." Also listed as "personal" was a trip to Vancouver last March. That was when Mr. Trudeau married Margaret Sinclair of Vancouver.

It took the government 11 months to reply to another question by Mr. Coates concerning travel expenses of all cabinet ministers in 1969-70.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said he took 75 trips on transport department planes in the year. This cost was not included in his travel expenses of $2,144.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said he used government planes 21 times. Their use was not included in his travel expenses of $6,015.

Only three other ministers replied to the question about use of government planes: Environment Minister Jack Davis, seven times, then defence minister Leo Cadieux, seven, and then communications minister Eric Kierans, three.

Lortie's Trial Delayed a Day

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie's trial on a charge of kidnapping Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister murdered last October, was adjourned until today so that a defence lawyer can be found.

Lortie, a 19-year-old student, was scheduled to go on trial Monday for kidnapping. One of the four men charged with the kidnap-murder of Mr. Laporte, he is to stand trial on the murder charge later.

Loyalist College Frosh Takes to Boondocks

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Loyalist freshmen learned yesterday morning that nothing, especially the privilege of going to school, comes free, as they tramped across the "back 40" for the initiation exercises.

Garbed in jeans and T-shirts, wide - eyed first - year students took to the marshes where senior students, equipped with fire hydrants, mud ponds and cameras, waited in noisy anticipation of their quarry.

At double time, the freshmen were paraded through the mire behind the college, and subjected to good - natured jeers and indignities.

"This a tradition for the new students to be initiated," said one senior. "It was done to me and I suffered no pains, mental or physical, from it."

After running through a three - foot - deep, 20 - foot - long mud pond, one female participant candidly said, "to think this morning I was worried if it was going to rain today."

If it was any consolation to the freshmen after getting muddied in the pond, the fire hydrant, shooting a 20 foot stream of water, acted as a shower as it whipped the feet out from under many a young miss and mister as they passed through its path.

Not all the activities called for the "freshers" to get wet.

"In an attempt to create a well rounded course for these people, we have taken them from the ground level and raised their point of view," said an almost hysterically laughing senior.

"Being the most dangerous section of the course, most of the seniors have positioned themselves under a rope bridge as spotters in case someone slips," said Hugh Pepper, student services officer for the college. "The obstacle course is designed to have fun. It's a yearly thing, and students coming into the school expect and enjoy the rigors of the outing."

The free-wheeling, easy-going atmosphere of the initiation was cut short when a casualty was reported.

Thomas Kennedy, 21, a first-year student in Assessment Administration, fell from a log nailed between two trees, injuring his back.

A hospital spokesman said while he has broken a vertebrae in his back, he is in little pain, and is resting comfortably.

Members of the student council say "it was a freak accident." Spotters were beneath the log at all times as a safety precaution. He twisted when he fell into the spotter's arms, and this is where the injury was sustained."

The only other accident during the initiation exercises was a bee sting.

"Not too much activity has been planned for the frosh Monday evening," said a student council spokesman. "We thought we would give them a chance to rest up."

A sleep-in has been arranged for the first and second year girls in the student lounge. "It's sort of a get to know your neighbour thing," said one spokesman.

"So far, there has been no mention of what the boys had planned for the evening," said the same spokesman.

Other activities, which will be staged throughout the week include, go-cart races, folk singing, a barbecue and a dance.

EMO Co-ordinator Raps Rock Fest

Rock festivals such as staged on the Quinlin farm in Madoc township early in August get something less than a stamp of approval from Quinte area emergency measures co-ordinator Angus B. Duffy.

In a report to Belleville city council, Mr. Duffy says that preparations for the festival by the promoters were most inadequate with no real attempt being made to meet requirements of the medical officer of health for water, sanitary and other facilities.

He said peak attendance at the festival was about 7,000 but if 10,000 had turned up a critical situation would have developed.

An attendance of 20,000 would have resulted in disaster, the EMO co-ordinator said.

Local officials did everything possible under the circumstances, with MOH officials, the St. John Ambulance, provincial police, and the provincial department of health services providing excellent ar-

[illegible] of Mr. Duffy, however, the local township council has been vindicated in its opposition to the festival, and judging from comments said such an event would not take place again in this area.

"There can be no justification for the considerable expenditure of public money on this sort of thing as it is a money-making project by the promoters who completely disregard the normal acceptable requirements and standards of law, order and public safety," Mr. Duffy concluded.

Body Recovered

FRANKFORD (Staff) — A post mortem will be held today at Trenton Memorial Hospital to determine the cause of death of a former Frankford resident whose body was recovered from the Trent River here.

Missing since Friday, Robert McFarland, 52, of Oshawa, was found dead in the river above No. 6 powerhouse at Frankford by a provincial police dragging crew that had been searching for him since Sunday when he was reported missing.

Farmers Continue Boycott

On the weekend of September 3 and 4 farm representatives handed out leaflets explaining the reason for the Kraft boycott at supermarkets at 13 Ontario centres, including Belleville, Trenton and Kingston.

Last weekend boycott activity was continued at those centres, and also at Walkerton, Hanover and Mitchell.

The aim of the boycott is to gain the right to collective bargaining for dairymen who now have no say about the price they are paid for milk.

Farm union officials say that customer response to the boycott has been quite favorable.

700 Liberals Turn Out

Cole Upsets Russell for Nomination

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

COBOURG — Glenn Cole, operator of a large dairy farm at Plainville, last night captured the Liberal nomination for the October 21 provincial election in Northumberland.

A newcomer to political campaigning, Cole won out over Robin Russell of Cobourg, candidate in the last election in October 1967, and Cobourg high school teacher, Wilfred Huskilson.

It took two ballots to secure the victory for the businessman - farmer before the 700 - plus assembly here.

Robin Russell, former special assistant to Opposition Leader Robert Nixon was eliminated from the contest on the first ballot, taking only 173 of the 346 delegate votes, compared to Huskilson's 181 and Cole's 182.

For Russell, it was a crushing defeat; he had aspired to political office from childhood, having organized all the provincial party's major policy conferences in the last five years.

The Huskilson support baffled many here. Although nominated by Cobourg Mayor Jack Heenan, the geography teacher and former riding association president had fallen into disfavor with the Liberal organization for only patching things up in the weeks before last night's convention.

In his straight - shooting address, he mentioned, "some of you are concerned that I negated my Liberalism by tearing up my (party membership) card in '68 and leaving the meeting held in this auditorium."

He emphasized that his long - standing disagreements with Northumberland - Durham MP Russell Honey were now settled. "The federal member and I have buried the hatchet," he said.

Huskilson did well but not well enough to overturn the large Cole support.

Several developments of the past week became factors in the outcome.

By riding policy, 25 per cent of the delegates can come from outside Northumberland and Huskilson had intimated publicly that the convention might be packed against him.

With Robin Russell staging his 30th birthday party after convention proceedings, the possibility was presented that many guests from Toronto would move in, buy party cards and vote for him. Likewise, it was expected friends of Cole would be coming from Durham to augment his support.

In an eleventh hour meeting of the riding executive, a decision was made to abolish, or at least suspend, the 25 per cent visitor vote.

Whether the ruling hurt Russell's chances is uncertain but it did not substantially effect support for Cole.

Dr. Ian Wilson of Cobourg, vice - president of the Liberal Party of Ontario threw his support and influence behind him and his wife, Mrs. Kathy Wilson, seconded his nomination, saying "I will be working for Mr. Cole." The Wilsons had also staged a large garden party here in his honor to which invitations were handed out at Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's Port Hope town meeting.

Cole, with his wife, Mildred and his sons, operates one of the area's largest dairy farms and is the fourth generation to hold the property established in 1811.

He has been active in farm marketing organizations, serving as chairman of the Ontario Cream Board and Ontario Milk Producers. Additionally, he is a founding member of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and has presented Canadian farmers at a number of international conventions.

In his address, Cole charged that the Ontario government had neglected small businessmen and farmers. "They have not developed a climate in which the farmer and small businessman can grow . . ." it is imperative that the government assist the growth of these instead of catering to large interests," he said.

He explained that he wanted to represent the farmer at Queen's Park because, he said, "the Legislature has almost no farm voice."

Despite the rural emphasis, he stressed that he wanted to help urbanites too, "I know what marble and concrete can do to a person," he said.

Northumberland Conservatives will gather at Warkworth town hall this evening for their nominating convention. Guest speaker will be Agriculture Minister William Stewart.

Contract to Be Split

Trunk Sanitary Sewer Bid Exceeds Estimate

The Ontario Water Resources Commission will recall tenders for the construction of the proposed trunk sanitary sewer up the bed of the Moira River.

The reason: Only one tender for the project was received and the price bid was "considerably" higher than the estimate.

So, on the recommendation of City Engineer Wilbur Purcell, the project will be split and tenders called on the individual sections in the hope of attracting more bidders.

The estimated cost of the trunk sewer to run from the pumping station at the corner of Front and Dundas to Adam Street was given as $1:170,000.

The feeling of engineers now is that the over-all project may have been too large for many contractors to consider a bid and to encourage more bidders, the suggestion is for the contract to be divided.

Plans call for construction of a 42-inch sewer from lower Front Street as far as College Street with a 33-inch pipe to be installed between College and Adam Streets.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission will finance construction of the sewer and recover its cost on a "use" basis.

Purpose of the sewer is to serve the Hillcrest area, the city's northeast industrial area and built-up areas of adjacent Thurlow township.

Robby Joins Club

"I thought about standing there and watching it, or doing cart wheels or shaking hands," said Baltimore Orioles' star Frank Robinson after belting his 500th homer Monday night off Detroit's Fred Scherman and joining an exclusive club with only 10 other members.

Robinson didn't do any of those things, but he did clap hands as he circled the bases with his two-run clout in the ninth before a few faithful fans who remained to see the Orioles drop a 10-8 decision to Detroit Tigers in the second game of a twilight doubleheader.

Robinson belted No. 489 in the first game as Baltimore won 9-1 and moved closer to clinching the American League's Eastern Division pennant.

Elsewhere in the American League Monday night, Chicago White Sox trounced Milwaukee Brewers 6-3, New York Yankees topped Boston Red Sox 4-0 and California beat Minnesota 3-2 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing a 1-0 decision to the Twins in the nightcap. Rain washed out Washington at Cleveland.

Oakland Athletics stopped Kansas City Royals 3-1 in 11 innings and moved a clinching in the West. The Athletics, who haven't won a title since capturing the American League pennant as Philadelphia Athletics in 1931, cut the magic number to two games and can win it tonight with a victory over the Royals.

The crowd of 13,000 had considerably thinned by the time Robinson stepped to the plate in the last inning of the second game.

Scherman jammed the right-fielder with a pitch, but Robinson managed to pull it into the stands.

"I didn't think I had enough on it," said Robinson. "But it should have been easy to catch because it came down like a parachute."

Oakland just about cinched the West Division with its victory over the runnerup Royals as Jim (Catfish) Hunter joined Vida Blue as the Athletics second 20-game winner.

Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Francisco 5-4 in a tension-filled National League game Monday night, posting their seventh victory in a row and cutting the Giants West Division lead to two games. . .

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates opened a 6½-game lead over St. Louis in the East, beating Chicago Cubs 5-1; while Philadelphia Phillies was beating the Cardinals 6-5 in 10 innings, Houston Astros edged San Diego Padres 3-2, Cincinnati Reds slipped by Atlanta Braves 2-1 in 13 innings and New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 4-2 in a rain-shortened five-inning contest.

Two-run homers by Richie Allen and Willie Davis and a solo shot by Willie Crawford gave the Dodgers all their runs while Jim Ray Hart had a round-tripper for the Giants but that's only technical stuff.

What really happened is that Bill Singer of Los Angeles and Juan Marichal of San Francisco staged a beanball war, Billy Buckner tried to talk to Marichal on the mound with a bat in his hand and the umpires decided several players would be better off out of sight . . . of each other.

"The wind blew me all over the place early in the game," said Singer, who hit Willie Mays and Chris Speier with pitches. "I was just trying to throw strikes. I was obvious I wasn't trying to hit anyone."

Nevertheless, Marichal brushed Singer back twice in the next inning, the fifth, then repeated the act with the next batter, Maury Wills, and finally hit Buckner with a fast ball.

"I just went out to talk with him," said Buckner, who had to be restrained when he rushed the Giants' ace right-hander. "I don't need a bat to handle him but I couldn't lift my arm after being hit and I needed the bat in case somebody wanted to take a swing at me."

Players from both teams poured onto the field, and although no punches were thrown, it took the umpires quite a while to remind them that the idea was to play ball, not brawl.

When the game resumed Buckner, Marichal and Giants pitcher Jerry Johnson, who charged home plate umpire Shag Crawford, were out of it.

And except for the fact that it was only the second time the Dodgers had beaten Marichal in 13 Candlestick decisions, it was your average baseball game.

Willie Stargell of the Pirates snapped a scoreless tie with his 45th homer in the seventh inning before the Bucs pulled away as Steve Blass recorded his 16th victory with a five-hitter. .

The Cardinals couldn't stop Phillies rookie Willie Montanez, who belted two home runs including the game-winner in the 10th inning. His two-run shot in the seventh tied the game after Joe Torre, the major league leader in runs-batted in, drove in three to help St. Louis to a 5-3 lead.

San Diego's Clay Kirby pitched 7 1-3 hitless innings, lost his no-hitter on Johnny Edwards' double that started the Astros' game-tying two-run eighth, then lost the game in the ninth as Cesar Cedeno raced home from second on Garry Jestadt's error at third base.

Expo Chances Doused by New York Downpour

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Jorgensen climaxed a three-run outburst in the first inning with a two-run homer that powered New York Mets to a 4-2 victory over Montreal Expos Monday in the rain-shortened first game of a scheduled twi-night doubleheader.

Bud Harrelson singled, stole second and scored on Ed Kranepool's single before Jorgensen unloaded his fourth homer over the centre-field wall off Carl Morton, 10-15. The Mets added a run in the fifth on singles by Kranepool and Jorgensen and Jerry Grote's infield out.

Ray Sadecki, 7-8, allowed a first-inning run when he hit Ron Hunt with a pitch—the 44th time this year the Expos' infielder has been struck—and gave up singles to Ron Woods and Bob Bailey. They also scored in the fifth on Rusty Staub's double and Gary Sutherland's single.

You're miles ahead with Firestone Riding System Service

"Here's the low-cost way to save money on tires."

"What do you figure your front tires? Forty dollars? Fifty? Maybe more?

"Well, what's how much you could save yourself by coming in for the $5.88 wheel alignment.

"You see, when your front wheels are out of alignment, the tire tread will be scuffed off in uneven patches. There may be plenty of miles left in the cord body and in some parts of the tread. But if you've got bald patches caused by poor wheel alignment, the tires have to be scrapped.

"Protecting your tires isn't the only reason to come in for a wheel alignment. Your car will ride better. And handle better too.

"Who needs a wheel alignment? Everybody does, at one time or another. Because as time goes by, normal driving conditions put the front wheels out of true.

"Since correct wheel alignment is so important to you, it is also very important who looks after it for you.

"I think it makes sense to see the Riding System specialists at Firestone. We concentrate on this part of your car. Brakes. Shocks. Balancing. Alignment. And tires, of course.

"As tire people, we have a very special reason to be concerned about your wheel alignment.

"We have to see tires wear out before their time. Even if they're not ours."

No Knocked Knees

Belleville's Terry Wellesley will get the first real test of his injured right knee this Sunday in action against the Toronto Argonauts. The Ottawa Rough Rider halfback was sidelined for ten weeks with strained ligaments suffered in a training camp scrimmage. Wellesley saw limited action in Saturday's loss to Montreal, but expects to be used more extensively against the first-place Argos.

Mulvihill Survives First Cut

Peterborough Petes may not be standing pat defensively this season, but the OHA Junior A pennant winners of last year are certainly holding a full house on their blue line corps.

The Petes still have a dozen defencemen in their camp, including three regulars from last season and a number of graduates from the Canada Games gold medalist Junior B Lions.

This defensive wealth is great for coach Roger Neilson, but pretty tough on Belleville's John Mulvihill, who is hoping to grab a regular spot with the "A" Club.

A graduate of the Belleville Minor Hockey ranks and a standout performer the last two seasons with the Junior B squad, Mulvihill certainly isn't lacking in talent to hold his own in the Pete's parade.

The 17-year-old rearguard was in the top 30 scorers in the Eastern Ontario Junior B league last season, with his eight goals and 25 assists making him the second highest scoring defenceman in the six-team league.

Captain of last year's Fairway club, and winner of Belleville's rookie - of - the - year award in 1970 and most gentlemanly player title last season, Mulvihill managed to survive a weekend cut which saw 22 of the original 43 hopefuls pared from the Peterborough roster.

JOHN MULVIHILL

The Petes, who were originally supposed to hold their training camp in Trenton were able to use the Peterborough Memorial Centre instead when the Senior A lacrosse Lakers were eliminated from the playoffs last week.

Trenton hockey fans will still have a chance to view the team in pre-season play, however, in a trio of exhibition bouts scheduled for the Trenton Community Gardens. Games are slated for the 19th, 20th and 22nd with the Petes meeting Oshawa, Ottawa and Niagara Falls.

Peterborough will be making their season debut out of the training camp following tonight's scrimmage.

Cannifton Repeats

The South Hastings Baseball League season ended in a blaze of anonymity Saturday night because the losers wanted to forget about it all.

Cannifton Plane's Concrete won their second consecutive league championship by blanking Read 7-0 to win the league final playoff series four games to two, with two games tied.

The pennant-winning Planes at one time trailed 3-0 in the series.

No report of the game was submitted by home team Read.

Returns from Knee Surgery

Wellesley Welcome Sight for Riders

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Everyone who follows the Canadian Football League knows that the Ottawa Rough Rider offence is in pretty sorry shape right now, but not everyone knows just how sorry. For instance, what other team in Canada has to wire their running backs together.

Well, maybe things aren't quite as bad as that, but right now halfback Terry Wellesley is operating on a right knee that contains equal amounts of cartilage and wire.

The former Belleville high school football star saw action in the final four minutes of Saturday's 25-6 loss to the Montreal Alouettes after sitting out ten weeks with a damaged right knee.

"It feels pretty good right now," he says of the injury. "About the only thing wrong with it is that there are still a few pieces of wire that broke off inside and haven't worked their way out through the skin yet."

The sophmore running back injured the knee in one of the last training camp scrimmages, when he was hit from the side by a tackler. At first, the injury was diagnosed as torn ligaments, which would have sidelined him for the entire season, but surgery showed that the damage was confined to strained ligaments.

"There wasn't any swelling, so I was hoping that it was just a strain. They took out the cartilage and put the leg in a cast and I was out of the hospital in a week," he says of the injury.

The injury was not only a major personal blow, but it severely hampered the Rough Riders who had been counting on him to flapply outside speed to their attack after an excellent rookie year and a strodg training camp showing. Head coach Jack Gotta, at the time of the injury, predicted that, "He has the potential to be a super back for us."

Instead of picking up touchdowns, however, Wellesley has spent the season picking up weights. "The leg was a couple of inches smaller than my other one, because I hadn't been able to use it for a while, but I worked out a lot on the weight machine and now I can lift more with the injured leg than I can with the other one," explains Terry.

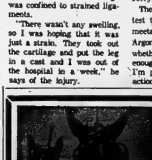
The injury should get a stiff test this weekend as Ottawa meets the first place Toronto Argonauts. "I don't know whether or not I'm in good enough shape to start, but I'm pretty sure that I'll see action against Toronto," says Wellesley, "I just hope that I don't have to run much wide stuff."

He explains that the re-adjustment to regular play might be even tougher mentally than physiologic, "I didn't really believe I'd think about it (the injured knee) when I came back, but you do sometimes," he explains. "When you're flanked outside it's all right because it's a one - on - one situation, and when you're pass blocking you can protect yourself, but on end runs you're wide open to a good shot."

The crucial test will come Sunday afternoon at Lansdowne Park and Terry will be hoping it's the Argos, not his knee that end up with their wires crossed.

Ticats Trade Taylor

HAMILTON (CP) — The Tiger-Cats traded flanker Bobby Taylor and the rights to halfback Gene Moore to Edmonton Eskimos today for future considerations in a Canadian Football League transaction.



Taylor, an 11-year veteran, is fourth in CFL career receptions with 434. However, he has caught only 11 passes in six games with the Eastern Conference club so far this season and coach Al Dorow has decided he wants more speed.

His possibilities include American Tommie Smith, Olympic 200-metre champion, and Lewis Porter, formerly of Kansas City Chiefs, both here on five-day trials.

Moore, fourth draft choice of San Francisco in 1968, came to Hamilton last week on a five-day trial from New Orleans Saints.

Winner In Dark

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Buchanan was seeing the world today from behind closed doors, but Ismael Laguna wasn't seeing it at all.

Buchanan, who successfully defended for the second time the title he won from Laguna in a disputed fight almost a year ago, could even joke about the punches legally thrown that had brought blood from both eyes and the punches illegally thrown that had battered his kidneys.

"I feel," said Buchanan after the fight, "like my mother has given me a beating. I have a terrible sore back."

"I didn't think my eye was too bad," said Buchanan. "I was never in trouble at any time. I didn't feel hurt on any occasion."

He was a unanimous winner, Referee Devlin scoring it 9-6, and Judges Harold Lederman and Tony Costellano going for Buchanan 10-5 and 8-6-1, respectively.

It was the 41st victory in 42 fights for Buchanan, who weighed 133½ pounds. Laguna, who weighed 135, lost his ninth against 64 victories and one draw.

The fight was watched by a crowd of 13,311 at Madison Square Garden and grossed $148,842—Buchanan taking away a guarantee of $100,000 that was a record for a lightweight title fight.

Can't Be Scalped

The University of Delaware football captain, Ralph Borgese, shaves his head leaving only a lock of hair to get himself in mental condition for the coming season. Should the Blue Hens get "scalped" on the gridiron their opponents won't have much to show for their effort when they get to the 228 lb. defensive back. (AP Photo).

East Enjoys 2-1 Edge in Lacrosse Finals

BRANTFORD (CP) — Paul Suggate scored four goals Monday night to lead Brantford Warriors to a convincing 15-4 first-game victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies in the Mann Cup senior lacrosse final.

The series resumes here Wednesday night.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Defending champion Windsor Warlocks scored an easy 21-10 victory over Burnaby Kokanees in the opening game of the Canadian Senior B lacrosse finals here Monday night.

Second game of the best-of-seven series will be played here Wednesday night.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The Roadrunners of Richmond, B.C., took the opening game of the Minto Cup Canadian junior lacrosse final Monday night, edging Peterborough PCO 16-14 in overtime.

The second game of the best-of-seven series will be Wednesday night.

Wilkinson Finished

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions announced Monday that quarterback Tom Wilkinson has torn a ligament in his right knee and will be lost to the club for the remainder of the 1971 season. Wilkinson, who came to the Lions this year from Toronto Argonauts, suffered the injury in Sunday's game against Calgary, won by the Stampeders 38-10.

* * *

OTTAWA (CP) — Jerry Cole, a four-year veteran of the National Football League, starts a five-day trial with the Ottawa Rough Riders today. Cole, 25, a running back, played three years with Baltimore Colts and a year with Pittsburgh Steelers.

CFL Defences Stealing Show

TORONTO (CP) — Defensive squads have been more important than ever in Canadian Football League games during the first half of the 1971 season.

On Labor Day weekend, Hamilton Tiger-Cats defeated Toronto Argonauts 20-17, mainly by virtue of a defence which intercepted four Toronto passes. In another game, Ottawa Rough Riders had almost no offensive power but their defence picked up six Montreal Alouette fumbles and three intercepted passes for a 46-17 victory.

However, CFL statistics released this week, compared with those at the same time last year, give no indication of improved defensive play.

Offensive squads of the nine CFL teams show a tendency this year to fumble more often. They dropped 113 fumbles this year and lost 78 of them, compared with 99 fumbles and 65 lost at the same point last year.

Argonauts rookie quarterback Joe Theismann leads the Eastern Conference in passing yardage with 1,360 from 88 completions out of 126 attempts. Montreal's Sonny Wade ranks second with 1,136 yards from 83 completions and 168 attempts. The pair also lead in interceptions, Theismann with 13 and Wade with 12.

In the EFC rushing department, Argo halfback Leon McQuay continues to lead with 514 yards in 109 carries. At his average rate of 106 yards per game, McQuay should reach the 1,000 mark long before the season ends but he is still a long way from the single season rushing record.

Earl Lunsford, new general manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, set that mark in 1961 with 1,794 yards rushing for Calgary Stampeders.

In scoring, McQuay with seven touchdowns now is tied with team-mate Ivan MacMillan with 42 points; 10 behind EFC leader Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Lights Went Out

LONDON (CP) — The ornate Edwardian chandeliers of the Grand Room in Governor House blinked out, for Montreal's Bill Drover at 26 seconds of the first round Monday night.

Heavyweight Bill did not have enough artillery for Irishman Danny McAlinden and the redhead, after flooring Drover in the first round, polished him off with a flurry of rights in the fourth.

"I guess I just didn't have it tonight," he said later.

In two previous fights here, the 26-year-old Drover has looked good. Last February he fought a sharp draw with Joe Bugner, who later lifted the British, Commonwealth and European titles from Henry Cooper.

He lost a close points decision to Jack Bodell, who fights Bugner for his titles later this year.

The 23-year-old McAlinden's decisive win Monday night sets him up for a fight with the Bugner-Bodell winner, a bout that Drover probably would have had he managed to take the Coventry-based McAlinden.

But Drover was not interested in the picture Monday night when, after a swinging start, he stopped a solid right to the chin in the first round and hit the deck.

After that, Drover was obviously groggy, though he tried to fight his way out of trouble.

By the third, he had a cut under the left eye and the end looked near.

In the fourth, a series of hooks to the body brought his hands down and "dangerous Danny" closed him to the end was with two rights to the head.

Yaz Gets Rest

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox' veteran slugger, was sidelined Monday because of an intestinal virus which forced him out of the lineup in Detroit Sunday. Trainer Buddy Leroux said Yaz will be out two or three days.

Mosport Race Cylinder Duel

TORONTO (CP) — It could be a contest between the standard V-8 engines and the 12-cylinder power plants when the Grand Prix of Canada for Formula 1 cars gets away at Mosport Park next Sunday.

Organizers for the $155,000 race, 16th of a series of 11 major events in the round-the-world contest for the world driver's championship, announced Monday 26 Formula 1 pilots will go after the money.

But only 24 will be allowed on the grid for the standing start in the 200-mile run over the 2.46-mile Mosport road track. Twenty-two drivers have been assured of places but four reserve entries will have to qualify for the remaining spots.

Assured of a place is Scotsman Jackie Stewart, who wrapped up the world championship Aug. 1 after five victories in his British Tyrrell-Ford. Also assured of places are the 13 drivers behind Stewart in world standings who have a mathematical chance of becoming runner-up as result of the Canadian event and the United States Grand Prix at Watkins Glen, N.Y., Oct. 2.

Going into next Sunday's race, the Scotsman has 51 points—Formula 1 points are awarded on a 9-6-4-3-2-1 basis for the first six places in each race. Far behind him is Ronnie Peterson of Sweden whose March-Ford helped him amass 23 points. In third place is Jacky Ickx of Belgium, winner of the last two Canadian events, with 19 points.

Emerson Fittipaldi of Brasil in a British Lotus-Ford, and Frenchman Francois Cevert in a Tyrrell-Ford are tied for fourth place with 16 points each.

As American racing driver Mario Andretti put it Monday, motor racing now is so competitive that eight or 10 drivers will qualify within seconds each seconds of each other. So the contest over the hilly, twisting Mosport circuit could be between the V-8 and 12-cylinder power plants.

The year 1971 was to have been the year of the 12 but Stewart, with a British-tuned Ford V-8 at his back, left the pack behind in five races.

Ferrari, which this year sports an unique flat 12, won in two GPs, BRM of Britain, with V-12s, also won two.

In Sunday's race, 17 cars will be V-8 powered while there will be nine 12-cylinder machines, three Ferraris, four BRMs and two French Matra-Fords.

As Andretti said at his Monday news conference, the Ferrari engine is "very strong at 500 horsepower—which is a lot of horsepower for a three-litre engine."

The Federation Internationale d'Automobile, world motorsport authority, limits the Formula 1 engine to three litres—a little more than half the size of the motor in the average family car.

Three former world champions are entered in Sunday's race.

Graham Hill of Britain, who won it in 1962 and 1968, will drive a Brabham with a Ford V-8. New Zealander Denis Hulme, 1967 titlist, will drive a Ford-powered McLaren. Briton John Surtees, 1964 champ, will drive a Ford-powered car of his own design.

The only two Canadians entered are on the reserve list. George Eaton of Toronto, only Canadian with Formula 1 experience, must qualify in a BRM. Fornter Montrealer — from Lachine, now, who has been driving in Formula II in Europe this summer, will try in a Ford-powered March.

Formula I cars, often called the ultra-roughbreds of motorsport, first came to Canada when the FIA awarded this country a spot in 1967 in honor of its Centennial.

They are light, open-wheeled, single-seater cars able to move at speeds up to 200 miles an hour and they out-brake and out-corner other cars.

Since 1967, the Grand Prix of Canada has alternated between Mosport, 45 miles northeast of here, and Le Circuit st Mont Tremblant, Que.

Betting Oddity Sparked Riot

MONTREAL (CP) — An investigation into the Sept. 6 riot at Blue Bonnets Raceway that caused more than $50,000 damage to race track property has found no collusion or betting dogs.

In a statement released Monday, three stewards said racing officials had questioned everyone involved with the race either directly or indirectly; including trainers, jockeys, the starter and assistant starters.

Jockey Regains Consciousness

MONTREAL (CP) — Marty Gibson, the 22-year-old jockey from Peterborough, regained consciousness Monday and has been removed from the critical list at the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Gibson had been unconscious since Sept. 3 when he was in a pileup at Blue Bonnets Raceway.

His mount, Rapid Charger, clipped another horse at the clubhouse turn in the six-furlong race and collided with Amber Page, ridden by Joan O'Shea.

His condition was described as satisfactory.

Gibson suffered a fractured skull and a broken collarbone in the accident.

Miss O'Shea suffered a fractured leg.

Ticket sellers and mutuel fashwey.

Rampaging race fans, angered over a low quinella payoff in the seventh race of the Labor Day thoroughbred card, shattered plate glass windows, burned benches, forced cancellation of the final two races of the night, and finally had to be dispersed by the Montreal police department's riot squad.

The quinella payoff was $146.80 on Miss Rupers, a 45-to-1 longshot, and Third Bout, a 30-to-1 pick. Miss Rupers paid respectful prices of $62.80 and $22.60, while Third Bout returned $25.70.

The quinella pool is operated separately from the mutuel betting. Bettors must pick the two top horses to win in the quinella pool.

Blue Bonnets officials said after the riot that $37,220 was wagered on the quinella, which, after deduction of 19 per cent for federal and provincial taxes, left a net pool of $30,154.

The winning quinella combination returned 17 $10 tickets and 120 $2 tickets.

Summing up, steward Ed McKinney said:

"After all the evidence we have looked at and the countless number of persons we have questioned, our results are that this is simply an oddity and a betting freak."

Pensioners and Poor Will Get Free Medicare

TORONTO (CP) — All old-age pensioners in Ontario and 350,000 low-income persons will be added to the list of those who receive free medical and hospital-insurance care, Premier William Davis announced Monday.

This means 1.5 million persons, roughly one in six, will pay no premiums to either the Ontario Hospital Services Commission or the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan.

Mr. Davis also said medical and health premiums will be reduced for all Ontario residents. For the average family of four, the saving will amount to $45 annually; a single person will save $4.80.

Mr. Davis told a news conference the cabinet rejects free medical and hospital care for the entire population.

The revenue lost in premiums would have required "a massive increase" in provincial income tax or retail sales tax or both or an "astronomical" increase in corporation tax with a resulting adverse effect on costs and prices, he said.

Instead, the cabinet opted for some reductions in premiums for everyone in the province.

The changes the cabinet agreed on Monday will cost the provincial treasury $127 million which Mr. Davis said he is satisfied can be achieved "within existing levels of taxation."

About 250,000 persons 65 and older will receive free medical and hospital coverage starting next Jan. 1.

About 350,000 low-income persons will receive free coverage beginning next April 1, bringing the total, including those previously exempted, to 1.5 million.

The province will pay half the premiums for an additional 225,000 persons, bringing the total to 350,000 who receive premium assistance.

And for those who pay the full premiums there will be monthly savings starting next April 1 on the combined medical-hospital bill of $3.75 a family, 80 cents a couple and 40 cents for a single person.

Previously a family paid $14.75 a month to OHSIP and $11 a month to OHSIC for a ward room. A couple paid $11.80 to OHSIP and $11 to OHSC and a single person $3.80 to OHSIP and $3.50 to OHSC. Semi-private or private coverage was higher.

Publishers to Be Helped

TORONTO (CP) — A capital aid program to help save Ontario-based Canadian publishing firms was promised Monday by Premier William Davis.

He told a news conference the cabinet has decided to act immediately because of the possibility that a provincial election would seriously postpone government-action. Later in the day, the premier called an election for Oct. 21.

Nixon and Lewis Welcome Election

TORONTO (CP) — The leaders of Ontario's two opposition parties welcomed Premier William Davis' decision Monday to call a provincial election Oct. 21, saying they will fight the government on economic issues.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, expressed confidence that a trend in anti-government expressed in recent election upsets in other provinces will turn in their parties' favor.

"The concept of change that the people can trust appeals to me," Mr. Nixon told a news conference, adding it will not be a Liberal slogan in the campaign.

"We are confident that our organization is at a peak of efficiency and that we will win," the Liberal opposition leader said.

"Our mood is buoyant," Lewis said.

He said the NDP is convinced there has been a decline in support for Mr. Davis' Progressive Conservative government. He said a projection canvass by his party showed a "steady shift away in Conservative support" in 81 ridings.

He said there has been a "much warmer response" to the NDP than "we've ever experienced before", and that voters "look upon us as the logical alternative to the existing government."

Mr. Lewis said that by the last two weeks of the campaign, the party will have 25,000 workers canvassing Ontario, with a peak of 35,000 on election day.

"That's no idle boast," he said. "It is the result of 12 years of careful preparation."

Donald MacDonald, former NDP leader, and Walter Pitman of Peterborough, who lost to Mr. Lewis in the party's leadership race last fall, will campaign across the province for the party.

Mr. Nixon said the issues "as we see them are essentially pertaining to the economy and job opportunities, decentralization of power away from Queen's Park and into the community, our concern for the environment and the role of Ontario in Confederation."

Mr. Lewis said his party will fight the election on the issues of creation of jobs, reduction in the cost of living, tax reform, environmental protections and regaining control of our economy.

Replying to a question, Mr. Nixon downgraded the attempts of Premier Davis to discount the Liberal impact on the election. Mr. Davis has said the election will be fought between his party and the NDP.

"I don't think the government, nor the NDP, nor any reasonable politician, or taxpayer can ignore the Liberals. We're the official Opposition."

Mr. Lewis said that although this will be his first campaign as party leader there will be a de-emphasis on personalities. "Our party has never been given to personality cults, and we don't intend to try to start now."

Tax Money Wasted Says Nixon

GUELPH (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon wasted little time before attacking the Progressive Conservative government's spending policies Monday night.

A few hours after Premier William Davis called an election for Thursday, Oct. 21, Mr. Nixon told a Wellington South Liberal Association meeting that the Tories have an indefensible record of wasting taxpayers' money.

He centred on the provincial government's income tax demands, education costs, advertising campaign and building and maintenance of the Ontario Science Centre and Ontario Place.

He said the province's income tax demand has increased at a rate of 18.1 per cent a year compared with the 9.7-per-cent increase rate for incomes.

"They are spending our money twice as fast as we can make it," he said.

He called Mr. Davis, who previously held the education portfolio, the "supreme spender" and said officials in the department the premier left are wasting $47 million a year in school construction costs.

He called Ontario Place "$23 million to $30 million dollars worth of hot dog stands and beer parlors strung together on stilts to keep it out of the polluted lake surrounding it."

No Information Leak Seen in Land Deals

TORONTO (CP) — A judicial inquiry has cleared the provincial government of any wrongdoing in the purchase of Niagara Escarpment land, saying there was no leak of confidential information that may have led to excessive speculative profits by Caledon Mountain Estates Ltd.

But the inquiry under Judge Colin E. Bennett sharply criticized the ineptness of government land negotiators and the "lax and negligent" manner in which the civil service handled a confidential report on the land deals.

Premier William Davis, who released the report at a news conference Monday, said steps are already being taken to tighten security on intra-governmental reports, and to assure that independent experts are hired to assess property before government purchases.

In view of the judge's conclusions, Mr. Davis said "those who have felt themselves to be under a cloud of suspicion, created by allegations made prior to the inquiry, are now rightfully entitled to the satisfaction of complete exoneration."

The inquiry came after a prolonged debate in the legislature last spring during which opposition members charged that Caledon, a public corporation and major landholder with 3,500 acres on the escarpment, had made exaggerated profits on the sale to the government last March of 508 acres of prime land.

The government bought the land for $1,450 an acre from Caledon which had purchased it 22 months earlier for $778 an acre.

In his report, Judge Bennett said the government had paid too high a price, but that was due mostly to public-works department negotiators who had not shown enough care and should have been more forceful.

Protestant Diehards Said Taking Offensive

BELFAST (CP) — The British Army said today that Protestant extremists have started attacking Roman Catholics, rejecting a new "disquieting" element in Northern Ireland's political and religious strife.

First suggestions of a possibly long-feared Protestant backlash against the Irish Republican Army and its Catholic sympathisers came in the wake of a series of explosions in Belfast.

One blast wrecked a house in Bann Street, a mixed Protestant-Catholic area, and seriously injured five persons. A factory, a bar and a library were damaged in other explosions.

Until now the army has blamed the IRA for the guerrilla warfare that has whipped up the feelings of the Catholic minority against the Protestant-based Northern Ireland government.

The new development was outlined in a joint army-police early today by military and police authorities.

"The IRA in Belfast have made further strenuous efforts to provoke Protestant reaction by setting off a number of explosions," the statement said.

"The disquieting aspect has been the behavior of Protestant hooligans in the Brandell area, where groups of youths broke windows in houses belonging to Catholics.

"It is also likely that one of the explosions involved Protestant extremists."

Benson May Play Mediator's Role

LONDON (CP) — Efforts are under way to head off a possibly explosive clash between the United States and the European Common Market on the eve of top-level monetary talks presided over by Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada.

Some commentators suggest that Benson, who arrived from Ottawa earlier today, may find himself cast as mediator between the two sides during the annual meeting of the 10 leading Western industrial nations, commonly known as the Group of 10.

The conference, opening Wednesday, was called by Benson as this year's chairman of the Group to discuss solutions to the international monetary crisis precipitated from President Nixon's decision last month to suspend the dollar's link with gold and to impose an additional 10-per-cent tariff on imports.

But negotiating positions hammered out in advance by the European community's announcement Monday that it will try to force the United States to devalue the dollar substantially by increasing the price of gold.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, here to attend the meeting, is reported ready to resist any pressure for a devaluation of the dollar as "a concession the United States is not prepared to make."

A spokesman for Benson said he would meet later today with Bishop Robert Mundell, the European community's announcement Monday that it will try to force the United States to devalue the dollar substantially by increasing the price of gold.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, here to attend the meeting, is reported ready to resist any pressure for a devaluation of the dollar as "a concession the United States is not prepared to make."

A spokesman for Benson said he would meet later today with Bishop Robert Mundell, the Canadian executive director of the International Monetary Fund.

—Realignment of the parities of major Western currencies, which would include re-pegging of the Canadian dollar as well as the British and French currencies, now free to find their own levels in international monetary markets.

—A reduction in the role of the U.S. dollar as a reserve currency by increasing the reserve function of special drawing rights issued by the International Monetary Fund.

Here Are Mechanics Of Running Election

TORONTO (CP) — If you like the excitement of politics you can bring Ontario's election Oct. 21 into your living room—by volunteering your home as a polling station.

Besides, you will be paid $25.

Ridings, or electoral districts, are divided in urban areas so that about 300 people vote at one polling station.

Returning officers, deputy returning officers, poll clerks and enumerators have already been appointed.

Polls open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and the station has to be open at least 15 minutes before voting until the ballots have been counted.

In the 1967 provincial election, there were more than 15,000 polling stations.

Roderick Lewis, Ontario chief returning officer, said he expects that number will be increased in this election to keep up with the population growth.

Mr. Lewis said that besides the polling stations, there are 125 officer divides the riding into subdivisions, makes up a voters' list, tells electors where to vote, and supervises enumerators.

Returning officers in the 117 ridings are appointed by the provincial government. They continue in office from election to election, and receive $500 before an election and between certain dates for the first 25,000 names on the riding's voter's lists. For each name over 25,000, the returning officer gets six cents.

Deputy returning officers are appointed by the returning officer. In each riding. One enumerator for each polling subdivision is chosen by the returning officer. The enumerators have already been appointed.

Enumerators begin their work Sept. 22. They have four days to get volunteers lists typed and deposited with returning officers.

Enumerators are officially appointed by the returning officer in each riding. One enumerator for each polling subdivision is chosen by the government; the second is appointed by the party with second in that riding during the last election.

If an eligible voter's name is not on the riding, his party picks one enumerator and the government chooses the second.

Finally, there is the polling clerk. Nominated by the same party that chooses the second enumerator, the poll clerk is paid $17. There is one poll clerk in each voting station.

Scrutineers, often unpaid, are appointed by the candidates.

There are 4.4 million eligible voters, up from 3.6 million in 1967.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange dropped slightly in heavy trading after the opening today as share volume was pushed up by trades in large blocks of NSI Marketing Ltd.

On index, industrials declined 36 to 179.37, base metals 14 to 96.95 and western oils 2.38 to 238.26. The gold index was up 3.97 to 177.27.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,437,000 shares compared with 633,000 at the same time Monday.

Declines led advances 132 to 74 with 200 issues unchanged.

In the morning, 4,466,900 shares of NSI were traded and the stock was down 10 cents to $3.35. The company completed previously announced plans to buy outstanding shares of National Sales Incentives Ltd.

Among other declining issues, Falconbridge Nickel was off ⅜ to $8796, Vengoner five cents to $3.25, International Utilities ⅛ to $37⅝, and Bank of Nova Scotia ¼ to $38¼.

MR. TWEEDY — OFF THE RECORD — By Ed Reed

Prison Guard Relates Ordeal

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Phillip (Curley) Watkins, 33, was one of the hostages who came out of Attica state prison alive. "I guess it just wasn't my time," he said.

Two convicts cornered him in the yard of Cellblock D. "One guy had a broomstick. I was able to hold him off for a couple of minutes with my club.

"But I saw him give a guy behind me a high sign and I was hit with a shovel."

As Watkins lay in the yard, his right arm broken, other prisoners rushed to kick him, he said.

"But another inmate stopped me from being beaten to death."

It was a strange sort of captivity, he said, with his captors—most of them blacks—addressing him as sir, offering him cigarettes and stuff and allowing the prison doctor to set his arm.

"When they ate hot meals, we had hot meals," he said. "When they had sandwiches, so did we. We had mattresses but they didn't."

As the deadline for release of the hostages passed, a prisoner grabbed each hostage and one held Watkins in the middle of the prison yard with a knife to his throat. It was the same with the others.

When the helicopters began circling the prison compound, Watkins said his captor shoved him to the ground and fell on top of him as one

Convicts Shielded Guards

"The man behind me was an inmate I had known for some time," said guard Richard Fargo, who was a hostage for 88 hours.

He was recalling the moment Monday morning when leaders of the rebelling prisoners ordered the slaying of hostages before state troopers, prison guards and sheriff's deputies stormed in.

"He whispered in my ear that I would not be hurt," said Fargo.

"He was supposed to stick a knife between my ribs.

"He stood by his knife just to prick the skin and said, 'Now don't tell them I didn't kill you.' Then he threw me backwards and covered my body with his."

It was the prisoner's last act.

"When I came over," said Fargo, "he was dead."

The executioner assigned to guard Elmer Hughes had lost it. "I don't have the heart to do it. I'm only going to prick you."

The executioner drew blood and then fell on top of him to hide him from other convicts.

Philip Watkins, another guard who was a hostage had a similar experience. "The guy had time to kill me, but he didn't."

Pool of Blood So Thick You Could Trip Over It

By JOEL N. SHURKIN

ATTICA, N.Y. (Reuter) — The dried pool of blood at "Times Square" was so thick you could trip over it. That is where a hostage bled to death.

The stench of acrid pepper gas still hovered over the main yard. Order had been restored at Attica state prison but it cost more than 30 lives to do it.

A team of pool- reporters, including this correspondent, was led through the prison in a few hours after one of the bloodiest prison upheavals in United States history was quelled.

The main prison is a four-sided building. In the centre is the prison yard. It is divided into four quadrants by four passageways which meet in the middle at a round control tower, called "Times Square" by prisoners.

On the roof of the passageway running from the entrance to the control tower the prisoners had set up a barricade marking the line between their territory and the territory controlled by prison authorities.

Several small bloodstains showed where a prisoner was shot down.

At "Times Square" four hostages had been paraded blindfolded by prisoners to show that the authorities the prisoners' rejection of an ultimatum issued by Correctional Commissioner Russell Oswald. Three may have met death when the prisoners slit their throats.

One of the prisoners was cut down by a sharpshooter from the roof as he began slicing the throat of his victim. The hostage lived.

It was here at "Times Square" we found the pools of dried blood. One contained human tissue. A rain puddle near the others was bright red.

All the yards were littered with prisoners' clothing. When they surrendered they were ordered to lie down on the ground and were stripped naked for a research. There were also piles of shoes, cans, blankets and torn mattresses.

Two slit trenches, in the shape of a V, had been dug. The prisoners did not believe the authorities could get at them from the roof and would have to charge through the doors of the passageways. They were wrong.

They also thought they could hide from the gas by jumping into the ditches and pulling blankets over them. They were wrong again.

Up against Cellblock D, the prisoners had set up a machine shop. They ran electric cables out to run the machines that looked the crude weapons they fashioned.

There was also a television set, a loudspeaker system and a sophisticated wired communications system, all built during the rebellion.

In the cell block behind them there was not an unshattered window. Inside, the reek of gas made us gasp and sneeze.

On the top floor, in a maximum-security cell, state police found two prisoners in a large pool of blood. Both were stabbed to death three or four days ago, officials said.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Lines of communication between my daughter and myself are completely down. She says I'm interfering in the raising of my (almost) 4 - year - old grandson. Here is the story. I hope you will accept the seat of judgment.

The child has severe asthma. He is being treated by a doctor who has taken some skin tests and says he is allergic to dust, chicken feathers and milk — among a few other things.

But here's where I come in. I'm upset because the doctor has never asked my daughter whether there are any pets in the house. He doesn't know the child lives in a home with two cats and one dog. He plays with them a great deal. I've noticed the carpets and bare floors are full of dog and cat hairs. There's the odor, too.

I'm not an animal-hater. Our own child had a dog all the years she was growing up. But I am worried that my grandson's asthma may be caused or aggravated by his pets. Don't you think I or she should at least mention them to the boy's doctor? — Mrs. A.

COMMENT: My replies to similar questions often break down lines of communication between many readers and myself. They label me a "dog-hater," or a "cat hater" — which I am not. But I am willing to risk such misunderstandings when I weigh the importance of a child's health against pets.

In the case of your grandson Mrs. A., I think you have the right to "meddle" — which I suppose is the word your daughter uses. Although the youngster may be allergic to dust, feathers and milk, it is also possible that sensitivity to animal dander may intensify his allergic problem.

My advice? There may be some immediate psychological trauma in taking his pets away from him, but I believe this should be done. Almost without exception, I advise that pets be removed from the home of any severely asthmatic child. (I know many doctors and parents may disagree.)

• • •

Since your grandson has three pets, it might be advisable to remove one at a time over a period of two or three weeks to lessen the shock. It will take time anyway to find a home for them. After the pets have left, the house should be thoroughly vacuumed and cleaned to remove dander.

I hope that what I have said will influence your daughter to consider the problem in a new way — and reopen lines of communication. Meanwhile, as the unpopular judge in the case, I am readying myself for defense against angry pet lovers who will call me an animal-hater — and worse.

• • •

For Mrs. Y.: I wish I could tell you specifically how you can diagnose cancer of the breast or uterus. A doctor's examination is necessary. But you can help by being cautious and reporting to the doctor early.

For example, any lump in the breast should be suspect. Although the majority may be benign (non cancerous), you want to be sure. Also be suspicious if there is an unusual discharge from the nipple, or if a normal looking nipple begins to turn in on itself.

As for the uterus, you should immediately have a checkup if there is any abnormal bleeding. But better still, have a Pap smear taken every six to 12 months even though there are no abnormal symptoms.

Asthmatic Child Needs No Pets

Sydney J. Harris Says

Segal 'Destroyed' Himself

The favorite game today seems to be blaming the "news media" for whatever criticism is heaped upon you, whether you have brought it upon yourself or not.

From Cannes, earlier this summer, where he served as a U.S. jury member for the Cannes Film Festival, Erich Segal complained that he had been "driven out of Yale by the American news media," saying that his treatment in the press had motivated his resignation from the Yale faculty.

This is what we of a less candid era used to call "bunkwa," and is called something far more scatological today. If Segal was "driven out" of Yale, it was by his own incessant lust for publicity, not by anything the news media said about him.

Segal, as you know, is the author of the immensely popular novel "Love Story," and its even more popular film adaptation. What outraged the students from him was not the writing of his book, or its singular success, but Segal's own attitude toward it.

I saw him on several TV talk shows, and he appeared on scores of others. For a man who is supposed to value scholarship and literature, he behaved like a barkster of the lowest order, putting to shame the most brazen "starlet" peddling her wares.

This is what "destroyed" him with his students, not the book, or the exposure in the news media. This is why, as he said, "each Monday I could feel I had lost them. I could feel their contempt and scorn. I felt I could not go on."

There is an illustrative parallel here. At about the same time as the publication of "Love Story," another book by a Yale faculty member came out: "The Greening of America" by Charles Reich. It also hit the best-seller list, but with a difference.

Reich let his book speak for itself. He refused to go on the publicity circuit and turn himself into a "celebrity". He remained quietly at New Haven teaching his classes and going about his private business. And the students respected him for this dignity and self-possession.

Moreover, the "news media" let Reich severely alone. The book was widely discussed and analyzed, but the author remained in decent obscurity as a public figure. He simply filed a desire to be let alone, and he was let alone, for he didn't try to have the best of both worlds.

Segal simply became intoxicated with the heady brew of success and popularity; that is his right and his privilege but then, he forfeits good opinion that meant most to him — of his students. The book and the movie, as it destroyed him in their eyes was the cheapest sort of copping out: a mere work to which Eurpides ought to know this.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 15

Your birthday today: Poses a long challenge of testing, analysing, experiment in seking more effective communication. Some will concentrate on material survival and become highly efficient, others will find rewarding progress in spiritual and intangible ways. Today's natives have lively imaginations, usually some political talent.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Ask no and accept a deal with difficult but useful answers. Trying to get by the easy way would leave you out in left field. Tidy up.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Open your eyes and your mind — organize your resources for optimum development of existing opportunities.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Give thought to health care, care for yourself and loved ones, then do what is needed to assure the best. Home life claims more of your time and energy than expected.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Prudent and active effort to make every minute count is the best path. Tempting byways, bobby interests could divert your attention from serious business if you permit it.

All Hostages Slain By Police Bullets

IRA Offensive Seems Started

BELFAST (CP) — A sudden wave of bullet and bomb attacks on British troops raised fears today that the Irish Republican Army's promised offensive may be under way in embattled Northern Ireland.

Two soldiers were killed and five others gravely wounded by snipers and gunmen lying in ambush Tuesday night and early today.

A 40-year-old sniper shot by British troops at an army post in Londonderry after midnight died today in hospital. After he was shot, the man was dragged away by sympathizers from the Roman Catholic district of Creggan and Bogside. The army later announced his death in the hospital.

The latest British army casualty came when gunmen ambushed an army patrol at midnight 40 miles west of Belfast. They killed an army sergeant and seriously wounded another soldier by shooting him in the back with a burst of automatic fire.

This attack near Dungannon brought the death toll of British soldiers to 32 since sectarian violence erupted in Northern Ireland two years ago.

Tuesday afternoon, snipers shot a soldier on guard duty in Londonderry's Catholic Creggan housing project.

An armored car taking him to hospital was also sprayed with bullets. He died soon afterwards.

Only a few hours before the soldier was killed by a sniper bullet, another trooper was shot in the neck outside the same post and was reported in serious condition.

Another soldier was gunned down later as he stood guard outside Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital.

Gerry Fitt, sitting leader of Ulster's opposition Social and Democratic Labor party, meanwhile assailed the IRA's militant "Provisional" wing as "madmen living in a world of hate and inhumanity."

Fitt, in a statement issued from the Dublin hospital where he is being treated for a slipped disc, condemned what he called the "brutal rejection" by the Provisionals of a peace appeal by Roman Catholic church leaders in the North.

"If I am to be true to my political principles then when I condemn the use of British bayonets in Northern Ireland I must also condemn the political use of an IRA bomb."

Tuesday also saw the release of 19 men from the prison ship Maidstone and Crumlin Road jail in the Catholic area of Belfast.

'You shouldn't feel left out! There are probably others who still have their jobs!'

Constables Shot With Police Gun

MONTREAL (CP) — Two policemen were in serious condition early today after being shot while investigating an attack on a woman.

Constable Andre Michaud, 26, and Constable Jean-Marie Thibodeau, 22, underwent surgery to remove bullets fired by a man who resisted arrest and escaped.

A police spokesman said the two constables were investigating reports that a man was attacking a woman on a street near the Montreal General Hospital. In the ensuing scuffle, the man grabbed one of the policemen's guns, shooting one in the stomach and the other in the chest before fleeing.

The incident was the fourth shooting of a policeman in Montreal since Friday and the third involving a policeman from the same station in six days.

Doctor Finds No Cut Throats

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — State Corrections Commissioner Russell G. Oswald has confirmed that the hostages slain in the Attica state prison revolt died of gunshot wounds. But the source of the wounds remained officially unexplained today.

The death toll from the four days of rebellion rose to 43 today when officials at a Buffalo hospital said a critically-wounded Attica convict had died. The total includes 10 guards and prison employees and 32 prisoners.

Autopsies contradicted earlier official reports that prisoners had slit the throats of hostages as police began an assault Monday on the rebel-held areas of the maximum-security Attica prison.

But Hollis Chase, president of a union local that represents correction officers at the prison, insisted that the original story was correct and that the hostages' throats were slit. He said officials had photographs showing the bodies with cut throats.

In a statement to reporters late Tuesday, Oswald said one question was how any of the hostages could have been killed by gunfire.

"The most important and obvious answer is the fact that the inmates had dressed all hostages in prison garb to ensure difficulty of identification between inmate and hostage," he said.

"Additionally, hostages could very well have been used as shields or forced forward into gunfire to suggest that they were not hostages and could have been mistaken for such because of their prison garb."

He released a list of weapons found in the prison after the rebellious convicts were routed. The list included gasoline bombs, sharpened spears, metal pipes, straight razors and spiked baseball bats—but no guns.

He declined to answer questions from reporters.

The commissioner's statement came several hours after disclosure by Dr. John F. Edland, Monroe County medical examiner, that the hostages all died of gunshot wounds and that none had had his throat slashed.

"There were no cut throats or any kind of mutilation," Dr. Edland said after examining eight bodies of hostages. "All eight cases died of gunshot wounds."

A ninth hostage killed during the assault had previously been established as a gunshot victim.

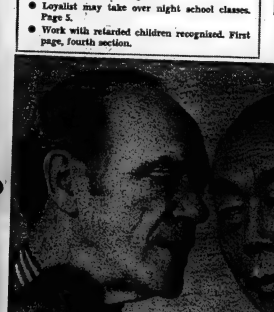
Oswald maintained that "there have been two misstatements of fact" concerning what happened to the hostages. He said the first was that all the hostages had cut throats and the second was that none had a slashed throat.

During the evacuation of the dead and wounded after the assault, Oswald said, "a number of those evacuated had slashed throats. . . ."

He offered no further elaboration and did not mention any source of information other than the report of the forensic pathologist, a reference to Dr. Edland.

Happy Days Here Again Says Dief

LONDON (CP) — "Happy days are here again," John Diefenbaker said today as he began one of his doctors' latest reports on a spell in a Wales hospital after being hit with stomach trouble on a holiday.



The doctors are delighted with my progress," the former Canadian prime minister said in a telephone interview from the Maelor Hospital at Wrexham in Wales.

The 75-year-old politician, up and around for the second time since going into the hospital eight days ago, said he expected to fly back to Canada Friday and rest up in Ottawa before returning to the Commons in about three weeks.

His wife Olive, who has been with him at Wrexham, will be on the Canadian air force plane.

The Diefenbakers were on a holiday in North Wales with old friend Brig. Michael Wardell, former publisher of Fredericton Gleaner, when the former prime minister came down with stomach trouble Sept. 4. He was taken to the local hospital near Wardell's estate and later moved to Wrexham.

Diefenbaker told at his reporter he is being treated for a perforated ulcer and has had eight pints of blood transfusions over the last week.

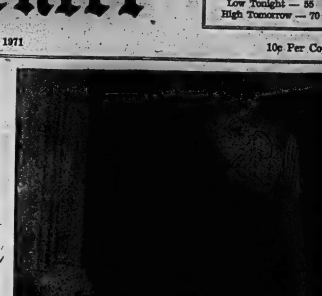
Industrial Nations Try To Get U.S. Tax Lifted

LONDON (CP) — The 10 leading Western industrial nations prepared today to put new pressure on the United States to remove the additional 10-per-cent tariff on imports and devalue the dollar.

Canada, with strong support from Japan and the European Common Market, is expected to renew today or Thursday its demands for removal of the import tax, imposed Aug. 15 by President Nixon.

Today's meeting of the industrial nations—known as the Group of 10—was called by Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada to seek a way out of the global monetary and trade crisis which followed Nixon's decision last month to impose the tax and cut the U.S. dollar's tie to gold.

Canada already has unsuccessfully sought exemption from the import tax, which affects about one-quarter of all Canadian sales to the U.S. This amounts to about $2.7 billion out of $11 billion a year.



Benson is chairmanin this year of the Group of 10 and along with Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, represents Canada here. The Canadian delegates are not expected to take any stand on the question of a suggested devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

The Nixon administration has resisted pressure to devalue the U.S. dollar but sources said a compromise agreement between the U.S. and its major trading partners still is possible. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally is representing the U.S. at the meeting.

Britain added its support Tuesday to a call by the six-country Common Market for devaluation of the dollar.

The Common Market countries are committed to seeking both an end to the import duty and a dollar devaluation as part of a general realignment of the world's leading currencies.

The U.S. has countered the demand for devaluation of the dollar with a move to have other major currencies revalued upwards.

Plan to Monitor Blast

Canadian Ship Ready For Aleutian Voyage

VANCOUVER (CP) — A farewell party with rock music and dried salmon for treats was held Tuesday night for the crew of the Greenpeace, making final preparations for the start today of their protest mission against the proposed five-megaton nuclear blast in the Aleutian Islands next month.

The 12, including scientists, plan to cruise off Amchitka Island just outside the three-mile territorial limit on the day of the blast to take air and water samples on the day of the blast unless it is cancelled by U.S. President Nixon.

Jim Bohlen, a co-founder of the Don't Make a Wave Committee, said the 46-foot Canadian halibut boat will sail inside the 12-mile prohibited zone, "but what we do when we get there is up to Nixon," who is under pressure to cancel the test.

Twelve 500-gallon tanks were lowered into the ship's hold Tuesday to carry enough diesel fuel for the return trip.

"We're not taking any legal chances," Mr. Bohlen said, "such as putting into an American port for refueling and risk being arrested."

Thant Won't Predict China Debate Result

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States' effort to retain a seat for Nationalist China in the UN apparently has been effective enough to make the question of seating of the people's Republic this year too close to call.

Secretary-General U Thant said at a news conference Tuesday that it is not possible at this stage to predict the outcome of the annual China debate in the General Assembly in mid-October.

Thant said that China "could" become a member this year, but qualified his remarks, saying that some countries have told him that they will not make up their mind before the eve of the assembly debate.

Some Fruit and Vegetable Sprays Cause Cancer in Animals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A family of pesticides widely used on fruits and vegetables has been linked to cancer in animals by the United States Food and Drug Administration.

Spurred by the FDA findings, the Environmental Protection Agency is considering whether a ban, or lesser restrictions, should be imposed on some or all of these fungicides known as carbamates.

No decision has been reached, said Dr. William M. Upholt, EPA's deputy assistant administrator for pesticides programs. He said there appears to be "no clear-cut evidence of imminent hazard to man" from the carbamates.

Dr. Virgil O. Wodicka, director of the FDA's bureau of foods, wrote Upholt Aug. 23 that agency scientists had confirmed that the chemical ethylene thiourea causes cancer of the thyroid gland when fed to rats. A copy of the letter, which was not made public, has been obtained by The Associated Press.

ETU is one of the chemicals that carbamates split into naturally after being sprayed on fruits, vegetables, grains, flowers, bushes and trees.

Traces of carbamate, and presumably ETU, remain on treated fruits and vegetables purchased at food stores, Wodicka said, although the extent is unknown.

"The whole thing is too new" to evaluate the risk, Wodicka said in an interview. "If we find it's a problem, we will speak in a louder voice."

Northport Lawyer Wins PC Nomination on First Ballot

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — Northport lawyer James Taylor last night defeated Ernestown opponent Cecil J. Kidd to win the Conservative candidacy nomination in the Prince Edward - Lennox riding. He was nominated on the first ballot.

A total of 565 delegates from 18 possible 582 crowded Napanee District Secondary School where eleven candidates were nominated as suggested successors to retiring MPP Norris Whitney for the riding.

Among party members named were Picton deputy reeve James Bird; Grant Clark; Prince Edward county sheriff Herbert Colliver; Hesker Tuttle; Harold Harrison, reeve of North Marysburg; Bernard Hepburn, a past warden of Prince Edward; Cecil Kidd, an Ernestown businessman; Jesse Mason, a Picton merchant; J. Pearce, Napanee, Edward Rutter, a Prince Edward orchard grower and James Taylor.

All nominees with the exception of Mr. Kidd and Mr. Taylor, who already announced their intentions to seek the candidacy.

Mr. Taylor last night told fellow Conservatives he was standing for the nomination because of his concern with the mounting pressure for regional government.

He remarked regional government may be suited to cities such as Ottawa, Toronto, London and other areas where strong urban pressures exist but insisted, "we don't need it here."

Strong local government which provides the "down to earth, ordinary person" with some say in the handling of his affairs is needed instead.

Mr. Taylor observed he decided to stand because he was also concerned with the future of the family farm, the need for more clean industry in the riding and the lack of job opportunities for youth in Prince Edward-Lennox.

He expressed interest in the environment and in problems related to pollution.

"The family farm must be preserved, and the farmer's voice must be heard," emphasized Jr. Taylor.

The farmer, in his opinion, is entitled to "strong representation in the places where the decisions are actually made." The Federation of Agriculture and the National Farmers' Union have views which must be voiced "in clear, forthright terms."

If more "good clean industry" is encouraged in the riding, a strong financial base for the counties of Prince Edward and Lennox could be achieved.

Mr. Taylor said last night government programs in this regard should be explored since industry also creates job opportunities for youth, our greatest natural resource."

In an address following his nomination for candidacy, Mr. Taylor asserted he has "complete faith" in today's youth. "These young people are just as solid as you or me and sometimes I think, just a little bit smarter."

He advocated efforts to increasingly involve youth with community and political affairs since young people have "a big contribution to make.

"We must not forget our God - given heritage," cautioned Mr. Taylor, as he spoke of man's environment.

He added today most persons realize the supply of fresh air and water is limited and stressed that it is no longer necessary for us "to accept other people's garbage that pollutes that air and water."

Mr. Taylor noted his Northport home is located centrally in the riding, making him readily accessible to both Prince Edward and Lennox residents. He added his intention is to serve both counties in an "equal and even-handed way."

The candidate called last night's vote the small independent decision party delegates have made since they first met in Whitby in 1965 - "the stalwart standard bearer in 1951."

When his election as the Conservative candidate for the Prince Edward-Lennox riding was announced, Mr. Taylor urged fellow party members to look to the future, not to the past.

"We can't look to past achievements; we must ask what can we achieve next." He said the contest with the real opposition will begin immediately and promised, "They'll get a real fight.

"I'm certainly available at all times and the campaign has been launched," declared the enthusiastic Conservative candidate.

Mr. Taylor, who is 43 years has been active with the Conservative party for more than 20 years.

Evidence of his experience in municipal matters he was asked to assist a select committee appointed by the provincial legislature in 1962 to review the Municipal Act.

In 1965, Mr. Taylor acted with a second select committee examining Conservation Authorities.

He is married and has four children, two daughters attending Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, and two sons studying at Sophiasburg Central School.

Barbecue Kicks Off Campaign

Quinte Conservatives will kick off the election campaign tonight at the Park and Game Club, Frankford.

George Hess, Dr. R. T. Potter, Norris Whitney, Russell Rowe and Charles Rollins, all sitting members, will compete in a barbecue contest.

The event will go on rain or shine and Air Cadets will be at the game club road intersection with the Frankford-Stirling road to direct traffic. The event, sponsored by the Prince Edward-Hastings Progressive Conservative Association, will begin at 6.30 p.m.

Tribute Paid to Norris Whitney

NAPANEE (Staff) — Norris Whitney, MPP, Prince Edward - Lennox for the past 20 years last night received "a last hurrah" from supporters gathered to elect representatives who come from outside the large urban areas. Frequently they are attracted by the noisy individual who lewds wild and usually inaccurate charges and statements without substantial evidence.

"Norris Whitney is not, I am pleased to say, one of the noisy people. He has been in the truest sense of the word a people's representative. Norris Whitney is also one of those rare and decent men to serve their riding in the legislature of Ontario without fanfare, without seeking publicity for, the sake of self glorification," emphasized Mr. Auld.

He remarked that in his 20 years of service, Norris Whitney has served at one time or another on "just about every legislative committee.

"Norris Whitney has a good man and I think he would want only to be remembered as a good people's representative. We all agree that he deserves such recognition," concluded the speaker.

Mr. Whitney earlier confided to the press that he will miss "various things for a while" but does not regret his decision to step down.

He commented if the term of office had been for only two years instead of four he might have sought re-election.

His job, growing increasingly busy, prevented him from enjoying many activities at his Ameliasburg farm.

He commented that he intends to pledge his support to the new candidate and will retain an interest in politics. "It gets in your blood and it never leaves you," declared the veteran campaigner.

Mr. Whitney's decision to spend more time down on the farm is strongly supported by his wife, whom he noted has fallen heir to many home duties in his past absences.

The retiring MPP warned party members that overconfidence is the one thing that could defeat Conservatives in the riding.

He said the opposition was active and would do its best to win.

Office Building Changes Hands

A local investment firm has bought the Jamieson Bone building on the corner of Front and Market Streets and plans to maintain it for its present use as offices for professional and business people.

Fred Nelles, manager of Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate, announced the sale today.

The block was built by senator Henry Corby and has since been in the Bone family for two generations. A fire in 1967 gutted the interior and the building was completely renovated.

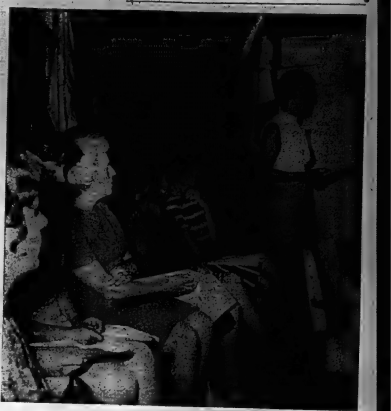
Education Board Honors Volunteers

Hastings county board of education last night marked volunteer week by pausing at its regular meeting to honor 14 volunteers who have conducted a preschool enrichment pilot project in the schools.

The project last year saw 4-5 four - year - olds attending two half days weekly at three Belleville schools to gain school experience before they started kindergarten this year.

Students from Loyalist College's Early Childhood Development course take their field-work in these classes, making it possible to staff the program with teams consisting of two experienced volunteers and three students.



Mrs. Betty Exelby, director of the Loyalist course acted as advisor and Mrs. Miriam Bishop co-ordinated program content, bought supplies and kept the programs running smoothly in each school.

Senior students in each school took charge of youngsters who arrived before 9 a.m. and Moira students made easels for the classes.

The program will be expanded this year to Holy Rosary Separate School and Loyalist's day nursery has been made available two afternoons weekly if the volunteers can arrange transportation for an additional 15 children.

Ruth Burrows, director of the Volunteer Bureau of United Community Services introduced the volunteers who staff the enrichment program to the board last night.

They are, in addition to Mrs. Burrows and Mrs. Bishop, Diana Aitken, Barbara Gerkins, Joan Horne, Jean Lennox, Helen McFarland, Monica Mikula, Ann Rose, Mary Weller, Patricia Warren, Barbara Kerr, Beatrice Wilkins and Anita Holland. Mrs. Beverley Boomhower has been in charge of volunteers at the Deseronto Public School.

New Wings for Cadets

Captain Lorne Foley, Commanding Officer, Belleville 608 Air Cadet Squadron, receives the key for Aerotech Champ aircraft from Ted Brandon, president, Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund committee. The light aircraft, to be used by the Air Cadets for familiarization flights and navigation exercises, was turned over to the 608 Squadron aircraft control committee Thursday evening by the Yardmen at Oak Hills Flying Club. Speaking on behalf of the Cadets, Capt. Foley expressed appreciation to the BYBF committee, whose assistance with the purchase of the aircraft made the Squadron's dream come true.

U.S. Educator Intrigues Loyalist Faculty Members

"Education is the only profession that fails a portion of its clients by design," said Dr. Don Stewart at a seminar given to the faculty of Loyalist College yesterday.

"Educators are wrapped up in the principle that for a course to be good, a certain percentage will inevitably fail," said Dr. Stewart. "If a teacher is told that in a particular school, no student failed, the teacher would be inclined to discredit the standards of the school. On the other hand if the same teacher is told that 30 percent failed, then the teacher would be happier with the result and the standards set by that school."

Dr. Stewart, "the bearded provocateur Californian," as he was called by one Loyalist staff member, claims, "if a teacher, at the beginning of the year tests his students on material he plans to teach, he will be able to determine how much emphasis will be needed in certain area, or possibly that the material need not be taught. With the results of this "pretest", he can make a statement of objectives that will completely outline the intent of the course and exactly what is to be taught in it. This outline would then be given to each student."

"With this kind of setup, each student can work at his own speed with all the facts on the table," said the doctor while lecturing. "Too many teachers throw trick questions on a paper. When asked, a teacher will admit that the exam could have been made more difficult or less difficult, depending on his opinion of the amount of failure he expects from the course. Through the objectives method, the exam is set strictly to the set of objectives issued at the beginning of the course. Each student has an equal chance of passing the course as far as the teaching end is concerned.

"The teacher should be able to determine if the objectives have been set too low, and these objectives can then be modified," said Dr. Stewart.

Throughout the lectures, held over three days, faculty members tossed questions at lecturer which were answered with "a skill and depth that is uncommon in one man" said Herbert Young, president of the college.

"While his seminars seem radical, they do not have to be taken at face value," said Mr. Young. "The importance of his seminar is that, perhaps our teaching staff will begin to think of change in the classroom, and have an open mind to new and stranger methods."

Other teaching members of the college say "it's the kind of scheme that can be taken in parts. Where something can be applied, in most cases it will be."

Earlier in the same lecture, the same staff member said, "he is a great salesman." When asked if she was buying seh replied, "I'm listening and interested."

Members of the faculty were impressed with Dr. Stewart, and some are already beginning to modify their outlook.

"I am sure that traces of the seminars will appear in each department in the school to some degree," said Mr. Young.

"We want 100 percent learning from our students," said Dr. Stewart. "If the student is not learning, then other teaching methods or other teachers must be used to achieve this aim.

"We are start-changing the student; we must ask if the system is working and we must do something about it," closed Dr. Stewart.

Missing Students Mystify Board

A population bomb is ticking away, ready to explode the world into oblivion sometime after the year 2,000.

But you can't prove it by Hastings county school board statistics.

Perversely, the youthful population of this area continues to shrink. And no one knows why.

Elementary enrolment is down by 2% this year from 1970's 15,538 pupils.

The drop in est of 15,202 recorded Sept. 13 is below the official projected enrolment of 15,760 estimated by board officials.

Board officials have been hard at work figuring out the conundrum since school began Sept. 7. But they still haven't come up with the answer to why the school population here is shrinking.

They attribute a small amount of the deficiency to CFB Trenton postings and the transfer of pupils to the separate and Christian schools.

But, statistically speaking, these factors still don't account significantly for the lowered enrolment. Intrigued on discovering the answer, the administration has sent principals on a missing persons search of their registers to find out why the projected enrolment is higher than the actual numbers that turned up the first day.

Building programs and boundary changes for the next 10 years depend upon the answers.

True, there is a swelling of the secondary school enrolment. There are 331 more in county secondary schools today than last year. But the enrolment of 8,886 is still less the forecast 9,054.

In addition to these students, there is a total of 72 enrolled in Bridgewater and William R. Kirk schools for the retarded - - - three fewer than expected.

Project Volunteers

The women who operate a pre-school program for 4-year-olds in the city schools two days a week were recognized last night by Hastings county board of education trustees with a personal thank you for their services. Introducing the group was Mrs. Freeman Burrows (standing) director of the volunteer bureau that organized the program.

PUC Receives Rebate

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission is $76,000 richer this week as a result of a cheque from the Ontario Water Resources Commission. The cheque represents funds "recovered" from the OWRC for the cost of surveys and detailed planning done in connection with a proposed extension for the Belleville water filtration plant.

The plans were later rendered unnecessary when the city joined in an area Ontario Water Resources Commission scheme to pipe water from Lake Ontario to serve the Quinte district.

"I am quite pleased about the cheque," stated local commission chairman Gerry O'Connor. "Recovery of the cost of the plans for the filtration plant extension has been one of my main projects."

Plans are now going ahead for the construction of a two-ground level water reservoir in the northeastern section of the city.

Site of the proposed reservoir is a height of land in the Herchimer Ave.—Symington Drive area of the city. Specifications are being prepared by the local commissioner's consulting engineers, Gore and Storrie.

Present plans call for the reservoir to be constructed by the local commission with the facility later to be purchased by the OWRC.

However, a final decision is still to be made on whether to use Lake Ontario water as an area supply source. The decision on whether to use Lake Ontario water will depend on the cost factor.

In another item of business at yesterday's utilities commission was given to a bylaw that will allow payment of pensions to the surviving spouses of long-term commission employees.

The widows of three deceased PUC workers will be entitled to the pension.

The Manipulators

NBC news had some interesting film the other day about Ashland, a small community in Oregon a short distance north of the California line. Ashland, it seems, is a pleasant community where the air and water are clean, where there is little in the way of serious crime and where people may walk the streets at night with impunity.

A place much like Belleville, we should think, except for the topography, Ashland having the kind of hill country around which we lack.

North America boasts countless communities like Ashland, Oregon (there is an Ashland in Wisconsin too, which we have been through) and Belleville, Ontario.

Aside possibly from Montreal our big cities are also relatively free of serious crime, crimes of violence that is, while Ashland and similar small places across the land belie the lamentable evidence of violence and civil unrest of the big cities of the United States.

It is a tranquil image which, paradoxically, exists in many areas of such political hotspots as the Middle East and Northern Ireland. For in politics one must consider how leftist elements and other manipulators and do-gooders work to aggravate any given situation. Thus in Britain, where increasing crime is a big concern now, the National Council of Civil Liberties (NCCL) have been reacting almost in horror to calls for a crackdown, including bringing back the death penalty.

In British crimes of violence are reported to have increased by more than five per cent so far this year after an increase of nearly 10 per cent last year and 20 per cent the year before that. Police officials are saying that unless something is done London will be as dangerous a place as New York within five years.

As John Allan May of the Christian Science Monitor put it recently: "Many policemen seem to rate the NCCL among left-wing do-gooders who, they insist, have encouraged the trend to violence by their leniency."

Or as a London bobby put it to May, "In Ulster now it is the Army and the police who get accused of brutality by these people (the NCCL and others). It isn't the murderers and arsonists. . ."

The same kind of twisted reaction was observed in Canada during the FLQ crisis. The Government rushed out extraordinary measures to deal with an extraordinary situation, including arrest without trial, and immediately there were outcries from the same kind of people who are now questioning authority and berating the forces of law and order in Britain.

We are lucky in our Ashlands and Bellevilles that we do not have to face such problems — yet. But let us not be too complacent, even small town Canada and the U.S. has its less desirable elements, which as we grow, could rock the boat in ways we might not credit at this point.

Drug Centre

Incredible as it may seem the tiny state of Vermont is reported to be a major transfer and storage point for drug smuggling into the northeastern United States, as well as a base for clandestine laboratories producing LSD and other hallucinogenic drugs.

According to a State police official, Sgt. Dana Goodnow, isolated wooded areas of the state often allow drug criminals to elude discovery. Winter snow confounds aerial surveillance. Moreover, in a situation reminiscent of the border troubles of Ireland there are some 35 dirt roads between Vermont and Quebec which do not have border patrol stations and these provide easy access for drug smuggling between the two countries. Add to that the fact that local enforcement agencies are ill-equipped to handle drug traffic investigations. Some small towns and villages have no police.

Sgt. Goodnow's division has made 15 arrests involving drug dealers, one case involving some $400,000 worth of hashish from Morocco but he has only four men to cover the state and admits they are just scratching the surface.

So much for Vermont's peaceful, almost idyllic image, one of the most agreeable and attractive states of the United States — and, now, in addition, one of the centres of the sick world of drug abuse.

"Looks like some sort of floating sod!"

Election Crisis

Oct. 21 Another Date For Political History

By DENNIS BELL

TORONTO (CP) — Mercurial Mitchell Hepburn, the bombastic onion farmer from Elgin County who ruled Ontario for eight erratic years, wrote epitaph to his own political career that might well apply to others with dreams of Queen's Park glory.

The 200-pound Hepburn spent the night of June 4, 1945, watching George Drew's Progressive Conservatives make mincemeat of his Liberals in an Ontario general election.

His political comeback machine shattered and a loser in his own riding to one of the Tory interlopers, Mr. Hepburn dispassionately surveyed the debris in his election headquarters and chuckled to reporters:

"Well, I think I'll go back to my farm and listen to the grass grow."

And that's what he did. Mitch Hepburn, the onetime wonder boy of Ontario politics, spent the remaining eight years of his life on his St. Thomas, Ont., farm counting onions and cows—and listening to his pastures grow.

For all his brilliance, his shortcomings and flamboyance, Mr. Hepburn had taken the province's old political axiom to heart: When a politician or party leader goes down, he goes down in flames.

The end of the Hepburn years—he became premier in 1934 and retired temporarily as party leader in 1942—launched the longest period of political instability in Ontario history.

In the nine years that followed Ontario had five different premiers, the socialist Co-operative Commonwealth Federation began turning yearning patterns topsy-turvy and the Liberals reeled from one election disaster to the next. The party has yet to recover fully.

There are some valuable lessons to be learned from that era, now that Premier Willia n Davis has called an election for Oct. 21.

The forces that were at work during those nine years have largely fashioned today's provincial political scene. It was, by all accounts, one of the most exciting, colorful and unpredictable interregnums Ontario has survived.

Party leaders toppled like ten-pins. The CCF came in like a tidal wave, missed forming a government by a whisker, then smashed itself to pieces in a political scandal triggered by a single, intemperate, speech made by its first provincial leader.

The fulcrum of the era was the 1943 general election. Mr. Hepburn had quit a year earlier after a wild legislature session during which he pushed a censure motion through the house aimed at Prime Minister Mackenzie King's federal Liberal government over Second World War production disputes.

The censure motion un leashed a savage reaction throughout the Liberal party and Mr. Hepburn stepped aside, to be replaced by cabinet colleague G. D. Conant. Mr. Conant held the leadership for eight stre tc orn months then Harry Nixon, father of the present Liberal leader Robert Nixon, became premier.

Mr. Nixon promptly called on election and the campaign that followed was one of the most vitriolic Ontario has ever seen. The Tories under Mr. Drew sallied forth against the King government, virtually ignoring the provincial Liberals.

They dismissed Premier Nixon as "a flunky and puppet of Mitchell Hepburn, the U.S. annexationists, Mackenzie King, Quebec City, Ottawa and Washington."

The Liberals likened their man to a besieged Abe Lincoln during the United States civil war—their newspaper advertisements featured pictures of the U.S. president rather than Mr. Nixon with an underpinning of such Lincolnesque election slogans as "Don't change horses in midstream."

Then came the CCF The party, under E. B. (Ted) Jolliffe, didn't win a single seat in the 1937 election, and there was no real socialist tradition in Ontario before 1943.

The only remotely socialist episode the province had experienced was in 1919 when Ernest Charles Drury scraped together his United Farmers of Ontario administration. It held power for four years.

The UFO government, an alliance of disgruntled Liberals, prohibitionists and agrarian reformers, numbered Harry Nixon among its members at one time and instituted some faintly socialist measures. But Mr. Drury regarded himself more as a Liberal than a socialist and the government lost the 1923 election to the Conservatives.

Twenty years later it was a far different matter. The CCF concentrated its weight in the cities, long the bastion of Mitchell Hepburn's Liberals, and began to have a telling effect.

The day before the election, shocked Tory and Liberal campaigners read in the Toronto newspapers of a Gallup poll giving the CCF 36 per cent of the popular vote, compared with 33 per cent for the Conservatives and 21 per cent for the Liberals.

But vote percentages didn't translate into seats on election day. Mr. Drew's Conservatives squeaked into office with 38 seats, compared with 34 for the CCF, 15 for the Liberals, two Communists and the indomitable Mr. Hepburn, returned to the 90-seat house from Elgin as an independent Liberal.

Mr. Nixon, seven of his 11 cabinet ministers and 49 other MPPs lost their seats in the worst trouncing the Liberals have ever taken. His defeated government was only 21 days old,the shortest administration in Ontario history.

The Liberal leader's defeat cleared the way for Mr. Hepburn's comeback. The former premier re-entered the caucus and, for a time, Mitchell was the Liberals' favorite leader.

Mr. Drew found himself saddled with an extremely shaky minority government and a vociferous, unruly opposition. It tottered along with Liberal support against the CCF until the 1945 legislature session.

During a routine want-of-confidence motion put up by the CCF in debate on the throne speech, Mr. Hepburn about-faced his Liberals and voted with the socialists. The government fell.

Instead of giving the CCF a chance to form a government, Mr. Drew called a snap election. It was just what Mr. Hepburn wanted him to do, but the Liberal strategy backfired: the voters were sick and tired of wartime elections and political backbiting.

Then the Tories got lucky. Early in the campaign Mr. Jolliffe made a speech claiming that Mr. Drew was building "a secret police force comparable to Heinrich Himmler,s Gestapo."

The voters didn't buy it and Mr. Drew ordered a royal commission investigation of the charges, later proved groundless. On election day CCF representation shot down to eight seats—and the socialists missed a second opportunity to form a government.

The Conservatives emerged with a clear majority of 66 seats; the Liberals were down to 11; there were three Liberal-Labor members and two Communists in the house. Mr. Jolliffe and Mr. Hepburn lost their seats.

In a surprising number of instances the Ontario electorate has proved it will buy the party line, but not the party leader.

Take the case of Mr. Drew, who went back to the voters June 7, 1948, offering an attractive election package that included $600 million worth of Ontario Hydro improvements and projects.

It was a good issue on which to fight an election. However, a few months before election day Mr. Drew's government passed a series of laws permitting cocktail lounges in the province.

The still-powerful temperance lobby went wild. The Tories weathered the backlash and retained a legislature majority in a close shave.

Mr. Drew found himself out of work. He was soundly thrashed in his Toronto High Park riding by a CCF temperance advocate.

The Conservative leader followed Mitchell Hepburn's example and gave up. Instead of retiring to listen to the grass grow, Mr. Drew plunged into federal politics, becoming Opposition Leader in the Commons.

T. L. Kennedy became premier on an interim basis. He was succeeded by Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost, who won an unexpected victory in the May, 1949, provincial leadership convention.

Mr. Frost sought his own mandate at the polls in 1951 and finished with 79 members in a 90 seat house, driving the Liberals down to seven seats and the CCF to two.

Dubbed by the Liberals as the "back-country buckaroo artist," Mr. Frost smoothed over a number of political scandals—some of which touched him personally—and the province settled into an era of relatively stable electoral politics after a decade of frantic activity.

The premier, who personally won seven elections never lost a seat in a byelection and increased his party majority in two of his three general elections. It went up to 84 in the September house of 1955 and down to 71 in 1959.

He retired in 1961 to make way for "a younger man, younger ideas" and was succeeded by John Robarts, who stepped down earlier this year for substantially the same reason.

The long reigns of Mr. Frost and Mr. Roberts have tended to obscure the explosive potential built into Ontario's three-cornered political battlefield for the last two decades.

The short fuse in an Ontario election has usually led to the CCF or its successor, the New Democratic Party. A strong socialist showing has in the past split the anti-Conservative vote, sending up in smoke both Liberal and NDP chances of winning.

In recent elections both the Liberals and New Democrats have been inching closer. The Liberals went to 31 seats in 1955, 22 in 1959, 24 in 1963 and 27 in the 1967 election, their highest since 1943.

The CCF won only two seats in 1951, three in 1955 and five in 1959. After becoming the NDP, the party mustered seven seats in 1963 and 20 in the last election.

Present standings in the 117-member house: Conservatives 68 (their lowest since the Drew governement), Liberals 27, NDP 21, independent one.

What the province's electoral history seems to be telling the politicians is that anything can happen when Ontario goes to the polls in October, despite the Tories' 28 years of unbroken administration.

The opposition parties have not been as strong as they now are since 1943.

And the fates of Mitchell Hepburn, E. B. Jolliffe, George Drew and Harry Nixon have proved that premiers and party leaders are by no means invincible at the polls.

Today in History

Sept. 15, 1971 . . .

A corps of almost 400 volunteers—the first Canadian contingent to take part in an imperial war overseas—left Canada to aid the relief of Khartoum in the African Sudan in 1884—87 years ago. British Gen. Charles George Gordon had been ordered to evacuate Egyptian garrisons besieged by the rebelling Mahdist Dervishes, but his forces in turn had been pinned down.

1803—Maj.-Gen. Georges P. Vanier was sworn in as Canada's 18th governor-general.

1858—A Jersey Central railroad train rammed a bridge over Newark Bay, causing 4 deaths and many injuries.

1858—Mrs. Philippe Langlois (Cecile), one of the Dionne quintuplets, became the mother of a son at Vancouver. She was the first quint to become a mother.

1935—The "German government decreed that Jews were to be deprived of citizenship.

1917—Russia was proclaimed a republic.

1915—The Second Canadian Contingent landed in France.

1830—The first passenger railway line between Manchester and Liverpool was opened.

Canadian Exports Need Boost

Quebec Le Soleil: Exports are the current topic of conversation. . . . Even before Aug. 15, when new American policies were announced, Canada had recorded a setback in exports.

According to Statistic Canada . . . exports had moved at a good pace during the first six months of the year. But the surplus had been cut back. The balance of international payments indicated a surplus of some $200 million, but it was $1,00 million less than the first half of 1970. . . .

In exports, the commercial trade surplus totalled $559 million for the second quarter of 1971 compared with $850 million for the same period in 1970. It totalled $700 million for the first quarter of 1971.

"In other respects, there was a deficit of $481 million in transactions other than that of goods between Canada and other countries in April, May and June of this year. It was a deficit increase of $100 million compared with the same period last year.

It is traditional for Canada to record a deficit in its balance of payments because of its considerable expenditures abroad for services such as insurance, transport, travelling costs, interests and dividends on its foreign investments . . .

But for the last 18 months, there was a good surplus in the exchange of goods which cancelled the balance of payments deficit. Exports to Europe had increased while Canada's purchases in the U.S. had progressed more slowly.

It remains to be seen if the export cutback (from U.S. policies) will be as considerable as anticipated in the next few months.

Much has made . . . of eventual visits from President Tito and Premier Kosygin.

So far, it must be noted that those exchanges have not resulted in much. With Yugoslavia, exports-imports total $10 million a year. . . . The Canadian GNP of 1970 is given in eight times Yugoslavia's GNP of $11 billion for a population equal to Canada's.

With the Russians, exports-imports do not go over $200 million a year. The very little trade in Canada except wheat. With China, it is even less by half.

In fact, the only trade with which politicians can play is not as wide as we think and the scope of exchanges is insufficient to two or three objectives.

Colonel Sam's Centenary

Hamilton Spectator

The continuing story of R. S. McLaughlin is not, as some would have it, from the pen of Horatio Alger. "Colonel Sam" was never poor from a monetary point of view in any other definition of that overworked word. He was and is, rich in worldly goods, in friendship, in accomplishment. One hundred years old yesterday, he embarks on another voyage in his extraordinary life buoyed by the knowledge that no Canadian is more respected by that small number of his peers who actually do know what they're talking about.

Sam McLaughlin brought to full bloom the auto industry in Canada, prosperity to Oshawa, and life-giving tranfusions of high-level money to numerous worthwhile causes. His faith in his country and his charity are legendary. As for hope, he has little need for it; his confidence in himself and the free enterprise system gave him no time for hoping or wishing.

A salute then by a team of scorers, a town virtually unknown, even by reputation, to the majority of Canadians, a pioneer who remembers Queen Victoria, Sir John A. Macdonald and Ulysses S. Grant, who was too old to fight in the First World War, and whose generosity makes tools out of those who claim Canada has never had a genuine, Grade-A philanthropist.

Shades of Oct. - What Price Security?

Ottawa Journal

There was a forceful ring to Premier Bourassa's argument that Quebec shouldn't be bandied a bill by the Canadian government for the charges incurred by the army in the province during the last October crisis.

The army was called in because of the threat from terrorism directed at federal as well as Quebec institutions. Terror, not separatism, was the enemy. In today's world it is easier for different guises could threaten again anywhere in Canada.

Loyalist May Take Over Night School Classes

Hastings county board of education Monday night approved the takeover of night school courses in junior high schools by Loyalist College. The college board has yet to meet to discuss it decision.

Discussions between the board and the college have gone on for months regarding the switchover. The board operated night school last year at a $800 loss. The college, on the other hand, is responsible by the terms of its charter for all co-credit adult courses in the community and is eligible for provincial grants to cover the cost.

Under the board of education proposals, fees would not be increased if Loyalist takes charge of night school classes, classes will be held in the schools with little apparent change in the setup, except that funds would come from the Loyalist budget instead of the board's. Teachers will be paid at the same rate used by the board, and the board will provide facilities at no cost.

The last provision raised a little static, since night school custodial services last year cost the board $2,000.

"I guess we'll never find out what their (the college's) grants are" said trustee Macdonald Smith.

"But their money is coming from the government and ours from the pockets of Hastings county ratepayers. I'd be willing to go ahead with this scheme if we can get assurance from Loyalist it will pick up the cost of facilities and caretaking services. I don't think the ratepayers of Hastings county should be asked to subsidize Loyalist College," Mr. Smith said.

Director of Education Eric Ramacres assured trustees that Loyalist is prepared to pay the full costs of facilities and services "if they come out in the black at the end of the year."

Those grants are not as great as we were once led to believe," commented superintendent D. C. Stirling.

The condition that Loyalist pay for facilities if able to do so at the end of the year was written into the motion to approve transfer of night school jurisdiction.

$15,000 Barn Fire In Sophiasburg

SOPHIASBRG (Staff) — Fire early the morning levelled a farm arn owned by Herbert Allen, RR 8, Picton, causing a estimated $15,-000 damage.

Members of Ameliasburg fire department were called to the Bethel St. blaze in Sophiasburg township shortly before 1 a.m.

Livestock lot in the fire, of undetermined cause, include a bull, a cow and a dog.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said, "flames almost destroyed 4,-000 bales of hay, 200 bushels of oats, a milker and a cooler.

The fire was first discovered by a neighbor, who was driving past the Allison farm.

He sounded his horn to alert the family and members of the Ameliasburg fire department were called.

A fire truck remained at the Allison farm at 8 a.m. today to protect the property from smoldering embers which threatened to flare up.

Ottawa May Assist With Museum Cost

Prospects are encouraging that additional federal money will be made available for interior renovations at Glanmore House on East Bridge Street, the future home of the Hastings County Museum.

Belleville Alderman Robin Jeffrey, chairman of the museum committee said today she met yesterday with R. T. Flanigan, assistant regional director of the National and Historics Branch of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and he indicated the door was still open for additional grant money to complete the museum renovations.

Completion of interior renovations at Glanmore House became a matter of concern last week when it was learned tenders for the work were considerably higher than the estimate.

Early estimates indicated necessary renovation could be done for $19,000 but the lowest tender for the work came in at $70,600.

Money for the work was to come from the Saleman Estate in which there is a balance of approximately $48,000. This would be insufficient to pay for all the stained renovations and if they were to be completed, either the city and the county would have to contribute money, or some of the renovations would have to be eliminated.

Yesterday an engineer from the Indian Affairs and Northern Development Department G. B. MacDonald, accompanied Mr. Flanigan to the city and the specifications for renovations were gone over with the architect and the house was inspected.

Now Mr. MacDonald will study the plans to determine if anything can be cut from the contract.

In the meantime, an approach will be made to the department on the possibility of obtaining more grant money.

So far, the federal department has contributed one-half of the $45,000 purchase price for Glanmore House and 50 per cent of the original cost of renovations for a total of $32,-000.

School Busing Foes Show Strength

GM Plant Closed in Demonstration

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Opponents of court-ordered busing for school integration in this factory town of 85,000 crippled operations Tuesday at a 30,000-worker General Motors Corp. plant.

The anti-busing forces, jubilant over the success of picketing which brought the auto operation to a halt, said it was a one-day demonstration and that there were no plans for any further appearances at the GM factory gates.

Several hundred noisy pickets paraded in front of gates to a Fisher Body Division plant in chilly, pre-dawn fog, urging workers to stay off the job.

Defying both the United Auto Workers Union and GM, more than 80 per cent of the plant's 2,000-men day shift was absent at starting time. GM sent home those men who had reported, and shut the production line because of insufficient manpower.

Four hours later, the assembly line at the adjoining Pontiac Motor Division plant came to a halt because the flow of auto bodies from Fisher stopped.

Parts manufacturing operations continued, but GM officials said these, too, would be halted if the disruptions continued.

Irene McCabe, spokesman for the National Action Group which sponsored the demonstration, said: "I knew we could do it."

About 3,500 day-shift workers were made idle by the protest. Workers who showed up on time for the first shift will receive four hours "show up" pay.

Fisher plant manager Al F. Platt said others will lose a full day's pay.

Mrs. McCabe said she hopes that by shutting a GM facility, her group can force GM to give political support to the busing fons.

Shooting Justified

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Tuesday that two Metropolitan Toronto policemen were justified in shooting a former mental patient in a confrontation here last year.

John G. Heller, 34, died in hospital after he was shot by Sgt. Ronald Meadows and Constable Thomas Mitchell.

The jury was told that Heller shot at the policemen when they investigated a complaint at a rooming house. The officers returned the fire from the street.

The jury urged stricter controls of firearms.

Sturgeon Falls French Students Stage Sit-in

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The only high school in this bilingual town of 7,000 was under peaceful siege early today by about 150 Francophone students and adults.

They were unlikely to have a serious effect on today's classes. There was little protest when they obeyed police orders to confine their sit-in to the school cafeteria.

A meeting was scheduled in Toronto today with Robert Welch, Ontario education minister, in an attempt to iron out the dispute over the group's demand for separate French- and English-speaking secondary schools.

One skirmish was reported Tuesday night and several town police moved into the two-storey building. However, police reported later that it was a minor misunderstanding.

The group took over the school, under the watchful eye of town police, at the close of Tuesday's classes. Conditions were orderly at the building, which accommodates about 1,600 students, of whom about 1,200 are French-speaking.

Sturgeon Falls is approximately 57 per cent French-speaking, though most residents are bilingual. It has been the focal point of a battle over language rights for the last two years and has been hit by three previous school strikes.

The French-speaking students are angered by a Nipissing board of education decision to operate French- and English-language schools under one roof at the secondary school here.

They want the board to turn over the high school to the French-language students and use $2.2 million, now earmarked for expansion of the present facilities, to build a separate English-language high school.

In Tuesday's protest, Jean St. Louis, one of the leaders, said the group was prepared to stay in the school indefinitely. The Grade 13 student said arrangements might be made to bring in food and other necessities.

held marches Tuesday as well. In Sudbury, school principal Paul Chauvin said only 50 of the

Outright Cigarette Ad Ban Is Opposed by Newspapers

OTTAWA (CP) — A seven-member delegation from the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association presented a brief Tuesday night to Health Minister John Munro that says a government bill to ban cigarette advertising and promotion should be replaced by federal control of "the content and form of cigarette advertising."

Earle Richards, vice-president and general manager of Toronto Globe and Mail, and president of the CDNPA, said "we did feel encouragement" after a 90-minute meeting with Mr. Munro.

"I am very confident our brief will get consideration."

The association's brief asked the government to allow informative but not persuasive cigarette ads.

"We weren't arguing the health aspects," Mr. Richards told reporters later. "We were simply arguing that an alternative to an outright ban is to allow factual information in advertising."

The association's brief said that "the prohibition of the dissemination of factual information about any product is, in our view, an unacceptable break with the freedom of the popu-

Mr. Munro told reporters later that he will "certainly look" at the presentation "and I'll think about it." But he said he didn't think the government's legislation was an infringement on any fundamental right.

While it might be possible to devise regulations concerning the content of cigarette ads, "it seems to be this would be testing the powers of government regulatory bodies to the extreme."

He said there could be so many borderline situations the government could be placed "in a pretty ludicrous situation."

Saguenay Village Being Pulled Apart

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP) — The remains of this once-thriving Saguenay Valley village are being pulled apart piece by piece.

Every day, some of the survivors of the May 4 landslide that killed 31 people and destroyed 41 homes return to see construction workers administer the final blow to the community.

The people come back to the municipal centre, stand at the top of the main street, and watch their houses being prepared for a 15-mile move to Arvida.

Heavy rainfall in the area during the last two weeks delayed start of the moving project, which is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

More than 40 homes in the town and the local church are to be moved by tractor trailer to their new sites.

On two streets, where the houses were relatively undamaged by the earth slide, and where more than 1,000 people lived, modest bungalows have been grotesquely repositioned by a huge rectangular hoist so that they can be placed aboard transport trailers.

At the end of the streets is the massive crater, caused by the landslide.

Most of the mud and clay has dried up at the bottom of the hole and the homes that stood on the surface in the crater for several days after the slide have disappeared.

A car, the roof of a house and pieces of furniture are still scattered across the surface of the 68-foot creep pit.

The parish priest, Rev. Egide Boulianne, said: "In a few months, everything will be gone from here—even the church. There will be no more St. Jean Vainney."

Canadians, Japanese Team Up Against U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Japanese and Canadian ministers adopted a tough stance against United States economic controls Tuesday and the Japanese foreign minister said his country should take the initiative in a "Japan round" of tariff-reductions.

Mitchell Sharp, the Canadian foreign minister, said the series of economic controls recently announced by U.S. President Richard Nixon "was the most important item on our agenda."

Auto Protection Move Thwarted

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Ed Broadbent was unsuccessful Tuesday in having the Commons drop regular business to discuss a resolution that Canada maintain all safeguards for Canadian production under the Canada-United States auto pact.

The motion required unanimous consent and this was denied by a chorus of "noes."

Mr. Broadbent, representing the auto industry riding of Oshawa-Whitby, said there is growing uncertainty about the future of the pact.

This was based on a "refusal" by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin to give the industry assurances, a recent statement by Prime Minister Trudeau that Canadian safeguards in the pact are negotiable, and moves in the U.S. to trim the Canadian share of production under the pact, Mr. Broadbent said.

The pact removed duties between the two countries on motor vehicles and original equipment parts at the manufacturing level as a move to provide expanded markets for Canadian production.

A joint communique issued at the end of the two-day meeting between senior cabinet ministers of both governments said a surcharge on U.S. import duties "endangers the multilateral trading framework, and adversely affects the exports" of Canada and Japan.

"The committee emphasized the need for the early removal of the United States surcharge."

The Japanese foreign minister, Takeo Fukuda, said through an interpreter at a news conference after the meeting: "Japan and Canada should make an alliance against the United States surcharges."

Mr. Sharp said later he was encouraged by the Japanese foreign minister's comments on promoting further tariff reductions.

"It's immensely important that they are saying this publicly."

The two-day session, the sixth in a series of bilateral meetings that began in 1961, covered a wide range of topics.

These included:

—Canada's position on United Nations membership for China. Mr. Sharp said Canada will vote for the Albanian resolution proposing that Mainland China replace Nationalist China on the Security Council.

—Dumping of Japanese manufactured goods on Canadian markets. The Canadian ministers asked for Japanese co-operation "in the orderly marketing of Japanese exports to Canada and in avoiding trade diversion from other markets."

Senate to Examine Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate has authorized its banking, trade and commerce committee to examine the government's bill to overhaul Canada's tax laws before the bill is passed by the Commons.

Senators approved a motion Tuesday by Senator Salter Hayden, committee chairman, to send the Commons bill, and the government's summary of the tax legislation, to the committe immediately for study.

Senator Hayden (L-Ontario), a director of several large companies, said a long look was necessary to ensure the bill conforms with the government's stated intentions.

Senate study of a Commons bill before Commons passage is unusual. Senators could cite only one precedent, a 1941 tax bill.

Senator John Connolly (L-Ontario) a member of the committee, said it was heartening that the "now notorious" white paper on taxation, which preceded the bill, had been changed as result of the committee's work.

Government Insists Exports Not Subsidized

OTTAWA (CP) — The government insisted Tuesday that its proposed aid fund for exporting industries is not intended to subsidize exports in the face of new United States trade restrictions.

That line provoked confusion in the Commons finance committee, especially since the aid fund has been billed as the government's response to U.S. import surcharges imposed Aug. 15.

Further, only companies that normally export at least one-fifth of production to the United States would qualify for the proposed federal grants. Also, the grants would be directly related to the U.S. surcharge, covering up to two-thirds of the 10-percent levy at the U.S. border.

Nevertheless, Bruce Howard (L—Okanagan Boundary), parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, insisted repeatedly that the federal grants are not intended to help Canadian exporters offset the impact of the U.S. surcharges on selling prices in the U.S. market.

At one stage during the committee hearing of almost three hours it appeared from Mr. Howard's explanations that companies receiving the federal grants would be unable to use the money to keep prices down.

But he finally conceded under a barrage of questions that the funds could be used to counter the U.S. surcharges and keep down selling prices.

Mr. Howard's testimony on Bill C-262, the employment support bill debated in the Commons last week, followed reports from Washington that U.S. authorities are studying the Canadian measure to see whether it would undercut the U.S. program to restrain imports.

Trudeau One Up on Lewis

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis had one of his pet phrases boomerang on him Tuesday as he questioned Prime Minister Trudeau on possible ways to stop a U.S. nuclear test in the Aleutians.

Mr. Lewis told the Commons there are reports that President Nixon is reconsidering the need for the underground blast, scheduled for Amchitka in the Aleutian chain off Alaska next month.

Would Mr. Trudeau consider a personal appeal to Mr. Nixon to scrap the test, Mr. Lewis asked.

Mr. Trudeau replied that he had said last week that he was not ruling out an appeal to Mr. Nixon if other steps did not dissuade the Americans.

He was still not ruling out the possibility that he might "take my cap in hand" and go to Washington.

has been used repeatedly by Mr. Lewis in references to Canadian objections to the new import surtax announced by the United States last month.

Liberal Strategy

Speaker A Day to Back Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government apparently is planning to use one speaker a day in its bid to get its whopping new tax bill through the House of Commons as quickly as possible.

The speaker-a-day approach, stressing such attractive points as the dropping of a million Canadians from the income tax rolls, appears to be the strategy the Liberals are adopting. For the rest of the day, they seem content to let opposition members do the talking about the many other facets of the huge bill.

This pattern became clear in the Commons Tuesday, second day of full debate on the tax package.

Colin Gibson (Hamilton-Westworth) was the only Liberal speaker Tuesday. His message was that opposition MPs should stop their "gloom-and-doom" prognostications and pass the bill so that Canada could enter a new era with a reformed tax system.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday his party is going to stay at bat as long as necessary to make the government answer the real questions facing the Canadian people.

That pitch that the bill would take many lower-income Canadians off the tax rolls would not work, he said, because the rest of the bill appeared to create more problems than it ever would solve.

The bill provides for increased personal income tax exemptions and a generally lower rate of corporation income taxes. But it also would introduce a capital gains tax, on stock market profits for example, and would include in individual income for the first time such things as employer contributions to medical care insurance programs and payments from unemployment insurance.

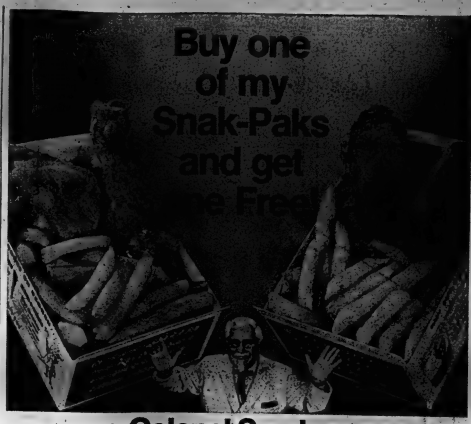
Mr. Stanfield said it is not enough for the government to propose reductions at the lower end of the income scale. Given the problems of the Canadian economy, it was obvious that there had to be tax reductions across the board to put the country back on the road to economic growth.

The bill would increase basic income tax exemptions to $1,500 from $1,000 for unmarried taxpayers and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married taxpayers.

Mr. Stanfield said this would have only a temporary effect. It was the first change in years in the exemptions although the cost of living had been climbing without letup.

Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) said the bill would do little for the 30 per cent of Canadians who collared only seven per cent of the country's total income. Many of them went to bed hungry.

But the bill would continue the long-established Liberal tradition of coddling those industries extracting non-renewable Canadian resources and selling them at "exorbitant profits" and refusing to hit the rich.



The average working man in Canada, with the increased personal exemptions, might be $100 better off, Mr. Broadbent said.

Compare this with the man "just eeking out an existance" on $100,000 a year, who would save $5,623 under the new basic exemptions.

"Some reform that is."

There was a "magnanimous" provision in the new bill for carpenters, plumbers and other salaried workers to deduct up to a maximum $150 a year for work-related expenses. But corporation directors, advertising men and other professionals would still be able to write off $150 a night for entertainment, while enjoying themselves with their clients, and do this many times over during a tax year.

This was "sheer hypocrisy."

Admiral's K-30 and K-16 color chassis are perhaps the most sophisticated color chassis on the market today. Technical advances such as plug-in solid state devices, plug-in solid state focusing module and automatic color control all work together to give you what we like to call crisp color. In addition to the electronic advancements on the K-16 and K-30, Admiral has the cost of ownership down to a minimum. By this we mean that when service calls arise, the cost will be minimized due to such labor-savers as tilt-out chassis, plug in circuit, plug-in solid state devices and a warranty that begins with 3 years on color tube, 2 years on tuners and 1 year home service by Admiral's factory-trained servicemen.

A Camp Souvenir

Jane Britton, Company 12 and Heather Elliott, Company 16, both Gold Cord Guides, who recently returned from camp, admire a poncho decorated with a collection of badges brought back by Jane from Doe Lake Provincial Camp. Jane took a camp leader's course at Doe Lake while Heather trained to become a junior leader at Waupoos and Mississagagon.

Gold Cord Guides Tell of Camp Experiences

By SUSAN KORAH
Weewee's Reporter

"Training to be a camp leader is a fantastic experience" said Gold Cord winner Jane Britton who recently returned from Doe Lake Provincial Girl Guide camp where she took a camp leaders' course. Another Gold Cord winner from this area, Debbie Wilson, also attended the same camp while Heather Elliott, a third Girl Guide who won her Gold Cord this year, received junior leader's training at Waupoos area camp and at Mississagagon near Kaladar.

Describing her experiences at Doe Lake, Jane said she met a large variety of people there, including three Guides from Mexico and a few from Lithuania, as well as girls from the States and other parts of Canada.

"You really learn a lot about life and people," she mused and continued that many young people have the idea that Girl Guides are "square." "But meeting all these people and learning how to get along with them is a great experience and there's nothing square about that," she said.

Then of course there was the reviewing of all the usual Girl Guide skills such as knotting and setting up camp. One night was organized as "survival night." Each girl was given the barest essentials in food, clothing and equipment and asked to spend the whole night all by herself in the woods, far away from civilization.

Jane emphasized that this was a tremendously exciting experience and then described her adventures on survival night. Like all the other girls participating in this 'adventure,' she had a bag of oatmeal, a few raisins, some bouillon cubes, salt, some matches, a spoon, knife, a few clothes, a groundsheet and a flashlight packed into her sleeping bag.

She used her imagination and some of the practical skills she had learned at Girl Guides to make herself a shelter in the woods out of boughs interlaced with leaves, with her groundsheet to serve as a "floor". As soon as she crawled under this "roof" and into her sleeping bag it began to pour rain but the shelter kept her warm and dry throughout the night. For supper she had soup and "porridge" made out of her oatmeal and raisins.

"It was just beautiful out there that night!" she recalled. Being so far away from the pressures of everyday living and so close to nature, she had lots of time to think and to enjoy the silence of the night and the soft ripple of the lake near by.

The next morning after breakfast — soup and porridge again — she took her shelter apart and left the place as it was before she settled down there for the night. Then she walked back to camp having enjoyed what she considered the most interesting experience of the whole camp. This was during the first two weeks and during the next two weeks she worked with the girls as a leader using all her newly acquired skills.

Debbie Wilson took the same course while Heather Elliott's camping experiences consisted of helping with swimming instruction, canoeing, biking, making camp fires and learning how to be a junior leader. There were also the usual things one does at camp such as cooking, dishwashing, crafts and nature hikes.

One day they went canoeing to an island, cooked a meal, enjoyed a camp fire and canoed back the same day.

"Next year I hope to go to the CLIT (camp leader in training) camp at Doe Lake where Jane went this year" said Heather.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Judith Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Callaghan, Toronto, to Mr. Douglas Brian Harder, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Harder, RR 2 Belleville. The wedding will take place on September 25 at 3 p.m. in St. Timothy's Catholic Church, Toronto.

* * *

Pastor of Two Congregations

TWEED — The Wesleyan Methodist and the Free Methodist Congregations in Madoc are now under the leadership and ministry of one minister, Mr. William Quick has moved from St. Catharines to Madoc to become the pastor of these two congregations, and is residing in the Wesleyan Methodist Church parsonage on Elgin Street.

The congregation of both churches met jointly in a sweet spirit of fellowship and co-operation. Superintendent James S. A. Spearman of the Wesleyan Church, and superintendent Earl S. Sull of the Free Methodist Church were present and shared in leadership in the morning. The arrangements for the two congregations participating together were considered in an atmosphere of friendly sharing by people of both churches.

It was agreed that the 10 a.m. Sunday School, the 11 a.m. Sunday Morning worship service, the Wednesday evening prayer and Bible study hour and the youth meetings will be held regularly each week in the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

The Sunday evening Evangelistic rally will be held regularly each week in the Free Methodist Church at 7.30 p.m.

It is fully expected that this mutually agreed plan will bring a more effective Methodist fellowship, witness and ministry to the people of Madoc and nearby communities.

The people of Madoc and surrounding area are invited to attend an induction service for Mr. Quick on September 9 at 8 p.m. in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. James S. A. Spearman and Rev. Earl S. Sull will share together in this important and unique service.

A Fellowship hour following the service will give added opportunity to become better acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Quick and family.

Rawdon Couple Observe 55th Wedding Anniversary

RAWDON — On Saturday evening September 11 Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen entertained 25 guests in Mount Pleasant - Rawdon church hall to celebrate their 55th wedding anniversary. The September group of the UCW served the anniversary dinner to the immediate family and a few friends.

The head table was decorated with scorched green ribbon, bows and tinted white 'mums. Their daughter Ellen and her husband Sid Demorest of Marmora provided the anniversary cake and a scrap book entitled "This is Your Life". Their son Ormet MacMullen of Belleville and his wife Jean gave them a corsage of green tinted 'mums and a boutonniere.

Sid Demorest was master of ceremonies. The program consisted of several musical selections by Harvey Couch, Kenneth Couch and Donald Campbell. The soloist was Mrs. Marguerite McMullen. Mrs. W. C. Coe and Mrs. Garth Joslin were in charge of the sing-song.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walker Wrightman whose wedding in September 1956 had been attended by the MacMullens.

Following the toasts Florence gave a few highlights of the 1916 wedding when neighbors and friends assisted with the catering for 225 guests. She also spoke about their honeymoon at the Toronto exhibition.

Pictures of the 1916 wedding and of the golden anniversary celebrations, also several greeting cards were displayed.

On September 6, which was the actual date of their wedding they attended the Marmora fair and were supper guests at the home of their daughter.

Sister Trades Her Habit for Bright Summer Dresses and New Hairdo

MONTREAL (CP) — Sister Elizabeth Herauf credits her most recent successes with people to the fact that she doesn't dress, act or think like a nun.

At the age of 32, after 25 years in the Order of the Grey Nuns and several weeks as summer curator of the Eskimo pavilion at Man and His World, Sister Elizabeth has traded in her habit for bright summer dresses and a new hair style:

"And if you really want to hear about it," she said in an interview, "I feel good.

"I can go anywhere and people don't look at me like they used to. It's much more relaxing and I'm able to speak to people on their level, whereas before people spoke to me in a different way, very conscious that I was a nun.

"It was like a guard that had come down between us. And do you know something? There shouldn't be a guard. As a nun, my job is to reach people. I can do it better out of the habit."

The freedom to wear pretty clothes and have her hair done is not the only thing that separates Sister Elizabeth, from the rest of her religious order.

There are her ideas, for example.

"I'm an ordinary woman," she explained. "I don't go into bars because I don't like them. I like a drink, in fact, I often have one on a hot afternoon. But bars have never appealed to me.

"Of course, I'd go if I was with a group of people and I didn't want to embarrass them. And, I'd have a beer too.

"And I love men. I say it in the widest terms. I don't love a man to the extent that I want to marry him, or anything like that.

and the temptation has been hard to fight. But I've fought it and I can honestly say that I'm happy."

Sister Elizabeth, a native of Regina and now a student in northern education at University of Saskatchewan, has been teaching for the last 17 years.

From 1953-58, she taught Eskimos at Chesterfield Inlet, 500 miles north of Churchill, Man., and recalls that the temperature often dropped to 45 below.

After five years in the federal government job, she was asked to come home.

"I'd been too liberal, and there had been some conflict between myself and some of the sisters. It was a very upsetting moment of my life and I've never really forgotten it.

"I've forgiven but not forgotten. But do you know something? It made me more mature. I learned more about people and nerve to trust them only on face value."

Sister Elizabeth has continued to wear her habit in the convent because "the Grey Nuns are conservative."

"Some of the older nuns would never understand."

They would likely be just as shocked by some of her philosophies on divorce—of which she approves—and premarital sex.

"There's nothing immoral about two people having a sexual relationship without being married, providing that the intentions are honest. If I oppose it at all, it is because someone, usually the woman, invariably gets hurt."

However, Sister Elizabeth disagrees with abortion, remarriage and trying to teach religion in schools.

"The most influential teaching of all is how the teacher herself conducts her life in front of students.

"You see, we're living in a wonderful era—people are so free. But they don't know how to be free and responsible. These two things must go hand in hand."

Office Girl Imposes on Staff

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Ours is a firm of architects and I am one of six secretaries.

The seventh employee is the office girl and she is getting to us all down. One by one she has pushed her duties over onto the secretaries who have to do the jobs when she is away. Her absenteeism is becoming something scandalous.

Now all she does is keep the record books up to date. Our bosses know all need our resentment but they let the situation ride. We like working for this firm but we all feel exasperated about this unfair situation. — Secretary

Dear Secretary: In search of strength — we have seen that time and again. I'd suggest all six of you sign a petition and present it to the senior member of the firm.

Your document should list: (1) The duties which properly belong to the office girl. (2) Actual days of absenteeism of office girl as compared with secretaries. (3) Your respectful request that the situation be remedied without further delay.

State that the entire staff has enjoyed the challenging work which is entrusted to them and wishes to continue to enjoy their association. If any member of the firm senses a threat in all this, well— ?

* * *

Dear Doris: Am I supposed to just sit by and watch my husband destroy himself with liquor?

There are times when he comes home drunk after midnight and expects me to cook him a meal. I am threatened with being kicked out if I don't comply with his demands regarding eating.

I never have girl friends in because he might pass out cold on the chesterfield. In spite of all this I still love him. "Love makes fools of us all". — Giving Up

Dear Giving Up: You husband may need the shock of losing you — for a while — before he will change. Alcoholism is a disease; and while the victim believes he has everything under control, liquor controls him!

Up to now you have been covering for him, so successfully that you have kept the coast clear for further alcoholic inroads. And obviously he ignores your protests.

Some night just be gone when he comes home. The Al-Anon group where you are can give you moral support in standing off from your husband's problem. Believe me, this is the only way.

Dear Doris: I read with interest someone's request for a cure for snoring.

Well, I used to be accused of snoring quite heavily. I now put a little vaseline in my nostrils and rub a little vaseline on the outside of my nose. I think I have cured myself of snoring as I have heard no more complaints.

I do this every night before going to bed. Perhaps your readers will be interested. — Peace and Quiet.

Dear Peace And Quiet: Sounds too simple for words.

To my snoring readers: would you do a little research for me? Please try the vaseline approach and let us know how you get on.

* * *

There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Red Cross Gives $250

The treasurer, Mrs. James McChesney, reported that $250, had been donated to the Marmora recreation committee to assist with the swimming program.

The proposed budget for 1972 was reviewed and passed and it was estimated that a total of $330, would be required for Red Cross activities in the community.

It is hoped that the 1972 campaign will be successful in collecting this amount.

Mrs. Eldon Killian, water safety chairman, reported that the Red Cross swimming program conducted by the recreation committee had been very successful.

Over 150 children registered for swim classes; in addition ten students successfully completed a survival swimming course. Nine students obtained an intermediate award while being registered for other classes.

There is also a co-ordinated effort with the Royal Life Saving Society with 13 awards being won.

For the second year competitive swimming was a part of the program. Teams from Marmora competed in four meets, placing well in these events.

Mrs. Killian also advised that films on water safety and safe boating practices were shown in the schools.

A display on the water safety theme was also set up in a local store window for water safety week.

A vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Clinton Nickle who donated the supplies again this year for the first aid kit at Legion Park.

Sandwich Fillings Economical and Easy

By MARY MOORE

The Golden Rule for children's school lunches is nutrition — not just "fill-'em-up."

Make your children proud of their goodies in a good lunch box with good equipment inside such as a small thermos and a plastic container with tight-fitting lid for fruit or salad.

A school lunch box should contain a 2-slice whole wheat bread sandwich (or 2 sandwiches for big boys) and a fresh vegetable such as celery or carrot sticks or turnip or small tomato, a square of hard cheese, a fresh fruit, a cookie and a thermos of milk.

In this list you conform to Canada's Food Rules.

Obviously I am giving you Canadian produced fillings that are economical, popular and easy.

SALMON RELISH SANDWICH

1 can (3¾-oz.) B.C. salmon
2 tbsps. sweet green relish pickle
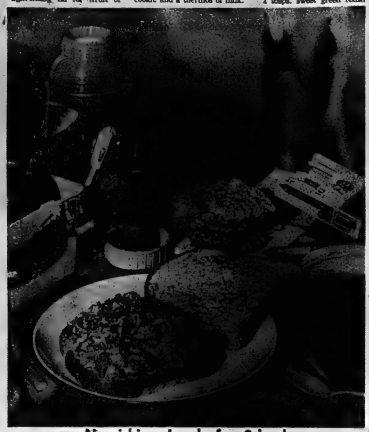
Salt and pepper to taste
2 slices whole wheat bread (or 4)



Mash salmon with juice and bones. Blend with remaining ingredients. Place between buttered bread slices. Makes one generous sandwich or two medium sandwiches.

HARD COOKED EGG SANDWICHES (may be frozen)

Cover four eggs with cold water, cover and bring to boil and turn off heat. Let stand for 20 min. to hard-cook. Chill in cold water. Peel off shells and chop or grind hard-cooked eggs. Add ¼ cup genuine mayonnaise, ½ tsp. salt, 2 tbsps. mustard relish or green hot dog relish, 1 to 2 chopped green onion. NOTES: 1) If you do not have the relish on hand use 1 tbsp. French mustard instead. 2) Chopped sailed olives are a good addition too. Mix all of whatever you choose well. This amount will fill six 2-slice sandwiches.

Spread 6 slices of bread with butter. Spread remaining 6 slices with egg filling. Put parts together. Cut each in half or quarters and wrap each in wax paper or Saran. Using 2 plastic bags of same size, slip one inside the other to make a double strength bag. Slip wrapped sandwiches inside. Add a note telling what the bag contains. Fold top of bags over four times, clip the fold together and freeze.

When sandwiches are needed take out the number you need for the current lunch you are assembling.

Mom Begs Daughter To Keep Her Baby

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 21-year-old girl — nervous wreck might be a better description. I don't need a lecture on morals. I know where I went wrong. What I need to know now is how to get my mother off my back.

ANN LANDERS

I am five months pregnant and look it. I do not want to keep this child for a lot of reasons, the main one being that the father is already married and has told me he can prove in court if necessary that I had several other lovers. I'm ashamed to say he could do it.

I went to go to a home for unwed mothers and put this child up for adoption. My mother is begging me to keep the baby. She says God has sent this child to replace the one she lost 15 years ago. What she doesn't realize is that the father is black. If she knew it she would tell my dad and he'd kill me. He is so prejudiced he's like insane. Should I tell her the truth so she will leave me alone? The woman is driving me crazy. — CORNERED IN KITCHENER.

* * *

DEAR C.: I gather from your letter that you've been a fairly busy girl. Since you've had several lovers, there's a good chance that you yourself could not swear to the paternity of the expected child. So, keep quiet and check into a home as soon as possible.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will print this letter and teach a few million slobs something about merchandise they buy in stores and then try to return.

To begin with, there are sanitation laws that must be observed or the store gets into trouble. For example, some people try to return underwear. Can you imagine such a thing? They also try to get their money back on cosmetics with the seals broken, toothbrushes with the package torn, stockings with runs, scratched sunglasses, even bathing suits — just name it and we've seen it.

Yesterday a woman came in to return a formal shirt which her husband had bought last week. The cardboard backing was out and the shirt had been worn. I asked her what was the matter with it. She replied, "Nothing. But several people made fun of the ruffles.' When asked if she would buy a shirt in that condition, she replied, angrily, "I didn't come in here for the third degree. I want to see the manager." When I told her I was the manager she left in a huff, mumbling, "This is the last time I'll do business in this dump."

Print my letter for the benefit of every chiseler who has ever tried to put one over on a sales clerk. We know all the tricks. There's nothing new under the sun. — ALL SALES FINAL.

* * *

DEAR FINAL: Here's your letter. If the shoe fits, wear it, girls — if not — well — er — uh — don't ask for a refund.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several time in your column you have given the impression that daughters keep house just like their mothers. I am living proof that this is not true. I am an immaculate housekeeper. You could eat off my floors. My daughter's home looks like a pigsty. She's lucky her husband is a saint. He never says a word. Please put this in your column. I'd hate to have anyone think my daughter is patterning her housekeeping after mine. Also, please explain how she got this way. — SAGINAW.

* * *

DEAR SAG: There is no set rules for behavioral patterns. Some daughters emulate their mothers and others do the opposite because they are hostile, or do not wish to compete for fear that they can't measure up.

Beach Party Ends Swim Program

MARMORA — A beach party and wiener roast at Legion park concluded the six-week swimming program, sponsored by the Marmora Recreation Committee in which 135 children were enrolled.

Reeve Jack Reynolds of Marmora Village was on hand to present the awards and congratulate those who passed the tests.

A class of 25 water safety pre-beginners consisted of Peter Wisl, Shelly Empey, Robert Spannbauer, James Fegan, Kelly Stewart, Judy Welch, Mike Clemens, Dawn Fluke, Andy Borland, Matthew Hanley, Ann Barber, Bonnie Deering, Lawrence Scanlon, Lucy Belanger, Pierre Belanger, Viki Quinlan, Cindy Quinlan, Shelly Clemens, Christine Doyle, Tracy Clemens, Paula Provost, Jill Taylor, Michael Mumby, Mark Darrah, Gloria McCormick, Tammy Sommerville.

Twenty students successfully passed the water safety junior class tests: Marijean Hopkin, Francis Doyle, Bill Barber, Sheila Trudeau, Jim Airhart, Kim Deering, Dianne Murphy, Bev Smith, Tom Empey, Kelly Welch, Gorell Wisl, Tim McCormick, Perry Provost, Katie Mumby, Rick Neseth, Nettie King, Scott Darrah, Sherry Walker, Byron Wells and Cindy Fox.

Nine pupils received the water safety intermediate awards: William Barber, Craig Killian, Theresa Scanlon, Maryjetie Neseth, Kelly Welch, Chris Kerr, Greg Hanley, Kim King, Maureen Scanlon.

Michael Scanlon, Heather King, Anne Doyle, Justin Hanley, Judy Killian, Chris Doyle, Lori March, Shawn Doyle, Charlene Deering and Tom Tokarewicz successfully passed the water safety senior tests and in addition, Shawn Doyle, Judy Killian and Lori March received royal life saving intermediate awards.

Bronze medallions were presented to Cheryl Smith, Deborah Parenuik, Janice McGarvey, Margaret Bleeker, Jerry Bell, Janet McGarvey and David Nickle.

Christine Scanlon, Ellen Gollick and Janet Maloney received a bronze cross for their efforts.

The Marmora Recreation Committee and the Red Cross Water Safety Committee were very pleased with the results obtained by the swimming program under the direction of Mary Lynn Thomson, assisted by Karen Acorn and Vicki Ann.

Playground supervisor was Marilyn Wells and part attendant duties were handled by Terry Empey, John Maloney and Doug Rotherme.

The Experts Say

Bicycles Now More Popular For Young And Old

TORONTO (CP) — Housewives are going shopping on them, businessmen are riding them to work, whole families are spending the weekend pedalling around on their bicycles.

No longer is bicycling in North America strictly child's play. Canadians are riding bikes because they're easier to get around on in the city than cars, because it's good exercise, because it cuts pollution, because it's fun.

You can buy a bicycle for anything from about $30 to $200. You can buy one that folds, you can buy one with as many as 10 gears, you can buy a plain one.

Where to ride is a problem in most cities, but there are a few signs that it may not always be. Here and there towns are putting up bike route signs along streets not too crowded with motor traffic. Metro Toronto parks commissioner Thomas Thompson says he is hoping to negotiate a 30-mile bicycle and walking network along Hydro rights of way.

If you don't like to ride alone, clubs are springing up for people who want to ride in competitions, for people who want to tour the countryside or the city on their bicycles.

Mrs. William Clarke says, "I'm all for bicycle paths where you don't get any exhaust fumes. We ride in a park near us and every two minutes a car goes by blasting fumes. I think they should keep the paths for people walking or riding bikes or horses."

Mrs. Clarke says her family gets the bikes out in the spring, and that it takes her and her husband a while to get in shape.

She says her normal cycling costume includes hazardous bell-bottom jeans.

"Bicycle clips look a little square. You think of Mrs. Harvest Rutherford getting on her wheel."

Patricia Cooney of the Ontario Safety League says she uses a rubber band to keep the flap out of the chain.

Mrs. C. A. L. Clokie says apart from family excursions, she uses her bicycle to do local shopping.

"It's handier. I haven't had any trouble with car drivers."

OFFERS ADVICE

John McKenzie, who rides his 10-speed bicycle five miles through heavy traffic to work, says drivers used to watching for motorcycles are no menace to an alert bicycle rider.

He says he can get to work in 25 minutes because it's downhill most of the way, and takes about 45 to get home.

"You can zip through traffic lanes, and you can keep traffic speed. I play leap-frog with buses, they pass me, then I pass them at the bus stop.

"It didn't take long to get in shape and I really enjoy it. The main reasons I ride are because of the exercise and because it's a way of being closer to the weather."

He mentioned one sad fact that all of the bicycle riders mentioned. They all lock their bikes to gratings, to railings, to poles.

"With the proliferation of bikes has come a commensurate proliferation of bike safety advice for bicycle riders and thefts."

Miss Cooney has some safety advice for bicycle riders.

Buy a bike that is the right size for you, and be sure you are used to it before you take on any major expeditions. If you buy a second-hand bike, be sure it is in safe condition, which includes good balance.

Be sure you know the rules of the road and safety regulations wherever you ride your bike.

Be sure you are in shape before you try a long tour on a bicycle. Like any exercise, it takes a little getting used to.

Teacher Enjoys First Position At Northern Indian Reserve

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — It is more than 800 miles from Cathy Pollock's home in London to Sandy Lake, a northwestern Ontario Indian reserve.

Cathy says there is no scale to measure the psychological distance.

She is a teacher whose first job was with the department of Indian affairs and northern development.

"It has really turned out to be quite an experience. It's something you have to come up north to feel.

"This is my home, but it's not, really. I would rather be in the North.

"I've learned a lot about myself and other people. Your values and attitudes change, you learn more patience. It's peaceful and quiet and you can be by yourself to think. You're a lot freer. It teaches you to be quite independent."

In Sandy Lake, population about 1,000, situated 250 miles north of Sioux Lookout, Cathy shared a small house with another young teacher. She taught a class of 35 Grade 2 pupils.

Northern teachers have an orientation program to prepare them for some of the differences they will experience, but when they get up north, they are on their own.

"The worst thing is the very first day when you're up there in front of the class and they don't speak much English and you don't speak any of their language.

"Anything we learned at teacher's college didn't help us with these children. It takes a long time to get the kids to open up.

"For someone going in there, the thing I'd tell them is that they aren't going to save the people. You go in with your up-to-date teaching methods and it just doesn't work. I sat down for two weeks and just watched my kids and then worked from there."

She said the children loved to play pranks on her, but getting them to talk was difficult.

"When one of them who hasn't spoken to you all year comes up and says 'I to folket, please,' you almost cry."

The rest of the community were difficult to get to know, too, but she and her roommate did become friends with many of the people. The Cree women taught them to make moccasins and do bead work and in exchange, Cathy gave instructions in the use of the school's sewing machines.

Later, Cathy planned to visit friends in Sandy Lake. She is going 110 miles farther north next year to teach in Sachigo.

There were 300 pupils in the Sandy Lake school. There are only 200 people on the Sachigo reserve.

"If I like Sachigo I might stay there another year. Then I want to go to the Northwest Territories."

MADOC 4-H CALF CLUB

TWEED — The fifth meeting of the Madoc 4-H Calf Club was held at the farm of Mr. Fred Stein recently, at 8 p.m. The meeting was opened by Gail Brownson, who started the meeting with the 4-H pledge.

Sandra Sein then presented her calf. David Foley, Ray Pender, and Gail Brownson told all how to lead their calves and how to stand. The first year members all took a task at leading the calves around.

It was decided by vote that Sandra Stein will run for the Dianne Gunning award on behalf of the Madoc club.

Discussion took place concerning decorations for the club's next building. Many ideas were suggested.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at the farm of Roy Brownson, in September. A film showed by Ray Pender was enjoyed by all.

Everyone went to the kitchen and enjoyed a corn roast prepared by Mrs. Fred Stein. She was thanked on behalf of the club by Elaine Waunsmaker.

Family Pet Does Grocery Shopping

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Ares is an eight-year-old dog, mostly German shepherd, who has been doing his family's grocery shopping for two years.

His owner, Wolfgang Guier, said it took the dog about two weeks to master the job.

"You can do it with almost any dog, provided you know him and there is communication between the two of you.

We send him out on the average of every second day and the people at the store don't mind. When the store changed hands this year I asked if Ares could carry on. They said it was fine, provided he didn't bite. Well, he hasn't bitten anyone yet."

Mr. Guier said the idea is not a new one in his family.

"When I was a little boy in Germany I was told about my grandfather who shared a similar setup with his German shepherd."

John Lewis, a clerk at Pal's confectionary, said it gave him a turn the first time he saw Ares in the store. Unaware of the change in management, the dog arrived wearing his mottled tangerine coat and carrying a milk jug with change in it. He took up his usual station, waiting to be served.

Mr. Lewis said: "I didn't believe it, and sent him home. Shortly afterward he came back with his owner and the fellow said the dog wanted a jug of milk. So I opened some quart bottles, took the change inside the jug and filled it. We've continued ever since.

He trots right up, or if it's winter and the door is closed, he jumps up and puts his paw on the door so I'll open it. He sits in the same spot until I come to him, and he's got a change purse and a list of things. I take them, fill the order, and send him on his way."

MAN vs THE WELFARE STATE by Henry Hazlitt

In this volume Hazlitt explains, in plain everyman's language, fallacies inherent in welfare policies and their dire consequences. Even more important he outlines the economic and political measures that are necessary to lead us to a healthy economy.

KING CHARLES III OF SPAIN by Sir Charles Petrie

Charles III was born in 1716 and spent his youth as King of the two Sicilies where he carried out many improvements. He was the perfect example of the benevolent despot. He was intensely devoted to the public good and transformed both the administration and the economic outlook of the country, successfully arresting the decay of Spain till his death in 1788.

OVERSKILL by Eugene S. Schwartz

Science will not save us, Eugene Schwartz holds; if anything, it is killing us. He demonstrated that technology offers no complete solutions but generally stirs up a whole new set of problems. Taking up where Rachel Carson, Paul Ehrlich and Lewis Mumford leave off, Eugene Schwartz's Overskill is a book that will create discussion on the survival of man.

THE MYSTERY OF MINOAN CIVILIZATION by Leonard Cottrell

On the island of Crete, Sir Arthur Evans found evidence of the Minoan civilization, once thought to be legendary. This book answers such questions as: Where did the Minoans come from? How was their society organized, and why did it disappear? Leonard Cottrell introduces the reader to the civilization and to the people who worked to solve its puzzles: such men as Michael Ventris, who deciphered the linear B script that revealed Crete's ties with the early Greek world.

Report Shows Store Hour Legislation Not Major Issue

MONTREAL (CP) — Today's market is a buyer's market but retailers are ignoring the preferences and convenience of shoppers in lobbying for restricted store hours, a study on the benefits and cost of evening shopping indicates.

Dr. Bruce Mallen, chairman of the marketing department at Sir George Williams University, says in the first volume of a three-part report that Canada's retailing community has failed to keep up with changing trends of buying habits.

"The attitude of many retailers is that people will shop when 'we want them to'."

Dr. Mallen says research shows that legislation restricting shopping hours was not a major issue until after the Second World War. Many stores were open six full days and at least one evening, with Saturday evening shopping being most popular.

Stores gradually began shortening their work week, citing reasons such as improved personnel relations, competition for capable personnel, pressure of labor unions and threat of union organization.

But, Dr. Mallen notes: "There was no indication that the consumer's interests were taken into consideration."

With construction of shopping centres in the 1950s and 60s, downtown retailers favored even wider-ranging hours controls since consumers tended to patronize suburban shopping stores which were not affected by existing legislation.

By 1966, a survey indicated that at least 47.7 per cent of 465 Canadian cities had some restriction on store hours.

Meanwhile, the 40-hour work week had been established and unions dropped support of legislation governing store hours. In fact, many employees welcome the chance to work more than 40 hours a week if they are paid time and a half or double time.

A significant fact which Dr. Mallen says many retailers are ignoring is that more married women are working today than at any other time in Canadian history. In 1951, about 27.5 per cent of all women who worked were married; by 1961 the number had jumped to 46.6 per cent.

However, "women who work find it most difficult to do their shopping at the traditional times between nine and six."

"About the only time at which these people could shop during the week would be either during the normal seven-hour lunch period or after five or six in the evening.

"It also seems that many retailers have not taken into consideration the fact that there is a tendency, particularly among young married couples, to do shopping on a family basis. The only time the husband and wife can shop together, if both are evening and on weekends."

Moreover, Dr. Mallen says, if women do shop for food during the day, they have the problem of getting frozen foods or heavy canned goods from downtown to their suburban homes.

He suggests that a more practical solution would be for stores in different areas to decide their own hours based on consumer preferences.

Stores downtown might find it desirable to maintain the nine-to-six schedule, while suburban stores might prefer to open about noon and operate every evening.

He says: "It appears not in the interests of the consumer if a small majority of downtown merchants succeed in getting legislation passed which forces stores to close at six o'clock, regardless of where the stores are located."

An even more compelling argument, at least for retailers is provided by statistics showing that although Canadians' disposable income rose 95 per cent between 1957 and 1967, personal expenditures in retail outlets dropped 11.5 per cent to 52.6 per cent.

"Therefore, more money is being spent but retail outlets are not maintaining their market share. American experts observed that more money is spent if the consumer is allowed to shop at his own convenience."

MRS. JOHN GILMOUR, Frankford, Ontario, COMES MAXI DISCOUNTING AT LOBLAWS AND SHE COMES OUT AHEAD.

Says Mrs. Gilmour, "I can't do all my shopping here because I live out of town but I do come in to Loblaws as often as I can because I like the products here and I like the prices very well. I don't go around to the other food stores in Trenton but I know from the prices I see in the paper that I'm getting good buys here. On a lot of things I notice the prices at Loblaws are quite a bit lower than in the other stores. And the quality here is good . . . fresh vegetables for instance, when you buy them here you don't get them brown and find bad ones on the bottom. That means a saving because there's no waste".

Ruth's Roost Not So High

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

BABE RUTH may be the Sultan of Swat, but crown prince Hank Aaron's credentials for the job are getting more impressive every day.

Tuesday night the Atlanta Braves' outfielder belted his 42nd and 43rd home runs of this, his 18th major league campaign, and brought his total to 655.

That puts Hammering Henry within striking distance of Ruth's 15-season total of 659 round-trippers, and, if the 37-year-old Aaron's current pace is any indication, it shouldn't take him more than three more campaigns to make up the difference or 78.

Oddly enough, Aaron is closing in on Ruth's revered record without the aid of a single 50-homer season. Ruth attained that mark four times, connecting for 54 in 1920 and 1928, 59 in 1921 and his legendary 60 in 1927.

Willie Mays is also within 100 homers of Ruth's record, but, at 40, his chances are somewhat less than Aaron's.

RUSTY STAUB is probably wishing Montreal Expos were playing in the American League. The Expo outfielder has been on a batting rampage, hitting .400 since mid-August to bring his average up to .308.

In hard-hitting National League company, that's not good enough to put Staub within 15 places of batting-foe Torre and his .365 clip. But in the American League, Staub's average would rank him fourth behind Tony Oliva's .342. The bottom four of the American League's top 10 hitters are below the .300 mark.

Staub produced his 17th homer and a sacrifice fly Tuesday as the Expos trounced the Mets 12-1 in the first game of a doubleheader, then drove home two runs in the nightcap with a single and another homer as the Expos lost 6-3.

KINGSTON CELCs pulled off a remarkable comeback in Orillia Sunday to earn a berth in the Ontario Baseball Association senior finals.

Trailing Orillia Majors 11-3 after seven innings, Kingston rallied for eight runs with two out in the eighth, sparked by two-run homers by Dave Gilmour and Belleville recruit Gary Goyer.

The Kingston seniors added three more runs in the ninth for 14-11 margin as 36 - year-old veteran hurler Charlie Pester came up with two innings of scoreless relief.

The win gave Kingston the best - of - three series in two straight games over the Majors, who last week went all the way to be finals of the Canadian Senior Baseball Championship tournament before bowing out to Manitoba.

Kingston now meets Kitchener Panthers in the OBA final, with the first game in Kitchener Saturday, followed by a return game Sunday in the Limestone City.

* * *

BASEBALL TITLES are getting to be a habit for Kingston. The mighty Frolics, who beat out Belleville for Eastern Ontario honors, Sunday completed a two-game sweep over Welland to bring Kingston its first OBA minor title since 1947.

Meanwhile, the Kingston Steelworkers won the OBA peewee finals with Welland, while the city's juvenile representatives open an OBA final with Chatham this Saturday.

Kingston's Kinamen bantams dropped the first game of their OBA tyke semi-final with Kitchener over the weekend.

MONTREAL, Incidentally, is in a unique six-member club.

The Expos and five other teams in the National League's eastern division, hail from cities which are also the homes of big league football and hockey franchises.

Pittsburgh has the Pirates, Steelers and Penguins; St. Louis the baseball and football Cardinals and the hockey Blues; New York accommodates Yankees and Mets, Giants and Jets, and the Rangers; Chicagoans can watch White Sox or Cubs in summer, Bears all fall and Black Hawks in winter; Philadelphia boasts the Phillies, Eagles and Flyers, and Montreal has the Stanley Cup Habs, the Grey Cup Alouettes, and the Expos, whose only cup may be worn by catcher John Bateman.

Moira Secondary School linebacker Bob Raycroft hurdles a pair of defensive teammates who are making the tackle on offensive end Mike Akey in a pre-season scrimmage of the senior Trojans. New head coach Hugh Cook will be attempting to lead Moira to a repeat of last year's first place finish in the Eastern Division when the Bay of Quinte COSSA football schedule gets under way next week.

Trojans Cooking Up Offence

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Their defensive unit was known as "The Animals" and they lived up to the name providing hard - hitting effective work. However the offensive squad too often resembled vegetables, taking root when they had a chance to move the football.

That was the fate of Moira Secondary School's senior football team of 1970, and providing an effective offence would appear to be the major concern of new senior coach Hugh Cook if his team is to challenge for the Bay of Quinte COSSA title this season.

Cook appears to have the credentials to polish the Trojans into a top contender for this year's championship after a number of successful seasons of coaching in the Toronto area. He is a former member of the University of Toronto Blues varsity football squad.

The first year mentor is highly pleased with his charges' work in their pre-season training sessions to date.

"They're as enthusiastic, it is amazing," he says. "Sometimes I think that they take it almost too seriously. The other night I ran them through about a mile of wind sprints just to see how they'd take it and not one guy complained!"

Cook, and his assistants Al Mott and Phil Meeks have been stressing conditioning in the Trojan workouts. "I know that not many people would agree with me, but I don't think that there's really any such thing as being 'up' for a game," he explains. "The team that works the hardest and is prepared the best is going to win."

Opponents can expect to see fairly complex offensive and defensive formations from this year's Trojans. "I sometimes think that we don't give kids credit for enough intelligence. I'm not going to keep running one thing over and over until everybody's sick of it. I like to use a variety of things."

Of the defensive team, which helped carry Moira to a 4-1 record in regular season plays before losing 12-0 to Trenton in the play-offs, he notes that "they're tough, real tough. I think that's their strongest point." Among the standouts to date have been defensive lineman Stan Reston and interior linebacker Bob Raycroft.

Offensively he believes the Trojans will be able to show a marked improvement. "We have added a few new things to the offence. I think we'll be able to run the ball pretty well. I guess the only question is how good our passing will be."

Two reasons for an improved ground game should be halfbacks Peter Stallkovich and Dave Rutherford, graduates of Moira's Bay of Quinte Junior champs of last season.

Stallkovich provides inside power and tremendous blocking strength to backfield to complement Rutherford's fine moves and outside speed. Joining small, but hard-nosed ball-carrier Peter Hart, the twosome should make their presence felt in the senior league.

Quarterback is a three-man fight between last year's starter Robb Matthews and newcomers Bill Henry and John Bowen. Top offensive line candidates include guard Ross McDonald and end Mike Akey.

The Trojan coach will get his first look at his players under game conditions when they meet Napanee next Thursday in their league opener.

Alemite Neutral Ground For Kemptville Juniors

All Belleville teams have been eliminated from OASA play, but that doesn't mean that Sunday's bout between Kemptville and North York won't hold plenty of local interest.

The two Junior "A" contestants will square off at the Alemite Field, 4 p.m. Sunday in the third and deciding game of their semi - final series.

Kemptville started down the play-down path by knocking out Belleville's Ellis Juniors in the first round of play and later eliminated Oshawa's Junior entry, which featured Trenton pitching ace Paul Wannamaker.

The winner of Sunday's neutral ground game will meet either Grimsby or Owen Sound for the Ontario title.

Rollins Bitten Twice by Cook

Milton Cook bit the hand that was feeding him to give the Point Anne Cementmen a 1-0 win over Rollins Construction last night and square their Commercial Softball final series at two games each.

For 10 innings Rollins hurler Scott Reid had Point Anne in general, and Cook in particular, eating out of his hand. The Cementmen outfielder turned the tables in the 11th frame, however, to give his team the win.

With one out, Jim Horwood reached second on a pair of errors by the Construction men and then Cook delivered a clutch single for the game's only run. Reid had struck him out every time in four previous trips to the plate.

Cook had saved the game in the tenth inning racing back to grab Dale Duvall's blast to left field with two out and the bases loaded.

Don Holloway delivered the shutout win for Point Anne, his second of the series. The big right-hander scattered seven hits over the extra - inning route, while fanning 13 batters and issuing three bases on balls.

Reid was reached for only four hits on the losers mound, whipping third strikes past 13 batters and walking four.

Bruce Stickle paced the winners with two singles, while Cook and Rick Rosebush picked up one each. For Rollins it was Steve Ling rapping a pair of base hits, with the others going to Carl Boomhower, playing under Constellow, Wayne McTaggart, Chuck Rowbotham and Reid.

Gas House Gang Needs More Ice

The 1971-72 season could be a real gas, so to speak, for the Gas House Hockey League, as a total of 14 applications were received at the first organizational meeting held Tuesday night.

The number of new entries able to compete this season will depend upon the ice time made available to the league. Currently it appears as though the Gas House League will have four hours of ice time at the Memorial Arena on Tuesday nights, which would accommodate eight teams. If more time is available, then the league could operate with as many as 12 entries.

Of last year's four participants, the Merchants, Munitions and Marysville all indicated that they would field teams for this season. Mulvey's, the fourth entry from last year, was not represented at the meeting.

The Gas House League operates in the format of "a working man's hockey league," playing under international rules and stringently imposing fines and suspensions for fighting or rough play.

Cosy Grill Gals Catch Fire Early

Cosy Grill caught fire in the first inning to pave the way to a 7-5 win over Weese's Flowers in the opening game of the Women's Softball League final series.

The winners exploded for four runs in the opening frame to pin the loss on Nora Barberstock. Sandra Claus batted the win, yielding 10 hits, while fanning nine and not walking a batter. The Weese's pitcher gave up nine hits and one walk, whiffing six.

Claus paced Cosy with a double and single, while Sheila Ray and Verna Hill added doubles. For Weese's it was Nora Barberstock and Donna Brant with two hits each.

The second game in the best - of - seven series is scheduled for tonight at the Alemite beginning at 6.30 p.m.

Quintes Open Camp Saturday in Trenton

Candidates for the Belleville Quintes Senior "A" hockey entry can all get together Saturday night, for the first working camp practice.

The shift of the Peterborough Petes training site from Trenton to their home arena has meant that the Community Gardens is now available to the Belleville Senior A Club.

New coach Gene Poirier will be keeping his eye on prospective candidates for the team when the workout gets under way at 6 p.m.

Players are required to bring their own equipment and only those seriously interested in playing senior hockey are asked to attend.

Royals Spoil Oakland Bid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland Athletics, playing it cool, can clinch the American League's West Division pennant tonight in owner Charles O. Finley's backyard—Chicago.

The Athletics had a chance to wrap it all up Tuesday night in Kansas City but the Royals used six innings of shutout relief pitching by rookie Monty Montgomery for a 2-1 win to delay the clinching.

Oakland plays a twi-night doubleheader against Chicago tonight and a sweep or a split combined with a Kansas City loss against California would clinch the crown for Finley, whose insurance company is headquartered in Chicago.

Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday night, New York Yankees rapped Boston Red Sox 6-3, Detroit Tigers belted Baltimore Orioles 4-1, Milwaukee Brewers trimmed Chicago White Sox 5-4, and Cleveland Indians topped Washington Senators 3-1 in the first game of a doubleheader. The second game was suspended after 16 innings by a curfew, tied at 5-5.

Montgomery, making his major league debut, relieved Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff in the fourth inning and Splittorff was struck on the right kneecap by a line drive. The youngster, who had spent this season with Elmira in the Eastern League, permitted Oakland only four hits and earned the victory.

Diego Segui, 9-7, was locked in a scoreless duel with young Montgomery until the seventh when Amos Otis led off with a single for Kansas City.

Otis stole second—his 50th stolen base of the season, tops in the American League—and went to third when catcher Dave Duncan threw the ball into centre field for an error. Then Joe Keough singled off first baseman Mike Epstein's glove, scoring Otis.

An inning later, the Athletics had another run when Bobby Knoop singled, moved up on Montgomery's sacrifice and scored on Freddie Patek's triple.

It was a bad night all around for the Athletics. Their ace left-hander, Vida Blue, now is baseball's second-winningest pitcher after Detroit's Mickey Lolich earned his 24th victory with a six-hitter against Baltimore.

Lolich turned in his 25th complete game of the season and increased his innings pitched total to a whopping 342—highest total in the majors since Robin Roberts pitched 347 innings in 1953.

The stylish left-hander got home run help from Bill Freehan and Mickey Stanley. Aurelio Rodriguez and Gates Brown contributed three hits apiece for the Tigers, who beat Jim Palmer, 18-9.

The Yankees crept to within one game of third-place Boston in the American League East, beating the Red Sox behind Mel Stottlemyre.

Stottlemyre, who hurled a seven hitter, contributed an RBI-single to a five-run sixth inning that put New York in command. Thurman Munson drew two walks in the big inning, scoring one run and forcing in another.

Felipe Alou drove in two runs for the Yanks with a single and a double.

Kitchener To Meet Kingston

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener Panthers trounced Niagara Falls Flyers 12-0 Tuesday night to win the semi-final playoff series of the Ontario Baseball Association senior division in two straight games.

Kitchener will meet Kingston for the provincial championship with games scheduled for Kitchener Saturday and Kingston Sunday.

Win 8th Straight

Dodgers Only One Back!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One game separates Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants, and from now on, it will be up to the rest of the National League West to decide which of them wears the crown.

Or maybe they'll still have to work it out themselves. They've had to do it before—twice in 20 years—and in each case the Giants have come out on top.

But when these two teams collide, it's not just another game.

"It was like a World Series game," Los Angeles manager Walter Alston said after his scrambling, clawing Dodgers won their eighth in a row and 12th in 15 games, stunning the Giants 6-5 on Manny Mota's three-run pinch double in the ton of the ninth inning.

It was also their eighth straight triumph this year over San Francisco and gave the hard-charging Dodgers the season series 12-8 against the Giants, who less than two weeks ago commanded what seemed to be an all-but-invulnerable 8½-game margin before losing nine of 10.

"I wasn't discouraged," said the unemotional Alston, referring to the ninth inning, when the Dodgers came up trailing 5-3. "I've been around long enough to know you can't give up too soon."

The Dodgers didn't. They loaded the bases with nobody out on singles by Duke Sims, pinch-hitter Bull Sudakis and Maury Wills, setting up Mota's liner that sailed just inches over third baseman Alan Gallagher's glove, sending all three runners scurrying across the plate.

The two-bagger obliterated the San Francisco lead built on

WALT ALSTON

Bobby Bonds' second home run of the game, a three-run blast in the seventh inning coming only minutes after Chris Speier had hit a solo shot which started the rally.

"We threw everything we had at them," a downcast Giants manager Charlie Fox muttered. "Six inches lower and we might have had a triple play," he said of Mota's liner. Then, his gaze turning to a defiant stare, he added:

"We're still one game ahead with 14 left to play. We're not going to pack up and quit!"

Mota faced John Cumberland, who had just taken over for Jerry Johnson on the mound.

"I was going to swing on the first pitch if it looked like a strike," he said.

But the game still wasn't over. Sudakis had batted for winning reliever Joe Moeller, so somebody else had to pitch to the bottom of the ninth.

Alston called on Hoyt Wilhelm, who was only a year away from the majors when Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants staged their first incredible playoff, climaxed by Bobby Thomson's home run that wrote "The Miracle of Coogan's Bluff," the site of the Polo Grounds, the Giants' old home.

Wilhelm struck out pinch-hitter Fran Healy and got Speier on a grounder. But he walked dangerous pinch - hitter Willie McCovey, then Jimmy Rosario ran for McCovey and dashed to second on a passed ball.

That brought up Willie Mays, who was already playing back in that momentous 1951 play-off —and who was, incidentally, the on-deck batter when Thomson homered.

College Is IN for September — Are You?

At Loyalist College we want the world to need you. That's why we've extended our registration period for the coming fall semester. This month you can begin a course of study leading not just to a diploma, but a way of life. Wherever your particular interests lie, Loyalist College provides a course of study and an atmosphere designed for you as an individual. You may choose from among 30 programs in the Technology, Business or Applied Arts Divisions. Classes are small and personal attention is the rule rather than the exception. Our beautiful new campus will give you the feeling of being at an out-of-town college without being out of town.

Whether you are a recent high school graduate, a '68 or '69 graduate, a mature student or a transfer student, Loyalist College will review your application and discuss your qualifications and objectives right now during the extended registration period. Student loans are available through the College.

Bassett's Argo Purchase Raises Spectre of NFL Franchise

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts' recruiting drive for top United States football talent this year prompted speculation that owner John Bassett was hoping to move the Canadian Football League club into the National Football League.

The fires of speculation were fanned even further when Bassett, publisher of The Telegram, paid $2.35 million to take complete control of the club.

But the first move, says Bassett, is up to the CFL and NFL, and perhaps, Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau.

"I am not interested in getting into the National Football League under any circumstances, except one," Bassett said in an interview. "The one! It is simply this: If the NFL is going to be permitted to come to Canada, I will be interested.

"My understanding is that the National Football League's present policy is that it would not expand into Canada without the approval of the Canadian Football League. That is the NFL attitude at the moment. Obviously, it could change."

Bassett said he believes federal Health Minister John Munro, whose department deals with most sport in Canada, would be opposed to an intrusion by the NFL.

"He has asked for my support in keeping the Canadian Football League alive," Bassett said. "I need no such urging.

"In my opinion, we have a better game than the Americans have. Also, it would be a great pity if anything happened to ruin the Canadian league. It would be ruined if Toronto, possibly Montreal or Vancouver, went into the NFL."

Bassett pointed to the Argos' annual contribution to the CFL's gate equalization fund as evidence of the club's support of the league.

"I did not consent to unqualified raids on our club under this plan, as Vancouver had to do in order to get accepted into the league. I put a limit of $90,000 on our contribution. Even in Argonauts' worst years, we contributed our full amount.

"The reason I mention this is to show that each person in his own way does his best to keep the Canadian league going. Therefore, I would not be interested in the NFL—unless the policy changes."

Bassett believes that the policy will change.

"We know what is going to happen in Montreal. When Montreal makes its big pitch for federal aid to finance the 1976 Olympics, Toronto money will go, via Ottawa, to build a huge stadium.

"After the Olympics are over the announcement already has been made that the baseball team (Expos) will occupy the stadium.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Drapeau also will go after a National Football League franchise. It's inevitable, because Drapeau is a go-getter.

"If that happens, we will go strongly for a National Football League franchise. We are not going to be outmaneuvered by Montreal—especially since Toronto money will be helping to erect that stadium."

Blames Bassett

Ottawa Owner Fears Invasion

OTTAWA (CP) — The purchase of Toronto Argonauts by Toronto Telegram publisher John Bassett could lead to the downfall of the Canadian Football League, Ottawa Rough Rider owner David Loeb said Tuesday night.

Speaking to a B'nai B'rith dinner, he said he is "not too worried about the fact that the Riders looked so poor in their loss at Montreal last Saturday night."

"But I'm deeply concerned with the possibility that Canada may lose pro football. John Bassett recently bought 99.5 per cent of Toronto Argonauts and I believe he wants to bring an NFL franchise to Toronto.

"He probably feels Toronto can support two pro clubs but I strongly disagree. Once an NFL team moves into Toronto, the CFL will be through there."

Bassett said in a Toronto interview last week he is not interested in moving into the NFL. But he said that Montreal would be interested in the United States league once it got a new stadium.

"When that time comes, we'll be ready to move too."

Loeb said he sees some encouraging signs for the CFL in recent Canadian government actions.

"There were two compensating and encouraging factors in this respect.

"First of all, the government supported the Canadian Football League in banning cable television of home games and I believe this was done to guarantee the continuity of Canadian football.

"Secondly, the Hamilton turf people were turned down in their request for an elimination of the tax for their artificial turf. I can't believe that the government would reject a $40,000 request of this kind and then subsidize a dome stadium in Toronto to the extent of $20 to $40 million."

Sternberg Swapped

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Tuesday they were awarded the rights to defensive halfback Gerry Sternberg, but immediately traded him to Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The Bombers obtained Sternberg from Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference. General manager Earl Lunsford said Sternberg was sent to Hamilton, also of the EFC, for future Canadian college draft considerations.

Brothers Packs Bags for Tryout

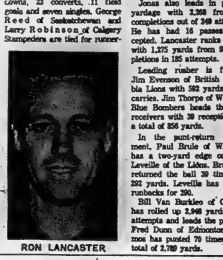
VANCOUVER (CP) — Quarterback Paul Brothers, cut by British Columbia Lions last week, has packed his bags for Ottawa and a tryout with the Eastern Football Conference Rough Riders.

"I talked to (Ottawa general manager) Frank Clair and (coach) Jake Gaita," he said Tuesday night, "and they assured me I have a good chance of making the club."

Under Canadian Football League rules, he will be on a five-day trial, aiming at the job of Gary Wood, EFC all-star quarterback last year, or Rick Cassata.

"It's a real opportunity for me," Brothers said. "The Riders have some great young Canadians and I think they're a club on the way up."

Scrambling Pays



Ron Threatens Records

TORONTO (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders' quarterback Ron Lancaster, known as a scrambler, may scramble several Canadian Football League records before the month is out.

Although the Western Conference scoring lead is held by quarterback Don Jonas of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Lancaster is threatening to wipe out two records held by Sam Etcheverry and one held by Russ Jackson.

Lancaster now is within 276 yards of Etcheverry's career passing record of 25,582 yards and within 34 of the former Montreal Alouettes star's record of 1,630 pass completions, CFL statistics released this week show. Lancaster also is just three short of the former Ottawa Rough Riders quarterback's total touchdown passes. Jackson had a record of 185 during his brilliant career.

Jonas is tops in FC scoring with 75 points on two touchdowns, 23 converts, 11 field goals and seven singles. George Reed of Saskatchewan and Larry Robinson of Calgary Stampeders are tied for runner-up spot with 54 points each.

RON LANCASTER

Jonas also leads in passing yardage with 2,382 from 134 completions out of 249 attempts. He has had 18 passes intercepted. Lancaster ranks second with 1,575 yards from 93 completions in 185 attempts.

Leading rusher is fullback Jim Evenson of British Columbia Lions with 582 yards in 125 carries. Jim Thorpe of Winnipeg Blue Bombers heads the pass receivers with 39 receptions for a total of 658 yards.

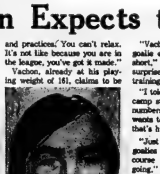
In the punt-return department, Paul Brule of Winnipeg has a two-yard edge on Mike Leveille of the Lions. Brule has returned the ball 39 times for 292 yards. Leveille has had 41 runbacks for 290.

Bill Van Burkleo of Calgary has rolled up 1,946 yards in 68 attempts and leads the punters. Fred Dunn of Edmonton Eskimos has punted 76 times for a total of 3,769 yards.

Change in Attitude

Vachon Expects to Share Net

MONTREAL (CP) — Rogatien Vachon does not really believe he is Montreal Canadiens' No. 2 goaltender, but still he tries harder to make sure he gets a regular shot at playing for the National Hockey League team.



Last year, the 26-year-old netminder was replaced by Ken Dryden near the end of the season and watched from the bench as the Canadiens won the Stanley Cup championship.

"I hope to play at least half the games this season because I know I am going to be ready," he said after chalking up the first shutout of the Canadiens' training camp Tuesday.

Vachon says he came to camp with a new attitude.

"Last season I had a bad camp and a bad start and didn't really play well until a good stretch after Christmas. This time I intend to train well, improve every day and be ready to start the season.

"The best lesson I learned last year is that you have to be working all the time in games and practices. You can't relax. It's not like because you are in the league, you've got it made."

ROGATIEN VACHON

Vachon, already at his playing weight of 161, claims to be in better shape than ever before in his fifth year with Canadiens.

Coach Scotty Bowman is happy with Vachon's work in the camp so far.

"Vachon is a proven NHL goalie and I'm not selling him short," he said. "And I'm not surprised that he's having a fine training camp.

"I told Rogie before training camp started that I don't have numbers for the goalies. I'm wants to consider himself No. 2 that's his affair."

"Just how many games the goalies split will depend of course on how the team is going," Bowman added. "I know one thing about Rogatien Vachon. He has always been the kind of goaltender who wants to play."

Bowman has been pleased with the work of holdover Canadiens and some of the top prospects. The coach was most impressed by the work of Chuck Lefley, the former Colorado National team centre who scored 16 goals and had 11 assists with Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League before being injured last season.

The Canadiens have two more days of work at the Forum before starting their exhibition schedule.

Friday they go to Baie-Comeau, Que., for afternoon and evening intra-squad games and return to play Boston Bruins Saturday at the Forum.

They will meet the Bruins and the Black Hawks next Monday and Thursday in Halifax.

Shack Last Sabre to Sign

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League completed signing all their players Tuesday with the signature of veteran right wing Eddie Shack.

Karras Leaves Lions

DETROIT (AP) — Outspoken Alex Karras, who harassed opposing National Football League quarterbacks and running backs as a defensive tackle with Detroit Lions since 1958, lashed out at the Detroit management Tuesday after the Lions placed him on waivers.

Karras, the most familiar name on the waver lists as NFL teams trimmed their rosters to the 40 - man maximum, was promptly claimed by George Allen of Washington. Reddening, Karras said he would let Allen know whether or not he would report to Washington today.

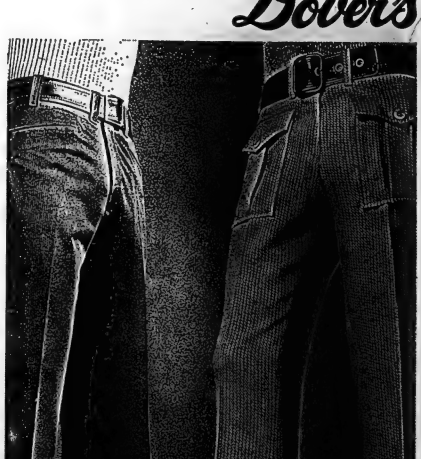
"I cannot believe that the Lions' decision to place me on waivers is based on a fair assessment of my performance on the field," the 36-year-old Karras contended. "There are other factors involved.

"Perhaps there is no room in the world of sports these days for an athlete who has an opinion on anything except his own sport," Karras said, before being claimed by Washington.

"I have opinions. I think I am entitled to the same considerations as other human beings. That includes having the right to express myself on something other than playing defensive tackle," the 6-foot-2, 250-pounder declared.

Karras, suspended for the 1963 season by commissioner Pete Rozelle for allegedly betting on football games, was out for much of last year with a knee injury.

Foreman Quick



EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — No. 2 ranked heavyweight George Foreman chased timid Vic Scott of Los Angeles, Calif., through the opening minute of the first round, then quickly knocked him out with a hard right cross to win his 20th professional fight without a loss.

Scott, who weighed in at 218 pounds, flew into El Paso less than an hour before the fight as a replacement for Foreman's scheduled opponent, Al Banks of Dallas, Tex.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?
The executive editor of a well-known New York subsidy publishing firm will be in the area in late October. He will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication. All subjects will be considered, including fiction and non-fiction, poetry, juveniles, religious books, etc.
If you have completed a book length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately describing your work and stating which part of the day (a.m. or p.m.) you would prefer for an appointment. Please mention your phone number. You will promptly receive confirmation for a definite time and place.
Authors with completed manuscripts unable to appear may send them directly to us for a free reading and evaluation. We will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress. Please address:

Brundage Still Simon Pure

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, restated a pledge Tuesday to purge the Olympics of every hint of professionalism.

The 83-year-old American administrator opened the 71st session of the IOC in the Municipal Theatre of Luxembourg.

His speech marked the start of what will probably be his last year in office. He has said he will not seek re-election after the Olympics at Munich next year.

Controversial issues before the four-day congress include an invitation to Rhodesians to compete at Munich, using the British national anthem and the Union Jack, and a move to bring Communist China into Olympics.

AVERY BRUNDAGE

Brundage made no mention of these issues but spoke out on his old theme—the need to keep the Olympics purely amateur.

He said that in the last year he had visited the sixth Asian Games in Bangkok, the Moscow Spartakiad and the 1971 Pan-American Games at Cali, Colombia, and noted at all three events the growing popularity of sports.

"One cannot go anywhere in the world," Brundage said, "without finding interest in and enthusiasm for the Olympic movement and respect for the International Olympic Committee, which has patronized these Games and kept them clean, pure and honest."

Misty Spectacles Ruin Ashe's Tennis Aspirations

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Jan Kodes, the clay court sharpshooter, zeroed in on a big gun of grass, Arthur Ashe, killing the hopes of an all-American United States Open title clutch today.

Kodes, the 26-year-old Czechoslovakian darkhorse of this $160,000 classic, upset the third-seeded player from Richmond, Va., 7-5, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a light, drizzle Tuesday for the right to meet Stan Smith for the $16,000 first prize in the rain-delayed finals today.

Ashe's bid for his second Open title—he also won in 1968—went down the drain when referee Vic Seixas declined to suspend the match, already delayed by three days of downpours, because of a mist that marred Ashe's spectacles.

Dept. of Agriculture and Food

CAN ARDA HELP YOU?

ARDA can say "Yes" — up to $126,000 — to help a farm suitable for agricultural development. Or ARDA can say "Yes" — up to $2500 — to help a farm family get started or better used. ARDA gives specific consideration to farms that can manage to remain or better join the mainstream of Canada's agricultural opportunities. Ask about your Farm Enlargement Program, your special rehabilitation grant. Determine your eligibility for assistance in ARDA.

A.R.D.A. is a branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food. Find out more about your future. Write, phone or visit your nearest Agriculture Office.

U.S. Senator May Be Jailed in Saigon

SAIGON (Reuter) — United States Senator George McGovern could face up to six months jail for attending a meeting Tuesday night allegedly attended by Viet Cong agents and radical anti-U.S. students, Saigon Police Chief Nguyen Si Tan said today.

The police chief said a final decision on whether charges will be made against the anti-war senator will be taken after a fuller investigation.

Said McGovern:

"If there were Viet Cong at the meeting why was I not told?

"If the police chief knew Viet Cong agents were present why are they allowed to roam around the city? It is all unbelievable."

McGovern met later with President Nguyen Van Thieu and said he protested the allegation as a "personal insult."

He said Thieu promised he would "look into it immediately."

McGovern was scheduled to leave Saigon for Tokyo Thursday morning.

"I think Mr. McGovern will leave Vietnam before the investigation is completed and the court decides if charges should be made," Tan said.

Tan also said it is possible McGovern is immune from prosecution under a South Vietnamese and U.S. convention regarding punishment of U.S. offenders of Vittiamese law.

He said militia soldiers who tried to break up the meeting were repulsed by McGovern and two others. But McGovern said there was no official attempt to break up the meeting and that the disturbance started when a fire bomb was thrown into the church courtyard.

The senator, a presidential candidate on a three-day fact-finding mission to South Vietnam, was rescued from the church after an angry rock-throwing crowd surrounded the building and set fire to a truck. U.S. military police raced to the scene to take the senator and his aides back to their hotel.

While an investigation is under way into what started the demonstration, Vietnamese reporters said it was started by local parishioners, who objected against the use of their church by opposition groups.

Buddhist and student organizations were represented at the meeting called to discuss the conditions inside South Vietnamese prisons.

It's Clean Inside

Sandblasting, a dirty job, is made safer by use of a protective headgear manufactured by Personal Environment Systems Inc. of Glendale, Calif. The worker's head, throat and lungs are protected by the double hardhat and wide-vision face shield. Positive pressure inside the helmet prevents fogging in the face area. The air, besides being purified, can be heated or cooled by a tube mounted on the worker's hip. (CP Photo)

Entertainment Columnist Comments

Liz Taylor: Wonderful Chassis Without Four-Wheel Brakes

WINNIPEG (CP) — "Things are different nowadays. Jane Fonda smokes pot during an interview, and stars who have borne children out of wedlock discuss it with the press. The barriers are down."

That's the assessment of 65-year-old Frank Morriss, who retired in August from the Winnipeg Tribune after a 43-year stint as an entertainment writer, "recording happenings in that blessed isolation dry known as Show Business."

In his last regular column in the newspaper, Mr. Morriss recaps some of the highlights of his career:

"I met all the stars and because, I suppose, I have an affinity with show people, we got along together beautifully. Luise Rainer, who was going down the ladder rapidly after winning two Oscars in a row, told me all her troubles.

"I saw Judy Garland learn Over The Rainbow at a battered upright piano. Memories come flooding in.

"John Barrymore, who never granted interviews if he could help it, gave me one in 1938, shortly before he died. I was supposed to stay 15 minutes, and I remained for two hours, while Barrymore spoke of his experiences, and I remember his remark about his marriage to Elaine Barrie, who had caught him on the run.

"My wife," said Mr. Barrymore. In his most courtly manner, 'will never go anywhere without her mother.'

"And then, after one of those wonderful pauses, he added: 'But her mother will go anywhere.'

"He told me the way Romeo should be played. 'He wasn't a starry-eyed young man. He was a product of the Renaissance. There's only one way to play him. Just like a dog in heat.'

"Mr. Barrymore was right!

"And after meeting Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor separately and together, I was the first to hear of their plans to marry at the time when every newsbreak was curious about Liz's future. It made the front page of most newspapers in the world and Hedda Hopper and the London Times were on the long-distance phone to ask how I'd done it.

"The paper I was working for at the time, the Toronto Globe and Mail, stuck it at the bottom of page 161

"For the record, Elizabeth Taylor was, when she was very young, the most beautiful woman in the world. No wonder she had such a storm-tossed marital career —a wonderful chassis that didn't come equipped with four-wheel brakes.

"The first time I met Mario Lanza, he stood on the running board of my car and sang an aria—jumping off, just as he reached a high note, at the MGM studio gates.

"The most consistently cooperative of the stars has been Joan Crawford. When you come to Hollywood or New York, you don't phone Joan; she phones you.

"And the friendship I cherish most was the one with Charles Laughton. When I went to Britain for the first time, he wrote a letter to David Lean that makes my head swim whenever I read it.

"He once got out of his bed to rush to a radio studio for me to do an interview, live, after I found the pre-recorded interview tape was no good. He swore at me like Captain Bligh, but he did it.

"The bigger the star, the easier it is to get an interview, or make a friendship. It is only the small ones who will never get anywhere; they don't take time out to be charming, or caustic.

"The hardest interview to write is the one with Bette Davis. She says the most outrageous things, little items that would get you into a lawsuit, and then says:

"'Darling, why don't you write that down. Everybody knows he's a dirty, rotten stinking bastard. Just put it in the paper. I'll back you up.'

"I bet she would, but I never had the nerve.

Canadian Exports Rise 17 Per Cent in August

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian exports to all countries rose to $1.42 billion in August, reflecting increases in sales to the United States, Latin America and the United Kingdom, Statistics Canada reported today.

The August figure was 17.4 per cent higher than in August last year, and brought the cumulative total of exports for 1971 to $11.61 billion, up 4.1 per cent from $11.15 billion in eight months last year.

Despite the imposition of additional U.S. import levies Aug. 15, Canadian exports to the U.S. for the month rose 26.6 per cent to $783.5 million from $742 million in August last year.

For the first eight months of 1971, exports to the U.S. were up 8.4 per cent to $7.87 billion from $7.25 billion in the same period of 1970.

The figures released by the federal statistics bureau today were preliminary totals for last month, based on incomplete returns. More details on export figures and totals of August imports will be released later.

Exports to the United Kingdom last month rose 17.5 per cent to $122.8 million from $104.5 million a year earlier. But cumulative exports to the U.K. for eight months this year were down 7.3 per cent to $923.1 million from $998.4 million in 1970.

Sales to Latin America totalled $60.1 million in August this year, up 43.4 per cent from $41.9 million in August, 1970. Cumulative sales were up 4.3 per cent to $370.3 million from $355.2 million.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market dropped fractionally in moderate midmorning trading today as it entered a second consecutive declining session.

On index, industrials were down .40 to 177.80, golds .61 to 173.84, base metals .45 to 88.32 and western oils .06 to 227.57.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 511,000 shares, down from 1.04 million at the same time Tuesday.

Weakest sectors were communication and utilities.

Slater, Walker rose 1¾ to $11¾, UNAS Investments 4 to $15 and Peoples Department Stores ¼ to $38¼. Slater, Walker has agreed to buy 183,908 common shares of UNAS, or 20 per cent of the company, from Toronto Dominion Bank at $19 a share. Subject to approval by British authorities, Slater, Walker, also will offer to buy two-thirds of the holdings of other UNAS shareholders, in exchange for Slater, Walker shares.

In another transaction, Sleetr, Walker has agreed to purchase 65,000 common shares of Peoples Department Stores from Abe Gold, a director and officer, for $19 a share. Slater, Walker has agreed to purchase 62 per cent of the holdings of other shareholders at the same price.

Reitman's common shares rose ½ to $33¼, and Reitman's A 1¼ to $33½. The company Tuesday raised its annual dividend rate to 60 cents a share from 50 cents and declared a stock dividend of one share for each common or A share now held.

Tuesday the market moved moderately lower in active trading.

Toronto Livestock

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Ulcers Possible In Young Children

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 7-year-old son Jimmy has been having indigestion and pains in his stomach. Our pediatrician suggests X-rays because he wants to be sure he hasn't got an ulcer. Isn't that impossible at his age? — Mrs. L.

* * *

COMMENT: Few things throw us off the true diagnostic trail so much as consideration of "age". Often we think "He's too old to have that" or "She's too young to have this."

It is true that mostly adults suffer from ulcer of the stomach or of the duodenum. Nevertheless it is also true, Mrs. L. that ulcer can attack preteens — and it has even been found in infants. Relatively rare, of course, but-possible.

Likewise many a youngster in his 20s, with severe chest pain, has been misdiagnosed because he was thought to be too young to have a coronary attack. Yet, it has been discovered in many apparently healthy youngsters in the fighting services.

Consider arthritis. Found only in the elderly? Not so. Many preteens suffer from arthritis of one kind or another. And so with many other diseases. Age itself should not be a factor in diagnosis.

* * *

Recently I read an amusing anecdote in Robert Peterson's column, "Life Begins At 40," which underlines what I have been saying. He wrote: "We hear of the aches and pains of age. But here again it's wrong to blame the aging process. There's an old joke about two octogenarians. 'That pain in your leg must be due to age' says one. 'Nonsense,' says the other, 'my other leg /is the same age and it doesn't hurt a bit.'

"This story offers amusing evidence that age itself does not necessarily cause pains and discomfort —"

So to get back to your son's case, Mrs. L. If his doctor suspects ulcer, do not let the mere fact of "age" discourage you from getting at the true diagnosis of his trouble. When the stomach gets out of order it is possible that the symptoms may be caused by trouble outside of the stomach and a doctor should be consulted.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband and I are having a disagreement. Our young son plays baseball in the Little League. Although I am sports-minded, I believe that he might overstrain his arm by pitching as long and as often as he does. Lately he has been complaining of a very sore elbow. Don't you think he should go slow until he gets older and stronger?—Mrs. F.

COMMENT: I am on your side, Mrs. F. It can be overdone. I think you and your husband will be interested in a recent talk given to orthopedists (bone specialists) in San Francisco by Dr. Joel E. Adams, a San Bernardino, Calif. orthopedic surgeon.

He told them that two or three innings should be the limit of pitching. And that no practice throwing should be permitted before, during, or after season with a youngster's arm gets strong enough for such exertion, usually between the ages of 14 and 17.

He also said, "Curve ball pitching should be abolished. It not only puts additional strain on the elbow, but also requires excessive throwing practice to perfect. The playing season should be shortened, with less stress on playoffs and tournaments."

So you see, Mrs. F., if your son is below the age of 14, I agree he should "go slow",

Sydney J. Harris Says

Tall People Best Paid

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A front page story in my local paper not long ago reported the findings of a personnel director at the University of Pittsburgh, indicating that the starting salary of a job applicant is related to his height—that men over 6 feet make about 10 per cent more than men under 6 feet.

"The sad thing about this," he said, "is that we are not talking about talents . . . but about men recruited by corporations because they are presumably bright, have got a brain and the brain has been trained."

Social psychologists, however, have long known this to be true in Western civilization; because we are, on the whole, taller than Oriental peoples,we tend (consciously or unconsciously) to consider height as one sign of superiority, whereas it plays no part in Eastern culture.

A few years ago, the Journal of Social Psychology reported on a most interesting experiment in the relationship between status and perceived height of a person, made by a teacher at the Australian National University.

He worked with 110 college students, separated into five groups. Each group of 22 was asked to estimate — to the nearest half-inch — the height of the same man, when introduced under a variety of titles.

The estimates grew steadily higher as the academic status ascribed to the model grew more impressive. Introduced as "a student from Cambridge," one group estimated his height as 5' 9½"; as a demonstrator in psychology from Cambridge, his height was estimated at over 5'10"; when introduced as a "lecturer in psychology," he grew another half - inch; a "senior lecturer" title added a further inch; and when made a full professor, he leapt to over 6'.

(As a control, when these same students groups estimated the height of their own instructor, there was no such variation.)

We somehow expect "important" men to be larger than they may be in actual fact. People were always surprised at the relative short stature of such notables as Einstein, Freud and Thomas Mann; invariably saying to them, "You look much taller in your pictures." But, of course, the "pictures" were in the people's minds not in the photos themselves.

No doubt this irrational preoccupation with height in our culture has made shorter men over-react with the aggressiveness and defensiveness that is so often characteristic of them. When Lloyd George was Britain's prime minister during World War I, a dinner guest tactlessly remarked upon his shortness. "In Wales, where I come from," he retorted, "we measure a man from his neck up; here, you apparently measure him from his neck down!"

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 16

Your birthday today: Life for you this coming year must pass a testing screen. What you accept or permit must either conform to exacting personal standards or be of superior precision and quality on its own. There seems little chance of moderation or compromise this year. Today's natives work hard for purely personal goals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): It is not yet time to wind up confusing details left over from last night. See the end of the week as a three day circus with faith that all comes out well by and by.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The more strident your claim, the less likely your luck in collecting. The serene, coolheaded approach gives you a special observation post from which to view human drama.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): An early start alleviates potential tension. To let well enough alone is a fine art now.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Drift along with the tide of routine events until you're sure what you want done and a definite way to get it. Today's conditions lend themselves to expedients.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Carry on boldly but keep your actual deeds simple and no greater than a necessary minimum.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Personal affairs are certain to bring abrupt stress or surprise. Your temporary adjustments turn out later to have involved some permanent clarifications.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Life grows quiet and you formulate a clearer picture of how you can improve gently. There are many little things to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Spice your routines with good humor. Romantic interests sparkle amongst the crosscurrents of people coming and going.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Check up on recent comments; revise what you balked at even seeing before, without undue fuss or protest.

CAPRICORN (ec. 22 — Jan. 19): Emotional ties tend to intensify so that new relations are born, old ones deepen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Small gains and progress mark the day and are to be accepted as sufficient. More of the same are coming, so don't rush matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19—Mar. 20): Stabilize your position in seeking harmony with others. Just giving things away is no help unless they're white elephants finding new homes where they function appropriately.

William R. Kirk Honored in Ceremony

The school band played When The Saints Go Marching In and a special assembly was called for the visit yesterday at the William R. Kirk School of two well known figures in education for the mentally retarded.

The distinguished visitors at the John Street school in Belleville were Harry "Red" Foster, Honorary President of the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded, and William R. Kirk former executive director of the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded.

Purpose of the visit by the two association workers was the presentation of a plaque to the Belleville school, which a few months ago was renamed in honor of Mr. Kirk who, Mr. Foster said had been "more responsible than any other man" for improvements in education for the mentally-retarded.

The plaque was officially received from Mr. Foster by Mrs. Miriam Graham, trustee for the Hastings County Board of Education.

A brief speech by Mr. Kirk closed the assembly program, chaired by George Botting, president of the Belleville association.

Mr. Foster had a special word of thanks for the 50 pupils at the school for their efforts in painting a 75-foot-long banner welcoming him to the school.

The sign emblazoned across the front of the school let read Welcome Red Foster.

Last night the two distinguished visitors were guests of honor at a dinner at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel attended by association officials and teachers.

And The Band Played On

William R. Kirk, a former executive director of the Ontario Association for the Mentally retarded, and after whom the Belleville school for the retarded is named, along with George Botting, local association president, and Harry "Red" Foster, honorary president of the provincial association, help school band members bang out a tune during school assembly.

Davis Trying to Buck Trend Which Toppled Six Premiers

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis is trying to buck a provincial election trend by sending Ontario voters to the polls Oct. 21.

The last four provincial governments to call elections have toppled and six of the eight provincial general elections since 1980 have seen changes of government.

The premier says he's not worried about those statistics.

All nine provincial elections had been called in times of economic unrest and soaring unemployment.

Election calls meant disaster for three government leaders leading their parties to the polls for the first time, but three rookie party chieftains led their forces to victory.

Another possible factor in elections that saw government changes was the lowering of the voting age in Nova Scotia in 1970 and in Alberta this year where Peter Lougheed's Progressive Conservatives ended 36 years of Social Credit rule last month.

A number of these same ingredients are simmering in the Ontario election pot.

Ed Schreyer started the string of election upsets June 25, 1969 when his New Democratic Party captured 28 seats in Manitoba to become the country's only NDP government at the time.

Since then, governments have changed hands in Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

When governments were returned—in British Columbia in 1969 and in Prince Edward Island in 1970—the incumbents came back with substantially-increased majorities.

Liberal Gerald Regan took the helm of the Nova Scotia government Oct. 13, 1970, after increasing his party's representation to 23 seats from six. He beat G. I. Smith who was in his first campaign as party leader after taking over from Robert Stanfield, now federal Tory leader. The Tories had governed since 1956 in Nova Scotia.

When Richard Hatfield's Tories beat the Liberals under Louis Robichaud Oct. 26, 1970, they reversed the results of the 1967 election by taking 32 of 58 seats and ended 10 years of Liberal rule in New Brunswick.

Robert Bourassa and his Liberals swept to victory with 72 seats on April 29, 1970 in an election where Quebec independence was the major issue.

Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque wanted to establish an independent Quebec in economic association with the rest of Canada. His party won seven seats but Mr. Levesque suffered personal defeat.

The Union Nationale government under Jean-Jacques Bertrand saw its strength reduced to 17 seats from 56.

Mr. Schreyer, like Mr. Bourassa, was a new opposition party leader when he captured Manitoba and ousted PC Premier Walter Weir, who had taken over from Duff Roblin and was leading his first election test.

The NDP returned to power in Saskatchewan June 24 this year after an absence of seven years when Allan Blakeney led an upsurge that staggered even the most optimistic party supporters by winning 45 of the 60 seats.

Liberal Ross Thatcher, who died one month after his defeat, saw Grit strength reduced to 15 seats from 33.

In Alberta, Mr. Lougheed rode a "time for a change" slogan into the driver's seat, pushing Social Credit into an opposition role in the Legislature for the first time.

The PCs captured 43 seats compared to six in 1967 while Harry Strom's Socreds saw their strength dip to 26 from 55.

In Prince Edward Island, Liberal Alex Campbell captured 27 of the 32 seats May 11, 1970, for his second mandate after defeating the Conservatives by winning 17 seats in 1966.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, now in his 20th year as government leader of B.C., increased Social Credit representation to 39 from 33 in the 55-seat legislature in August, 1969, while reducing NDP strength to 11 from 17 at the time of dissolution.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland must call an election this year.

THE PICK OF Punch

"Now come along, children. It's time to dial-a-prayer, and then off to bed with you."

Views Contradictory

TORONTO (CP) — Arthur Wishart, Ontario minister of financial and commercial affairs, said Tuesday that legal firms asked by the provincial government to give opinions on the validity of land sales by Whiterock Estates Development Corp. Ltd. turned in contradictory opinions.

He said in an interview the Toronto legal firm of Fraser and Beatty gave the opinion that buyers of property from Whiterock did not have a "good and marketable" title to the land.

But he said other lawyers gave opinions that everything was in order in the Whiterock deals. He did not name the lawyers.

Mr. Wishart announced Monday the government will ask the Ontario Court of Appeal to decide whether persons buying lots from Whiterock have clear title to the property.

Premier Busy With Business

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition leaders headed for the hustings Tuesday for the full day of campaigning for the provincial election Oct. 21 while Premier William Davis conducted routine government business at Queen's Park.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon opened his campaign by firing a starter's pistol in downtown Toronto as a jazz band played in the background.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, got into some hot water in Thunder Bay as he attended one of the province's original Finnish saunas.

Mr. Davis plans to launch his campaign Thursday with some spade work. That day he will open a housing development in east-end Toronto, open a plant in Toronto, attend a nomination meeting in Mississauga and speak at a nomination meeting for Dalton Bales, minister of municipal affairs.

Friday, the premier will spend a normal day at Queen's Park. That evening he will attend the opening of the opera season at O'Keefe Centre. From the centre, he flies to Niagara Falls for a nomination meeting dinner.

Mr. Davis resumes the Brampton Fall Fair Saturday and then attends a fund-raising picnic in Barrie. He opens the Grand Prix at Mosport Sunday and then spends the rest of the day in Stratford.

Mr. Nixon's schedule included stops in Kingston, Ottawa and Carmichan Tuesday.

He leaves Ottawa today for Pembroke, North Bay, Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie.

He visits Thunder Bay Thursday and also travels to Goderich, Windsor, the CFB Borden, Barrie, Brantford and Woodstock.

Friday, he goes to Brantford, Peterborough, Mount Hope, Hamilton, London, Windsor and Tilbury.

Mr. Lewis discussed pollution at Lakehead University Tuesday and met with canvassers after attending the sauna.

His schedule calls for departure from Thunder Bay to day to visit Timmins and Sudbury before returning to Toronto.

He visits Ottawa Thursday and Toronto, Windsor and Amherstburg Friday.

East Ontario Got Short Shrift - - Nixon

OTTAWA (CP) — A buoyant Liberal Leader Robert Nixon opened his provincial election campaign in eastern Ontario Tuesday and announced that the region "has had short shrift" from the Progressive Conservative government.

Mr. Nixon, who said he was relieved that Premier Davis had finally called an election for Oct. 21, held news conferences at Ottawa and Kingston and officially opened his Toronto campaign headquarters.

During the day, Mr. Nixon said it was his impression members of the news media favor the New Democratic Party over his own. He declined to be more specific.

In Ottawa, Mr. Nixon told reporters the Progressive Conservative government "seems to feel they (the people of eastern Ontario) will vote for them no matter what they do.

"So far they have been right," he said. "This time they're going to be wrong."

Earlier, on the Liberal campaign plane, Mr. Nixon told reporters he is confident of making inroads in eastern Ontario.

Mr. Nixon said his party had a "fighting chance" at winning 66 seats in the province and a "first-class chance" at 45.

He said many people seem to think that the real battle was a race for second place between the New Democratic Party and the Liberals.

"Frankly, I reject that," Mr. Nixon told newsmen. "The name of the game is not to come second."

He said the Conservatives' regional government policy had cost more money for substantially the same services.

"In the Niagara region alone, it has cost 40-per-cent more in the last year or so."

Former municipal affairs minister Darcy McKeough and the provincial government had been "flying by the seats of their pants" in forming regional government.

North Neglected - - Lewis

THUNDER BAY (CP) — It's tough convincing Northern Ontario audiences that politicians are sensitive to the North after 28 years of neglect and indifference from the Progressive Conservative government, Stephen Lewis told 150 party workers Tuesday night.

The 33-year-old New Democratic Party leader opened his campaign tour for the Oct. 21 Ontario election in the Thunder Bay area where the NDP holds one of three seats.

He told riding workers they will need to mount the most exhausting "door-to-door campaign the North has ever seen "to end the economic exploitation of northwestern Ontario."

He promised that an NDP government would:

—Open negotiations with private industry or through the Northern Ontario Development Corp. to develop refining and smelting industries in the North;

—Create a price review board to examine all major disparities between northern and southern Ontario;

—Ensure that a greater percentage of government loans to businesses go to the North.

Mr. Lewis said the Ontario government's Equalization of Opportunity program, since it was unveiled here in 1967, has made only 27 loans to northern businesses representing only seven per cent of the total $40 million.

The Northern Ontario Development Corp., began in June 1979, had granted only six loans worth $265,000 to all of northwestern Ontario.

He also jibed at the government for failing to appoint northerners to commissions and boards.

Referring to the appointment of Jack Simonett, a former public works minister from eastern Ontario, to the vice-chairmanship of the Ontario Northlands Railway he said sarcastically that "no one in northern Ontario was equipped to sit on the board."

Riding back to his hotel after the meeting Mr. Lewis said he is optimistic the NDP will take Fort William (from Conservative James Jessiman) and Port Arthur held by independent Liberal Ron Knight, who is not running again).

Mr. Jessiman took the seat from the NDP in 1967 by 216 votes.

Nixon Selling Herd

KINGSTON (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon is going out of business—the milk-producing business.

He told supporters and reporters that he is selling 44 of his registered herd of Holstein dairy cattle because the man who for years helped him look after the herd is leaving his employ.

Mr. Nixon, who has a 260-acre farm near Brantford, said he will still be growing cash crops, mostly wheat.

Most of the cattle will go during an auction planned for Sept. 24. He's keeping 16 steers but the milk cows will be auctioned.

Vote May Be Dream Come True For Women's Lib in Politics

TORONTO (CP) — The Oct. 21 Ontario election could turn out to be a dream come true for women's representation in the legislature.

With a little luck and some voter co-operation, the election could result in a record number of women winning seats.

Ontario's three political parties so far have nominated 14 women candidates. If three are successful, a record will be set.

In Ontario's history, there has never been more than two women sitting in the legislature at any one time. And Ontario voters have sent only a total of four women to Queen's Park in the province's history.

Women made their first appearance in the house in 1943, when there were two female members—the same as in 1971.

The most experienced of the 14 women running for office this fall is Margaret Renwick, elected as a New Democratic Party member in 1967 and running for a second term in the Toronto-Scarborough Centre riding.

NDP women running, in addition to Mrs. Renwick, are:

Fiona Nelson, York-Forest Hill, a Toronto school trustee and former teacher; Helen Reedde, Toronto Bellwoods, social worker and free-lance radio commentator; Patricia Cheturks, Middlesex North, physics professor at the University of Western Ontario; Shirley Carr, Niagara Falls, accountant, and Anne Valentine, Sault Ste. Marie, head of a high school history department.

Conservative women nominated are:

Edith Mackintosh, Kitchener, alderman and housewife; Margaret Scrimmer, Toronto St. David, community planner and writer; Dr. Nancy Bastin, Hamilton East, medical doctor with 30 years' experience; Lorraine Deane, Downview, North York school board trustee, and Barbara Kersey, Windsor-Walkerville, housewife and community affairs worker.

Female Liberal candidates: True Davidson, York East, East York mayor; Rita Ubrisco, Thunder Bay, French teacher at Lakehead University; and Elizabeth Catty, Toronto St. Andrew, housewife and former aldermanic candidate.

Woman Reporter Excluded From NDP Sauna Gathering

By LILLIAN NEWBERY

THUNDER BAY (CP) — When do we have the sauna?

That was the big question from the entourage following Stephen Lewis, Ontario leader of the New Democratic Party, on the fast-paced first day of his campaign for the Oct. 21 Ontario election.

The thought of relaxing in the hot steam kept everyone going through a three-hour plane trip, a noon news conference, a visit to the east end of Fort William, a stroll through a public housing development and a discussion session for university students.

Lyyli Kanga, a party supporter who has a public sauna, had invited Mr. Lewis to drop in during his next trip to the Lakehead.

When the time came, the 23-year-old leader decided to hold a "press conference" in the sauna bath. Although mixed sauna-ing is allowed at Mrs. Kanga's, the only woman reporter on the trip was not invited to join in.

I took a sauna on my own and a fly on the wall reported the conversation in the men's sauna went like this:

Mr. Lewis: "It's hot, it's relaxing and at this time of day it's perfectly timed . . . when I'm out I'm in charge."

Sweating male reporter: "Are you hoping (Premier William) Davis won't take saunas?"

Mr. Lewis: "I can't imagine the premier would allow himself this very mortal undertaking on the road."

Mrs. Kanga's sauna is packed every day with members of the large Finnish community here and other Northerners who have adopted the custom.

Mr. Lewis called it "an entirely civilized undertaking."

Mattawa Mayor to Seek PC Presidency

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Firman Monestime, mayor of Mattawa, Ont., has declared his candidacy for the presidency of the national Progressive Conservative party.

He now is a national director of the party and heads its local association in Mattawa, an Ottawa River community northwest of Ottawa.

He said in an interview Tuesday there is a need to stop confusion in the Conservatives' policy-making procedure.

That should be done by giving the Commons caucus clear supremacy in forming policy, with the help of experts and the advice of the national membership at policy conventions.

Dr. Monestime, who refused to give his age, has been in local politics for about 20 years. He served on the town council, then as deputy mayor before taking the post of mayor in 1964.

He said he believes he is the first declared candidate for the party presidency, to be filled at a national convention in December.

A medical doctor and father of four, he immigrated to Canada from Haiti in 1944, gaining citizenship in 1957.

The previous president of the party, Frank Moores (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception), resigned some time ago and the position has been maintained by other party officials.

David Lewis Won't Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — David Lewis, leader of the federal New Democratic Party, announced Tuesday he will not campaign for the NDP at the provincial level in the Ontario election campaign.

He will, however, campaign in his own York South riding for Donald Macdonald, who is seeking re-election in the riding to the Ontario legislature.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: Who has the greatest antique car collection in Canada, and where can I see them? Also a run down of a few of the cars in question, if possible.

ANSWER: A construction contractor from Carterville was responsible for a ruling by the Government of France which reads as follows: "If a automobile built before the year 1900 can be sold to anyone outside of the country."

The law was passed shortly after the purchase of an 1898 Delahaye, by Henry Gordon Kavanagh, who, on a trip to France had discovered the rare model and gleefully bought it to add to his collection, thus, removing from the country what could have become a national relic of France.

The law still holds in France but Kavanagh is still searching in way out places to add to his marvellous collection of vintage autos. The collection is one of the greatest in Canada, and one of the most important in North America.

Questions frequently asked by the public are "Why does one collect antique automobiles?", or "What does it cost?" In answer, Kavanagh admits to a great pleasure of ownership of antique automobiles. As far as the cost is concerned, it could be a good investment, depending on the market. His present collection is valued today at close to $1,000,000 and it is likely to increase in value over the years. Incidentally, all the vehicles are maintained in a state of working order.

It is the misconception of many that a collector of antiques must be of a certain age to truly appreciate the hobby. In the case of Henry Kavanagh, however, it is an obsession that bit him about 10 years ago, when he was about 35 years of age. It all started when he purchased an old Ford from a nearby farmer.

Although all the cars are operable, it is not always the case when they are bought by Kavanagh. In many instances they have been rebuilt. In some cases the body may be beautiful, but there is no engine, and in other cases, the "works" are there, but the body has been rusted. Kavanagh employs two mechanics on a full - time basis to rebuild his "beauties" and maintain them in a way to which they had become accustomed.

As a result, the "Cars of Yesteryear" seem as new as tomorrow, although they may have spent a few years locked in a "carriage-house" while their owners found a means of disposing of them.

Here are just a few of the makes and models owned by Kavanagh: Gardenaye, 1896, 1 cylinder, 6¼ h.p.; Locomobile, 1899, steam engine; Stanley steamer, 1905, 2 cylinder; Ford, 1903, Tonneau — 2 cylinder, 8 h.p.; Cadillac, 1905, Touring — 1 cylinder, 6¼ h.p.; Autocar, 1906, Runabout — 62 cylinder, 16 h.p.; Peugeot, 1908, 1 cylinder; Ford, 1907, Convertible, 2 seater; Sears, 1907, Auto Buggy — 2 cylinder, 14 h.p.; Maxwell, 1907, Convertible — 2 cylinder; Speedster — 4 cylinder, 18 h.p.; Auburn, 1912, Sedan — 4 cylinder, 30 h.p.; Peerless, 1916, V-8 Limousine; Star, 1923, Touring — 4 cylinder, 20 h.p.; Stutz, 1928, Sedan — 8 cylinder, 90 h.p.

Bi-bi Reports Shunted to Archives

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism got in its licks at the press, radio and television before it formally expired this year.

It was beaten to the publishing punch by Senator Keith Davey's report on the media and shunted its research reports to the public archives.

One of these reports, A Survey of the Press in Canada by S. D. Gagne, is considered so "hot" that it will not be opened to public view until 1996.

Also under the 25-year ban are at least three other commission research reports, including one on the South African armed forces and another entitled 'A Case Study of the Takeover of Shawinigan Water and Power by the Quebec Government.

In all, the commission sent 130 unpublished research reports to the archives, including at least five on press, radio and television. The reports are mainly critical.

For instance, Prof. Donald Gordon in a 1966 report on national news in Canadian newspapers says that readers cannot readily obtain information "in balance and context about the nation as a whole."

He and his research staff carried out a day-to-day survey of 20 newspapers between Jan. 11 and June 30, 1965.

He says the French-language papers are preoccupied with the affairs of the Quebec "nation" while the English-language press tends to be preoccupied "with their nation too."

Prof. Neil Compton in a 1965 report on biculturalism and the English-language media says that despite The Canadian Press "the front pages of daily newspapers still reflect the view that a fortnight on Main Street should take precedence over riots in Albena and earthquakes in Japan."

He says the English-language media are dominated by the advertising industry, a serious threat, he says, to "national consciousness."

He says "confusion" in the CBC is due to the "incompatibility of the corporation's aims with conditions under which it must raise much of its income."

Prof Compton adds:

"The CBC, that instrument of enlightened Canadian nationalism, cannot or dare not plan its fall television schedule until after the American networks have announced theirs."

French-speaking Canadians, he urges, should have access to services of all media in French, whether they live in Vercheres or Vancouver.

In a huge two-volume study dated 1966, Jean Bruce says that in the 1956-65 decade the "overall news pattern" changed so that political-social-economic news represented almost half of the total amount of news published.

Political-social-economic news ranked first, followed by sports, crime, accidents, education and entertainment in that order.

Basically, however, Canadian newspapers are regional in their coverage, Mrs. Bruce says.

Red Paint People

Ernst Billard of Port au Choix, Nfld., shows bones — believed to be the remains of "Red Paint People" who lived in the area 4,000 years ago — which he found while excavating a basement for a new home. The Maritime Archaic Indians of "Red Paint People" populated all of northeastern North America at one time and archaeologists have uncovered more than 100 skeletons and artifacts in this area since 1967. Service Station Operators Fed Up with Sales Gimmicks

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario's service station operators are fed up with gimmicks, contests and sales promotions and are holding a three-day convention to do something about it.

"We are concerned about all the complaints our dealers have with the oil companies and the legislation to provide solutions to the problems," said Ken. W. Langdon, president of the 1,500-member Ontario Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association.

He said Tuesday a survey of 1,000 association dealers showed that 84 per cent were participating in some form of oil company promotion, and that 97 per cent of those said gimmicks and discriminatory discounts should be banned.

The members of the 33-year-old association are dealers who run service stations and garages leased from the oil companies.

"On the average, and depending on the size and location of the station, the gimmicks cost the dealer one cent a gallon, averaging $1,000 to $5,000 per year in costs," Mr. Langdon said.

He said the public also suffers because of price discrimination between franchise service station dealers and subsidized and discount operations.

Mr. Langdon said the subsidized stations are supplied directly by the major oil companies at cheaper wholesale prices.

He said that under the new federal Competition Act, Bill C256, it should be against the law to discriminate in price between competitors.

"The only way the oil companies will give in is if they are told by government that it is in the public interest."

Gonorrhea Symptoms Concealed in Women

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Most women who have gonorrhea show no symptoms of the venereal disease and often continue to pass on the infection unknowingly, an official of the national health and welfare department said Tuesday.

Dr. S. E. Acres of the department's epidemiology division told the college of family physicians that this was one of the reasons why gonorrhea is "out of control."

This was also a reason why case finding and the notification of contacts was still an important part of the effort to control the disease.

Caouette Has Rival as Socred Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The Social Credit leadership campaign, in a virtual rut, should take a new turn soon.

A group of leaders of the party's Quebec wing are preparing to introduce a candidate against the present leader, Real Caouette.

The new candidate will be Rene Matte, 38, (SC—Champlain) on whom rests the hope of rejuvenating the party and giving it a new impetus, say those who support his candidacy.

And strong rumor being repeated in Ottawa's Social Credit circles is that a British Columbia cabinet minister may resign from the province's Social Credit government to be nominated as the party's convention in Hull ovrear, Oct. 9-11.

While a challenge to Mr. Caouette's leadership is being organized in Ottawa, the party leader continues his visit to Vancouver.

If Mr. Matte became a definite candidate, another member of Parliament, Andre Fortin, 27, (SC—Lothiniere) could also enter the race.

During a telephone interview Tuesday, Mr. Fortin said that such a train of events would be the motive for him to revise his position.

Mr. Fortin, house leader of the party, hesitated for a while before announcing two weeks ago he would not oppose Mr. Caouette.

As in Mr. Fortin's case, Mr. Matte had indicated he had no ambitions to fight Mr. Caouette.

It appears that the strong participation of militants in the convention of the party's Quebec wing Sunday in Quebec City prompted various persons to run a first-class candidate against Mr. Caouette.

Some would like to offer delegates to the October convention a real leadership choice.

Many people feel, in fact, that the nomination of Dr. James McGillivray of the Toronto region, one of the party's vice-presidents and the only other candidate so far, would simply carry no weight against Mr. Caouette.

Kitchen Said Doomed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A university nutritionist advocated Tuesday the ultimate elimination of the elaborately equipped kitchen, arguing that a hotplate and a refrigerator will be all the future housewife needs to prepare coming "convenience" foods.

Dr. George G. Graham, a Johns Hopkins University pediatrician, said there already is a strong trend among economically-advantaged housewives to spend less and less time in their well-equipped kitchens and to turn more and more to prepared foods.

As for the poor, he said, prepared foods are a special boon because the impoverished lack the apparatus for cooking traditional foods even when they can get them free.

Graham said in a speech to the 183nd national meeting of the American Chemical Society that the technology already is available to build an entire, fully nutritional diet around "hand" foods: Sandwiches, pizzas, rolls and pastries.

Powerful Nest

When a group of storks in Germany decided it was time to settle down, they thought it would be wise to include all the comforts of modern living. And what better place to plug than the top of a hydro pole. The only problem is the meter is sometimes difficult to read. (CP Photo)

Kraft-mill Odors Can Be Beaten

PORT CARLING, Ont. (CP) — A recently-developed device, if properly applied, could eliminate kraft-mill odors without expensive equipment, an air-pollution conference was told Tuesday.

Dr. George Tomlinson, a vice-president of Domtar Ltd., Montreal, told the Ontario section of the Air Pollution Control Association the device, still in an experimental stage, scrubs out hydrogen sulphide gases and mercaptans not oxidized in the usual recovery furnaces. He said the scrubbers should cost about $300,000 to $500,000 for a 400-ton-a-day kraft mill.

However, he said, plants need special monitoring equipment to keep the device working effectively, and most plants lack that equipment.

that's what the new
is all about!

Imagine—now you can have both hands free to guide the fabric through those precision turns! And look what's happened to buttonholing on the BERNINA 830! You don't even have to touch the fabric and bingo, a perfect buttonhole! Talking of fabric, do you know that the new BERNINA automatic fabric sensor adjusts itself to any fabric, stretch or knit, cotton or synthetic, and gives you stitching that simply will not pucker or snap. The 1972 BERNINA overlock stitch gives a perfect finish to stretch or knit garments and the new blindstitch, a hand-finished look.

You have to hand it to the Swiss. Such ingenuity! Can a sewing machine be perfect? Meet the new BERNINA 830, in its streamlined red carrying case, at your dealer's today.

Of course, a wide choice of cabinets is available.

Davis Chooses Belleville for Launching of His Campaign

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Ontario Prime Minister William Davis has choosen Belleville as the official formal launching pad for his election campaign.

His kick-off will be a rally at Memorial Arena on Market Square Tuesday, Sept. 21 at 7:30 p.m.

The six-riding rally will begin a 19-day campaign that will see the Conservative leader stumping most of the highways and byways of the province.

The Belleville event, drawing people from Kingston to Oshawa and Peterborough, most of the candidates in the Quinte area's six ridings and at least one provincial cabinet member will be one of the biggest rallies of the campaign.

Mr. Davis will bring a packaged entertainment show with him to the Belleville arena rally. Designed to appeal to both young voters and their elders, it will be bolstered by the appearance of two local bands.

"The Prime Minister has done Quinte riding and eastern Ontario a great honor by deciding to kickoff his formal campaign in Belleville," said Quinte PC candidate Dr. R. T. Potter this morning.

For Other Election Stories See Page 6

"When you consider the number of communities which have been bidding for a share of Mr. Davis' campaign time, for him to have chosen this area is a distinct honor.

"Undoubtedly this area has been a Conservative stronghold for many years. Now the PM has challenged the supporters of his party to provide him with the kickoff to his campaign which could set the tenor of his whirlwind tours of the Province during the 2 days remaining.

"It is to be emphasized that this is a six - riding election rally and not a Belleville show. It is designed to attract people from the Kingston to Oshawa area. It just so happens that Belleville is in the middle.

"Although there will be an entertainment side to the evening, Mr. Davis will also be making a major speech, his first formal election campaign speech, which will be of interest to not only this area but the entire province.

The Davis campaign style will be evident the following day, Wednesday, when the Prime Minister will visit six communities from Kingston to Cornwall. He will duplicate the tour Sept. 30 when he will visit Bowmanville, Cobourg, Picton, Napanee, Tweed, Campbellford and Peterborough in one day.

His tours are designed to enable the Prime Minister to meet as many people as possible at high school football games, cattle auctions, on main streets and at community social events.

Most of his electioneering will be done by bus or car, with a large aircraft standby.

Food Costs Soar, Job Rise Slight

All Price War Changes Lost

OTTAWA (CP)—The largest mid-summer increase in food prices in more than a decade occurred last month, putting food prices three per cent higher than they were before last fall's supermarket price war, Statistics Canada reported today.

This was by far the largest factor in sending the consumer price index up to a record 135 from 134.1 in July and 130.5 in August last year, based on 1961 prices equalling 100.

In dollar terms, it meant that last year's food bill of $13.19 cost $13.59 in August this year, 36 cents more than in July. After the supermarkets slashed their prices last fall, the price for a comparable basket of goods dropped to $12.56 in December.

The over-all index last month stood 3.4 per cent higher than a year earlier. This showed an acceleration of the rate of price increases, after it had slowed earlier to about two per cent.

It meant, said the statistics bureau, that the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer spending dollar was cut to 74 cents last month. It had been 75 cents in July, and 77 cents in August last year.

While food prices lead the parade of higher prices last month, they were spread over nearly all segments of the overall index which is generally regarded as a measure of the cost of living. Only clothing prices showed any downward movement, and it was small—two-tenths of one per cent.

But some consumer durables—items that a family buys infrequently, expecting them to last a long time—also showed some price moderation. Included were prices for new cars, furniture and carpets.

Other major increases in the over-all index were in alcohol, automobile insurance rates, gasoline and oil, new houses, rents, house insurance, and admission prices for football games and movies.

The indexes are based on a monthly survey of prices of more than 300 goods and services entering into the average family budget. The representative family in this case is one living in urban centres on low to medium incomes.

What the indexes mean in dollar terms is that, on average, it cost $13.59 last month to buy what $10 bought in 1961. This is an increase of 45 cents in the last year.

Benson Asks Money Reform

LONDON (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada today urged a fundamental reform of the world monetary system to prevent any outbreak of a devastating international trade war.

Benson told an emergency meeting of the 10 richest non-Communist nations — the Group of 10 — that recent United States measures to protect the American economy pose a serious threat to the freedom of world trade.

Benson, this year's chairman of the group, said a full examination of the current monetary system should be made by the International Monetary Fund.

News Briefs

LONDON (CP) — John Diefenbaker said today he feels "108 per cent" and will fly back to Canada Friday afternoon after treatment in a Wales hospital for stomach trouble. He expects to be back in the Commons in two or three weeks.

Adjusted Jobless Rate Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment dropped to 455,000 at mid-August from 514,000 in July, but the seasonally-adjusted rate rose to 6.5 per cent from the July rate of 6.3 per cent.

Figures released today in a joint report by Statistics Canada and the manpower department show that the number of unemployed was actually 8.1 per cent of the labor force in August, compared with 7.7 per cent in July.

But the seasonally-adjusted rate—the one analysts look at to examine longer-range trends, ruse as students left the labor market. The seasonally-adjusted rate is compiled by a complex formula designed to provide for the normal winter slumps and the summer peak of activity.

The report showed that the decline of 39,000 in the number of unemployed included 53,000 in the 14-24 age group.

Of the 3 per cent actual unemployment rate is the same as in August, 1970, when 648,000 persons were without work. During that one-year period, employment rose by 345,000 while the labor force went up by 352,000.

But compared with month-earlier figures, total employment in Canada decreased for the third consecutive year between July and August. The total labor force of 8,972,000 was 90,000 less than in July.

The report said the reduction in unemployment was due to a 43,000 decrease in female employment, which more than offset an increase of 11,000 in male employment.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 6.5 per cent is the highest since April when it hit 6.7 per cent. This rate had reached a peak of 6.8 per cent last September, but then gradually declined to six per cent in March before bouncing up to 6.7 per cent in April. It was 6.3 per cent in May, 6.4 per cent in June and 6.3 per cent in July.

The decrease in total employment, down to 8,317,000 in August from 8,354,000 in July, was due largely to a higher-than usual contraction of 23,000 in Ontario. The report says there is usually an increase in Ontario in this period.

Among industries, the report said there was a contraction of 69,000 in community, business and personal service, a decrease of 30,000 in public administration, and a drop of 13,000 in finance, insurance and real estate. These decreases were offset to some extent by a larger-than-average employment expansion of 59,000 in manufacturing. Agriculture employment showed a small gain of 10,000.

Undertaker Enters Dispute

New Pathologists Called To Tell Slit from Shot

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Two widely-known pathologists have begun examining bodies of the men who died in the bloody clash at Attica state prison as controversy mounted over whether some hostages died from gunshot wounds or from having their throats slit.

Forty-two persons died in the rebellion which ended Monday when the prison was stormed by about 1,000 heavily-armed state troopers, sheriff's deputies, prison guards and National Guard troops.

The pathologists—Dr. Henry Siegel of Westchester County and Dr. Michael Baden, acting chief examiner in New York City—were summoned Wednesday by state officials in hopes they could resolve the confusion over how the victims died.

One guard's burial was postponed at the last moment after a funeral director, James F. Smith disputed a coroner's report that the correction officer had been killed by gunfire. The coroner's report said seven other hostages also died from gunshot wounds.

Earlier official reports, later acknowledged by the state's correction commissioner as "misstatements," had said some hostages died of slit throats.

Three Policemen Die In Tokyo Airport Riot

NARITA, Japan (Reuter) — Three policemen died and another 100 were injured in hand-to-hand battles with bomb-throwing demonstrators today on the site of Tokyo's second international airport.

Bitter fighting raged as about 5,000 riot police stormed a string of fortified stockades manned by more than 2,000 left-wing students and local farmers opposed to the half-completed project.

Congressmen Will Probe Riot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Congress has begun investigating the bloody suppression of the Attica prison riot amid calls both for reform and criminal investigations. The White House has reiterated President Nixon's support of methods used to quell the rebellion.

Chairman Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.) of the House of Representatives select committee on crime announced Wednesday he and three other committee members will talk with New York state officials and prisoners to find how to prevent a recurrence of the Attica riot. Hearings will follow, he said.

The 13 black members of the House called on Attorney-General John N. Mitchell to appoint a special federal grand jury to investigate the "questionable circumstances" surrounding the decision of officials to storm the outer-held portions of the prison Monday.

White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said the President has not withdrawn his support for New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's handling of the affair, despite subsequent findings that slain hostages were shot to death instead of killed as previously reported. Rioters were reported not to have had guns.

New Zealand-bound Trimaran on Its Way

TRENTON (Staff) — Tremayel is a word that does not mean much to many people but to one former Belleville family it means a symbol of a new life.

It is the name of a sleek new 67-foot trimaran built by Ernest Domney on which he has taken his family to find their future in the South Pacific.

Sailing out this week with destination New Zealand, the departure marks the end of many years of planning and three-and-a-half of boat-building for the retired air force captain.

The Domneys have sold their home at 503 Bridge St. West, sold their furniture and assembled a few selected belongings in the cabins of their massive tri-hulled residence.

Mr. Domney, a short one-armed veteran of World War II, is taking about this trip "serendipity" as his closest English equivalent. "It is something that always comes and goes, like cricket or schools of fish," he says.

The little cream to be towed by the trimaran is dubbed "Wheteke" — Maori for servant or slave.

The pull is for New Zealand, where they plan to live aboard ship for several years, the family will take the Erie Canal down to New York then either follow the inland waterway to Florida and on across the Gulf of Mexico or else head out to sea from New York and head straight across Panama.

Once through the canal, the Quinte craft will visit the Galapagos Islands before crossing 5,000 miles of open sea to Tonga and New Zealand.

Through the low income housing scheme outlined by Mr. Raine, CMHC would arrange that the buyer, saving six to seven thousand dollars a year, could purchase his home at 8% per cent interest over a period of 25 years and if his income would not support this figure, then drop the interest to 7%.

If the buyer is still having a problem financially, the mortgage can be arranged over a 40 - year period.

"This has got to be the best scheme come out yet," he called the Assisted Home Ownership Plan," said Mr. Raine.

This money was made available through CMHC to cope/meet the "right money" provided when great sums of money were allocated to the subsidized housing scheme.

With the rezoning, the city could also make servicing regulations less stringent, thereby lowering the cost of the building and lowering the customer purchase price.

"It is my feeling," said Mr. Raine that, "people don't need a 60 - foot - wide street, storm sewers, sidewalks and the whole shot."

"With the help of these city planning," contended Mr. Raine, "housing could be started that would take care of the thousands in the city that cannot possibly afford the conventional home."

At the moment, an annual income of no less than $3,000 is required for application for an CMHC loan. "Those earning $6,500 don't have a chance" said Mr. Raine.

"The plan is working in every other province, there is no reason why it can't work in Ontario," said Mr. Raine.

What Mr. Raine had to say last night was nothing new to the Quinte Homebuilders. At least two submissions have been made to city council asking for changes in zoning regulations.

"The first, submitted two years ago, gave very limited results, and a second is now in the hands of the city," said Gerald Joyce a committee of the Quinte Homebuilders.

"The brief that has been recently submitted asks that in each new development," a section of it be set aside for the development, such as Mr. Raine describes."

"We are asking that reduced servicing be instituted in this section of the development so that when low income houses are built they will be economically within reach of the low income family.

Mayor J. Russell Scott attended the meeting last night and said, "every avenue must be explored in order to take care of the low income family."

CMHC Spokesman Calls For Relaxed Regulations

Jack Raine of Central Housing and Mortgage Corp. told members of the Quinte Homebuilders last night at their meeting, "I treat it much like a joke when someone comes to me wanting to build enough money to build homes."

Mr. Raine, guest speaker for the evening, continued by saying "it is, to a great extend, up to the builder to control the cost of homes. By skilfully handling the subtrades and developing better plans and methods, the cost of home building could be lowered."

Members reacted to this statement saying, "it is not the price of the building but the price of the land and servicing it. Every level of government passes fees to the till it comes finally to the hands of the builder."

In response, Mr. Raine said, I am in full agreement that the homebuilder needs help. Zoning perhaps might be changed, allowing the construction of townhousing etc. and municipalities should be helping out right now, but it is the responsibility of the builder to approach council with recommendations for change.

"If those zoning changes can be made through the mutual co-operation of the builders and the municipality, then a CMHC loan can be arranged to get the buildings up," said Mr. Raine. "It can work in Belleville and if we receive an application, we'll push it through."

The builders replied to Mr. Raine's challenge to change zoning by saying, "when we have asked for changes in the past, we have had no luck. City council doesn't seem to be able to hear us."

Double Funeral For Crash Victims

A double funeral was held Tuesday in Bradford for the victims of a September 10 auto accident at Newmarket which killed the son of a Castleton couple.

Killed in the accident were Malcolm Ward, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Ward of Castleton, and Keith Lever 23, of Bradford.

The funeral was held from the Lewis Funeral Home with burial in Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Bradford.

The two young men, who had been close friends since childhood, were killed when a brake release threw the car out of control and slammed it sideways into a tree.

Aside from his parents, the Ward youth is survived by two brothers, Michael and Maurice and by a sister Margaret. Mr. Lever is survived by his parents and a sister Marjorie.

Mr. Davis will start each day with a pancake breakfast for the people, served from a pancake truck travelling as part of his entourage.

Two buses will carry the Conservative party from place to place. One is equipped for the 20 or more press. TV and radio people who will be travelling with him. It will be equipped with a portable duplicating machine so the press can obtain copies of speeches and official releases while on route.

Also with the entourage will be a truck equipped with banners, placards and a public address system for impromptu informal rallies.

Mr. Davis will use the greatest number of advance men in Ontario's political history in his campaign for re-election Fourteen advance men, all volunteers, will split into seven teams of two men each. Each team will cover one region of Ontario with one man on each team devoting himself to "youth participation". The man in charge of youth will try to visit each school and college in his region to arrange a visit by the Prime Minister.

In July the Ontario government lowered the voting age from 21 to 18, adding more than 400,000 people to the voters' list.

Warm Greeting to Residents

The senior citizen housing project on West Bridge Street across from the fairgrounds was officially opened yesterday at a ribbon cutting ceremony attended by Mayor J. Russell Scott. A large number of city councillors also attended the opening with special dignitaries including Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Quinte and J. W. Snow, minister without portfolio and director of Ontario Housing Corp., shown here meeting with residents of the building. After leaving the Bridge Street project, the party moved to Turnbull Street for a second, similar opening. "It's tremendous to be able to open two such buildings in the same city and on the same day," said Mr. Snow.

Madoc TV Adds Unit

MADOC (Special) — Hanes Ings Cable Vision recently purchased some new equipment, which will enable them to make films outside the studio.

The Videocorder is completely portable and works on a battery-powered unit that can be carried and operated by one person. It consists of a hand-held video camera with a built-in microphone, and is connected to a shoulder-carried videorecorder. The camera has a zoom lens and an electronic viewfinder that shows the operator exactly what will appear on the TV screen. This viewfinder can be used for immediate playback to check the tape as soon as it has been recorded. An AC power adapter which also serves to charge the battery, makes it possible to run the videocorder on house current. It can also be run on the cigarette lighter of a vehicle. Recordings of up to thirty minutes duration can be made on one reel.

This compact model camera will be put to good use, as it can take pictures and recordings anywhere outside the studio, thereby making it possible for "MTV" to take candid shots at local fairs, street dances, hockey games, ball games, and the many other activities throughout the year.

Outstanding Volunteers Are Honored at Dinner

A group of volunteers of the year, symbolic of "thousands of years of service" given in this community, were feted by 113 of their fellows at a banquet last night at the Four Seasons Hotel.

The banquet highlighted Volunteer Recognition Week now being celebrated in the city to acquaint citizens with the contribution made by the thousands of people who give their leisure time to help others.

Les Jouard presented citations to the representative volunteers and Mayor J. Russell Scott gave a city citation to Ruth Burrows, director of the Central Volunteer Bureau.

Brian Cook, 24, the youngest volunteer, and Mrs. Helen Bramhall, 88, the oldest, were among those honored.

Mrs. Bramhall made quilts for the Red Cross for many years. Now unable to do the quilting herself, she pieces seven or eight tops a year for the Red Cross sewing group to quilt. She still attends church and community functions regularly.

Brian Cook refereed hockey games for 7 and 8 year olds for two hours each Wednesday night from November to April last year, and plans to do the same again this year. His parents said that he walked to the arena in all kinds of weather and sometimes missed his supper in order to get there in time.

The Quinte Chapter of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society nominated two of its workers Mrs. A. A. Gemmell and Mrs. Muriel B. McKinney who "have been mainly responsible for keeping the evening physiotherapy clinics in Belleville General Hospital running".

Merrill Dales was the nominee of the Hastings - Prince Edward Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. He is health education chairman for the two counties and has recently become the chairman for all Ontario.

Mrs. J. L. Parrell was the Civic Action Committee of the Catholic Women's League's volunteer of the year for her work for retarded children, the Opportunity Shop and as a visitor at Hastings Manor.

The Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society named Marney Workman for recognition for his water safety work in the district.

Mrs. Selena Bodrese was chosen by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary for her contribution to volunteer staff of hospital services.

James Driscoll was singled out by the Belleville Firefly Y for his 19 years of teaching judo and self-defence to 1,500 young people and adults.

Mrs. A. W. Bunnett was the nominee of the Belleville Branch of the Navy League of Canada. President of its Women's Auxiliary, she organizes housekeeping parties of cadets to care for the building.

The local chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation honored Mrs. John Hartt for her contribution to the organization's work.

Nurses named Miss Olive Rose as its outstanding volunteer for her service as a charter member of the new Quinte Branch and participation on most of the organization's committees.

Arnold Welch, District Commissioner for Belleville District of the Boy Scouts was cited for his many hours of organizational work for the movement.

President Thomas Cavanaugh of the Minor Sports Association shared the honors for his contribution with representatives from the sports represented in his organization. They were Bruce Lucas, Roy Payne, William Coveney, Lorne Cronkright, Robert Rykman, Donald Govey, Austin Watkin and Hanley Bly.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind named Harold Clark as its volunteer of the year.

Beginner and Veteran

Brian Cook and Mrs. Helen Bramhall have bridged an age gap of 78 years through their common interest in volunteer service to their community. Brian, 10, referees minor sport, and Mrs. Bramhall, 88, has sewn for the Red Cross for many years. They are, as far as could be determined, the youngest and the oldest volunteers in Belleville and were honored last night with others at the Four Seasons Hotel.

Tribute Is Paid To Ruth Burrows

"A woman whose life "has touched all of us" was last night cut as Belleville recognized the voluntary contribution of its citizens to a better quality of life in this city.

Ruth Burrows was drawn from the shadows behind all the service projects she motivates to the limelight last night to receive a city citation from Mayor J. Russell Scott.

In addition, she was given a plaque citing her for making "Belleville a better community in which to live."

"Your quiet, gentle and yet resolute manner has attracted many to volunteerism, making it possible for agencies and organizations to expand the scope of their activities," it read.

Master of ceremonies Les Jouard called Mrs. Burrows forward at the conclusion of the Volunteer Recognition Week banquet to "thank the way Ruth Burrows is, always in the background. There is much of her in the service she touches all our lives."

Mrs. Burrows instituted many community activities, including meals - on - wheels, the preschool enrichment program, and the Central Volunteer Bureau. For a year she and Mrs. Harry Paul jointly headed United Community Services, until a professional director could be obtained.

Last night, Mrs. W. M. Bishop read a letter from Mrs. Fast in Zambia, expressing her delight that voluntarism, and Ruth Burrows, were being recognized by a special week in their honor.

"The success of volunteerism in Belleville and indeed beyond its boundaries has been due to the whole measure to the leadership of one of the most compassionate, understanding community - minded persons I have ever known," she wrote of Mrs. Burrows.

Mrs. Paul recalled that one of the first things she heard on coming to Belleville to was of the Burrows' two daughters, "among the many North American young people who recognized the social injustices of our society and by their positive action risked the alienation encountered by those who dare to question the establishment.

"In addition I poured my heart out to Ruth about my concern in several areas of human hardship," recounted Mrs. Fast. "That was the beginning of her persuasive powers to involve others in the larger task we shared at the United Community Services."

The mark of gratitude to Mrs. Burrows was a surprise ending to the banquet, shared by her husband, Freeman Burrows, and a daughter Mrs. Peter (Diane) Brown of Kitcheener.

Bayside Excavators Strike

Excavation workers at the site of Bayside Secondary School went on strike Wednesday morning for two hours, their business representative told The Intelligencer.

Phillip Gauthier of Belleville said previous reports that the excavation workers had been out on strike before yesterday were erroneous.

The Wednesday morning walkout lasted two hours, with Mr. Gauthier counting the 4 picket lines alone. There are six "operating engineers" of Local 793 now employed on the construction site. The other workers on the site honored the picket line.

"Local 793 is in a legal strike position in the province of Ontario," said Mr. Gauthier.

Williams Excavating of Toronto holds the exclusive excavating contract at the Bayside site, said Mr. Gauthier, and the six men of Local 793 are employed by that company.

Legal strike position means that members of the local can walk off the job at any time and set up picket lines, said the business representative. Until yesterday, the union members at Bayside had remained at work - and had not exercised their right to strike the site.

The union is making a package wage demand of a $2 an hour increase. It has been given an offer of less than $2 an hour.

Funerals

MRS. THERESA HARPER

Buffalo — Deaconess

The funeral of Mrs. Theresa Harper, who died in Buffalo, was held Wednesday from the White and Morris Funeral Home where service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. Cyril Jones. Interment was in Christ Church Cemetery.

The bearers were Thomas Fowless Arnold Brant, Paul Schreckingost and Eugene Jamieson.

A. D. ARCHIBALD

The funeral of A. D. Archibald, teacher at Belleville College for many years, was held Wednesday morning from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home. The service was conducted by the Rev. Leslie J. Dean.

Assisting at the service was the Rev. Morgan MacFarlane, former pastor at Tabernacle United Church. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

Bearers were William R. MacKay, E. Arnold Orr, Gordon Priest, and three grandsons, Douglas and David Boyce and Ronald Smith.

Picton Man Hurt in Crash

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton man was treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon for facial cuts sustained in a two-car collision on the Glenora Road.

Injured was Hector Scott, 87 driver of one of the cars involved. Driver of the second vehicle was Samuel Downer, 61, of Springbrook.

A police spokesman said the Scott car apparently collided with the rear of the car driven by Mr. Downer.

Total damage to the two vehicles was estimated at $1,200.

Conservation Authority Seeks Cash, Property

The Moira River Conservation Authority is setting itself up as a charitable organization and is inviting donations of cash or property.

Primary reason for the action is that despite municipal levies paid by member municipalities and the receipt of certain government grants, it still is often short of funds for some of its activities.

A case in point is the O'Hara Mill museum northwest of Madoc on which no operational grants are received.

The museum, depicting as it does the pioneer life of the area, is beginning to draw large crowds and summer attendants have been found necessary.

But like most museums, the operation doesn't show a profit and cash donations are being invited.

Accordingly, the authority has set up what is known as the Moira River Conservation Authority Development Fund, which has been duly recognized by the federal taxation branch and any donations will be tax free.

The endowment fund has been purposely left broad enough to allow donations of property to the authority.

Details of setting up the endowment fund have been completed by the authority and a supply of official receipts has been ordered to permit donors to claim tax exemption.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?
The executive editor of a well-known New York subsidy publishing firm will be in the area in late October. He will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication. All subjects will be considered, including fiction and non-fiction, poetry, juvenile, religious books, etc.
If you have completed a book length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately describing your work and stating which part of the day (a.m. or p.m.) you would prefer for an appointment. Please mention your phone number. You will promptly receive confirmation for a definite time and place.
Authors with completed manuscripts unable to appear may send them directly to us for a free reading and evaluation. We will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress. Please address:

Milford Fair Celebrates Its 25th Anniversary

MILFORD (Staff) — Milford Fair, the only remaining township fair in Prince Edward County, yesterday celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Officially opened by county warden Allan Anderson, this one-day event featured a colorful parade, a horse show, a livestock display, arts and crafts, baking, sewing and a baby show.

Special guests included Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, the Hon. George Hees, MP Prince Edward - Hastings and Queen Elizabeth Blossom Queen Anna Lynne Walker.

Wren Hicks, president of Milford Fair recalled it first opened in 1946 to honor soldiers returning from World War II.

South Marysburg reeve Clifford Walker added necessary words to the township who have become involved with the local fair have assisted in perpetuating the popular event. Mr. Hees, in a brief address to fairgoers observed he enjoys South Marysburg township's fair more than any other because "everyone gets into the act."

He referred to wholehearted community participation in the fair parade, contests held on the grounds and in the displays exhibited for judging. "It's a real community affair which is what we need a lot more of," said Mr. Hees.

Norris Whitney commented he was reeve of Ameliasburg when the first Milford Fair was opened 25 years ago.

Warden of Prince Edward County on that occasion was Donald Thompson, past deputy reeve of Picton who retired from municipal politics last year.

Mr. Whitney complimented the Marysburg residents for continuing "this worthwhile enterprise."

The fair opened with a school parade including horses and ponies decorated floats and bicycles and farm machinery displays.

Youngsters ran eagerly toward the cages where family pets had been temporarily incarcerated for judging. Irate felines, bashful bunnies and handsome geese were proudly exhibited for consideration as prize winners.

On the green, a junior horse show was in progress complete with line and saddle classes. Star of the show, however, was the stubborn relative of the equine family.

Jenny, a mule owned and ridden by nine - year - old Brenda Way, Milford, proved a scene stealer although she was indelible for competition with the horses.

Door prizes, donated by Picton and Milford district merchants, were given away throughout the afternoon and evening programs.

Evening entertainment was provided by Jack Jones and The Acoustics. Picton, and Brenda and Stephen Wilson, a teenage singing duo.

Veterans Are Active

Veterans organizations in this city have always contributed to the community. The immediate example is the new Legion Hall on Pinnacle Street which already gives indication of being not only a home for the Legion Branch but also an important facility for conventions and large meetings.

Monday of this week city council endorsed the move by the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association to transfer ownership of their headquarters building from a trust fund to the organization itself.

This should result in the ANAF having control of its own destiny as far as its building is concerned. Already there are plans to undertake some needed renovations.

Undoubtedly both organizations will continue their community work as both a special interest group and as volunteers in the many fields that are undertaken either as branch projects or as individual members. Their efforts along these lines unquestionably will be appreciated in the years ahead as they have been in the past.

Elections Are Exciting

Elections are always a time of excitement and the provincial election set for Oct. 21 promises to be no different.

It is the day of reckoning: sitting members have to justify their actions over the past four years and the party in power has to substantiate its program. For the opposition it is the moment of truth when they get the opportunity to drive home their points in a personal fashion by taking their case to the people.

The great thing about elections is that they can be fun and an experience for the voter. Perhaps not so for the candidates and his workers who view the contest as the most serious decision to be made in four years. However, for the voter it is his chance to shine. He can go to meetings, ask all the embarrassing questions he can find, make the candidate squirm and generally use the occasion to clarify in his mind the comparative capabilities of the many candidates.

So, the voter sort la. May the best man win.

Norris Whitney Era Ends

Tuesday night marked the official retirement from provincial politics for Norris Whitney, the easy - going sheep farmer from Prince Edward who for 20 years delivered the riding of Prince Edward - Lennox to the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

The nomination meeting for a new candidate was interspersed continually with compliments extended to Mr. Whitney for his two - decade service to the riding. Even the oft-controversial high level bridge at Deseronto got into the act once more.

However, it was a night of compliments for Mr. Whitney, and rightly so in his quiet fashion he accepted the accolades with little expression — and then in political style wrote finis to his provincial career by humorously making himself the target of a political anecdote.

Mr. Whitney's departure produces an interesting struggle for political supremacy between the successor James Taylor of Northport and Liberal candidate Barry Young of Napanee.

Both are lawyers. Both are young. Both are relative newcomers to the Eastern Ontario political scene. Mr. Young has been campaigning strenuously for some weeks now, a fact that Mr. Taylor and his campaign committee must overcome now that the nomination meeting is out of the way.

Prince Edward - Lennox hasn't had an election fight like the upcoming one since Norris Whitney upset the sitting Liberal John D. Baxter by 1,197 votes four elections ago. With two political newcomers on the scene it should prove interesting to be able to sit on the sidelines and watch.

The Old Chief Isn't Slowed by Trifling Ailments

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It takes more than a mere abdominal discomfort in North Wales to slow down old pro John Diefenbaker or turn off The Old Chief from his main interest.

Which is politics. Politics always and forever politics.

There the old warhorse was, taking his ease with his wife Olive, as a guest of Brigadier Michael Wardell, who recently retired as publisher of The Fredericton Gleaner to live the life of a country squire in Merionethire, in old country estate equipped with, among other amenities of the landed gentry, its own trout and salmon streams.

The Old Chief had pulled into Merionethire Aug. 26, and was enjoying himself hugely, stalking the trout and salmon with his fly lines, the gung-ho Brigadier from New Brunswick related, when suddenly he came down with a tummy ache.

Dief had consumed a couple of the Brigadier's trout and a steak from a six-pound salmon he had landed, but his host did not think it possibly could be the fish which had laid him low. Nor likely was it.

Now it can be told — or presented as a theory of possibility — what really happened to upset the old Chief.

Knowing the old warrior and his often whacky ways these past 11 parliamentary years, it had to be a little item under a three column heading tucked away on Page Two of The Daily Express of London.

Picture it.

There was Dief, consuming a couple of breakfast kippers while running his speed-reading eye over The Daily Mail, The Times, The Daily Telegraph, perhaps The Mirror, and definitely beyond doubt The Daily Express, when the little headline in small type, hit him: "Biggest Canadian Upset."

The item read:

"Ottawa — In the greatest political upset in living Canadian memory the 35-year-old Social Credit Government was toppled from power in yesterday's Alberta provincial election by the Conservatives led by Peter Lougheed, young (42) debonair stunningly handsome Calgary lawyer.

"Defeated was Premier Harry Strom, aging at 57, introvert, even a bit old hat. The scores: Conservatives, 49. Social Credit, 25. New Democratic Party, 2. Social Credit came too power in 1935 under Premier William "Bible Bill" Aberhart.

"Peter Lougheed pulled it off almost single-handed, hammering on the theme 'It's time for a change now.'"

Fair enough summary of the Big Switch in Alberta?

Sums it up adequately, what?

Uh uh, or no sirreboh.

Back in the mail dated Sept. 1, from Dolgellau, Wales, came a postcard bearing a brown Harpsway stamp and a 35-word snort of derision signed Diefenbaker.

But The Old Chief, still living and breathing politics even in the depths of Wales takes time out to pop down onto the postcard the indignant message:

"The story in The Daily Express on the Alberta election results, even though the author was not bylined, bore the Jackson inspired — 'Greatest political upset in living Canadian memory' — hah — 'stunningly handsome Lougheed' — hoh. Diefwhacker."

What The Old Chief very obviously had in mind was the Great Landslide of the 1926 federal election when he led a record 206 Tories to power and glory in Parliament. Sure and 'twas a famous victory.

The greatest number of members of any one party ever elected federally. Nothing even approaching it.

But it was not unexpected. He had cracked the Liberal hegemonrock on Parliament in the 1957 election and everyone knew nothing could stop him winning it big in '58. Maybe not 208 seats big, but still big.

His '57 victory had broken 22 years of Liberal rule.

Peter Lougheed's win, first, ever, for the Conservatives in Alberta, was more than upset because the beat he was expected to do — going along with the forecast himself — was a rolomby squeak-through to victory.

And when he made it big, just about two to one against Social Credit, he smashed a string of nine Socred election victories and 36 successive years of rule, longest, ever, anywhere in Canada.

But never mind that. Dief figures it differently.

Still, at 76, truly the Total Politician with nothing in politics too small or far enough to escape his eagle eye, and joyfully argue.

Here is a salute to the old soldier.

Watch Out for the Children

Peterborough Examiner

The streets looked somewhat different on Tuesday morning. Groups of schoolage children were on their way to school.

The summer is over and from now on, we can expect the familiar sight of the yellow school buses picking up or unloading children.

And, as usual, we can expect more problems.

Motorists will have to be extra careful not only in obeying the laws but in being mindful of the fact that children are not always as careful as they should be.

This has been repeated so many times that every driver must know it by now. Yet dreadful accidents which seriously injure or kill many children continue to occur.

Often, keeping the rules is not enough.

What is necessary, besides knowing the law and adhering to it, is the extra attention which distinguishes mechanical efficiency from conscious determination to take the human element into consideration.

Emily Carr: Flower Child Of an Earlier Generation

Ottawa Journal

The proposed CBC musical on Emily Carr could have a contemporary flavor.

She is 30 years dead, but in her own way modern as to day's flower child: in her frowsy disregard for conventional dress, a disdain for straight society's mores, and frequent plight of semi-starvation. Like many of the flower children, she was booked, though not on drugs. What turned Emily on was the interior wilderness of British Columbia, and its Indian people.

In painting and writing about her addiction, she became for a great artist. Her canvases depicted the somber hues of the forests, floor, above which the many - hued swinging greens of its trees reached to misty skies; or pictured mysterious old totem poles, brooding over the ruins of Indian culture.

Her first autobiographical writing, Klee Wyck, was called after the name given her by Indian friends—"the laughing one." Perhaps she was happy among them, but in her home town of Victoria, B.C., she had little to laugh about.

Emily's trouble was that Canada was not ready for her. She was born 30 years too soon, exactly a century ago.

Today art is a booming business, as anyone who has thought of buying a painting by a contemporary artist like Riopell, Town or Jackson must know. If you have to ask the price, forget it! But in 1912 when she returned from Paris and began setting paints on canvas with impressionist and Fauve techniques, Canadians were aghast. They ignored and kept her painting.

A CBC show about Emily Carr cannot reverse the fact that she died sick, discouraged and forgotten. We trust it will do at least belated justice to her genius.

Sunday Opening for Some Libraries in Toronto

The Globe and Mail

It is welcome news that some of the boroughs are following Toronto's lead in opening their libraries to the public on Sundays.

Toronto decided last February to operate three libraries every Sunday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. — the branches at 40 St. Clair Ave. E., 1089 Bloor St. W. and 745 Pape Ave. The experiment was a success, which makes it difficult to understand why the library board chose to close the operation during the summer months (they'll reopen on September 12), or why more libraries in the city aren't throwing wide their doors on Sundays.

The important thing, though, is that North York, Etobicoke and York will also be opening their branch system this Sunday this fall. North York hasn't settled on a date yet, but Etobicoke will open its library on September 12 at 1806 Islington Ave. N. York's main library, at 1745 Eglinton Ave. W., will open on October 3.

It's regrettable that only one branch in each borough will be opened on Sundays. The library is a service to the public and paid by the public, but it can perform that service only if it is accessible. Sunday is the only day that many people have free to visit a library. To lock the library doors on Sunday is as silly as locking the museum, art gallery and science centre on Sunday.

Still, the library boards of Toronto, North York, Etobicoke and York must be congratulated for moving in the right direction. Presumably public response will encourage them to expand their operations.

It might even encourage Scarborough and East York, the last two boroughs, to change their attitude of never on Sunday toward the reading public.

Andrew Bonar Law, the only British prime minister born outside the United Kingdom, was born at Rexton, N.B., 113 years ago today—in 1858. The son of a Presbyterian clergyman, he was educated in New Brunswick and Glasgow, Scotland, before entering business in Glasgow. In 1900 he left business and entered Parliament as a Glasgow MP. He later held other seats and gained the Conservative party leadership in 1911. In 1916, he joined the war coalition as colonial secretary and when the coalition fell in 1922, he became the prime minister.

1863—Canada sold Russia 228-million bushels of wheat and flour worth $300 million.

1945—Real Caouette was first elected to Parliament for Pontiac, Que., as a Social Credit member.

1945—The Japanese at Hong Kong surrendered to the British.

1944—American troops cracked Germany's Siegfried Line.

1941—The Shah of Iran abdicated.

1940—Roosevelt signed the Selective Service Act.

1916—Prohibition went into effect in Ontario after a night when liquor stores and saloons sold out their stocks.

1893—Calgary was incorporated.

1839—Livingstone discovered Lake Nyasa.

Auld Says Liberals Don't Expect to Win

NAPANEE (Staff) — The Ontario Liberal party, essentially leaderless, is not geared to win an election but rather to maintain itself as the official opposition at Queen's Park.

This view was expressed by the Hon. James Auld, minister of public works and MPP, Leeds, while addressing the Prince Edward-Lennox Progressive Conservative nominating convention here Tuesday.

Mr. Auld stressed the Liberals do expect to win, as evidenced by the recent actions of two of their key members of the legislature who have announced they will not seek re - election in the October campaign.

Elmer Sopha, MPP, Sudbury and Stan Farquhar, MPP, Algoma-Manitoulin, in Mr. Auld's opinion, likely would have been re - elected and probably appointed cabinet ministers in any Liberal administration.

The current decision of the Liberal party at this time suggests to Mr. Auld serious Liberal losses in the election.

The public works minister remarked that recently the Liberal leader told press conferences a large number of key people would be running as Liberal candidates in the campaign.

"So far, with practically all Liberal party nominations completed, the only so-called big name that he has been able to come up with is the former mayor of Toronto, Philip Givens, who did not appear wildly happy as a Liberal backbencher in Ottawa."

Mr. Auld charged a vote for the Liberal party in the next election is a non-vote since they have no policies and are incapable of forming a government.

"At best, they serve simply to defend the power and arrogance of their national leader in Ottawa, Mr. Trudeau," he said.

The speaker commended a reduction in the size of the cabinet represents the only really united party advanced by the Liberals in Ontario in the past four years.

"I can understand this; one glance at the Liberal party front benches in the legislature and one comes to realize there is not even enough talent or imagination for even a single game of tiddlywinks," observed Mr. Auld.

He added the Liberals cannot agree "on anything and consequently, with 27 different members now have 27 different policies as well.

"I suggest that if this small band of Liberals now in the legislature cannot even agree among themselves, how can anyone expect them to put forward proposals for the governing of the province of Ontario?" submitted the speaker.

Mr. Auld stated pi-election of the Conservative government is essential to the maintenance of stable progressive and responsible provincial government.

He noted in the 1940s the party faced "the great backlog of development resulting from the depression, the Second World War, and, to a degree, the Liberal regime of Mitchell Hepburn.

"In the 1950s a more modern society demanding facilities and services such as roads, schools, housing and industry had to be built.

"A decade later the new growth policy was continued while planning and adjustment to the fact of technological change and rapid urbanization took place.

"Social security programs such as legal aid, Ontario Hospital Insurance and an expansion of educational facilities prompted by the post-war baby boom were introduced.

"From 1963 to 1970 the Conservatives faced and put forward new policies and programs in the continuing struggle for national unity.

"In the 1970s the Progressive Conservative government will turn more and more to the question of restoring the balance of nature," predicted Mr. Auld.

He explained the living environment must be protected as industry and material efforts are expanded. A series of policies announced or implemented by the Davis government since March 1 represents a fundamental change in provincial policy.

The policies include establishment of a Department of the Environment, elimination of logging in Quetico Park, cancellation of further construction of Toronto's Spadina expressway, the allotment of $20 million for a new land bank to purchase recreational property for the enjoyment of Ontario residents, suing of the Dow Chemical Corporation and passing of legislation to control operation of pits and quarries with regard to their environmental effects.

"To protect our sovereignty, the government recently has moved to protect Canadian authors, Canadian books and periodicals from foreign takeover.

"Financial assistance has recently been offered to one of Canada's biggest book publishers to prevent it from selling out to American interests."

Mr. Auld noted a conference was held in Toronto recently concerning economic and cultural nationalism representing all segments of the community, to focus public attention on the "critical" problem of maintaining national sovereignty.

"It has always been a basic Progressive Conservative belief that the role of government is to help people to create economic and social opportunity so that the people can maintain their independence from the state, and, therefore it leads us to belief that while economics and policies are dependent on one another, they should be seperate functions. For the state that combines total economic and political power becomes a state without the means of control by the people," said Mr. Auld.

"We do not believe in nationalization for the sake of nationalization. Nor do we believe that the government alone can determine what is wise and what is best for the people. This kind of theory is for the Socialist — The policies of excessive nationalization and the big brother form of government have never worked and I suggest to you that they will not work either here in Ontario," asserted Mr. Auld.

He closed his address with the prediction the 1970s will witness a struggle for national unity and changes in government taxation policies both federal and provincial.

"We must continue the battle against the forces of pollution while at the same time increasing economic security for all," said Mr. Auld.

Wrong-way Plane Heads for U. S.

TRENTON (Staff) — Search for a light aircraft missing from Oak Hills Flying Club since September 2 with a Trenton man aboard has been discontinued Search and Rescue spokesmen here report.

Harvey Cannel, with wife and family living at 4 Wilson Crescent, set off from the club field near Stirling in a Cessna Sky-hawk owned by a new comer to the area, Lyle Riviere.

Reportedly he was bound for Mont Joli, Quebec where he planned to stay only a short time before returning with a load of seafood. Mont Joli is 270 miles east of Quebec City.

Trenton Search and Rescue spokesmen revealed today a brief search for Cannel was discontinued when it was learned the plane had headed into the United States, perhaps because of bad weather.

Cannel flew the local plane along the St Lawrence valley to the Montreal westerd suburb of Dorion but did not continue eastward. Instead, he banked the plane southward heading across the border.

He checked the plane through U.S. Customs at Ogdensburg, N.Y., on Sept. 13 and the matter has been referred to American police officials.

Volunteer Groups Join in Display

City-wide observance of Volunteer Recognition Week will be climaxed Friday and Saturday with displays and demonstrations in the Memorial Arena on Market Square.

Thirty-two volunteer agencies will set up booths in the building and mount demonstrations on the stage.

The exhibition is designed to show viewers all the types of volunteer work they can help do in the city.

Hours are from 2:30 to 9 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Demonstrations will include square dancing by a group of retarded children and lessons on how the blind use the white cane.

Volunteer activities to be showcased range from Hastings County Museum demonstrations to water safety and boat handling displays by the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron.

Lifeline will explain its activities, service clubs will outline their work and other agencies will have informative literature available.

Mrs. Freeman Barrows of the Central Volunteer Bureau will be on hand to interview and help place anyone wishing to volunteer.

New Heating, Cooling System for City Hall?

Municipal employees at Belleville's city hall will be able to keep their cool next summer.

They will, that is, if staff recommendations for air conditioning equipment at the century - old building are approved by city council.

Council early this year placed a sum of $10,300 in the current budget for the purchase of 20 window - type air conditioners for installation at city hall.

However, fuller investigation by the city engineering department revealed the window-type units would have certain disadvantages and would do nothing to remedy a wider heating problem.

Disadvantages would include an unattractive appearance, the units would be subject to vandalism, would be prone to noise complaints and would have a life expectancy averaging only seven years.

Instead of the window units, air conditioned heating and air conditioning units are recommended, five of which would be installed on the roof and one in the basement.

Installation of the combined units would permit removal from the building of all the present steam radiators and piping and then remove considerable dead weight from the building.

Cost of the complete installation was estimated at approximately $55,000.

The report by City Engineer Wilbur Purcell recommended retaining the services of a consultant specializing in heating and air conditioning.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, however, didn't feel a consultant was necessary. Instead he recommended the city engineer prepare an outline of requirements and invite tenders. In this way the city would get competitive prices without the cost of a consultant.

But Mayor Russell Scott, didn't agree. He felt a consultant should be hired as Mr. Purcell was not a heating or air conditioning expert.

He said a new heating boiler had been installed at city hall only a year or so ago and suggested this could be utilized in connection with the proposed heating and air conditioning installation.

The matter was tabled for further discussions with the city engineer.

Davis To Tour By Bus

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis will launch his campaign next week for the Oct. 21 provincial election, with a bus tour of ridings in the Progressive Conservative stronghold of eastern Ontario.

The official campaign will start Sunday at a public rally in a Belleville arena, beginning at 8 p.m.

He will take off the next day in a bus, calling at Kingston, Gananoque, Brockville, Prescott, Cornwall and Alexandria. The Tories hold all 14 seats in eastern Ontario.

Mr. Davis's itinerary for the first week of his campaign, released Wednesday, has him touring Metropolitan Toronto Thursday, with a side trip in the evening to Galt for a nomination meeting.

On Friday, he will visit Simcoe, Welland, Niagara Falls and his hometown of Brampton, where he will receive the nomination in his riding of Peel North.

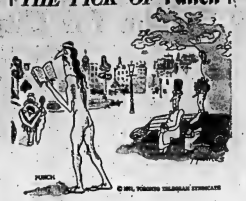
He has only two public appearances Saturday, the wine and grape festival in St. Catharines, and the Canadian Football League game between Calgary and Toronto starting at 8:30 p.m. in Toronto.

Mr. Davis emerged from a daylong cabinet meeting Wednesday to announce that the cabinet will meet on Sunday nights during the campaign.

The premier said that desire "the hectic pace of electioneering across the province, the business of government must still be carried out . . . ."

Although his official campaign does not start until next week, Mr. Davis was to resume his public appearances today. He spent the first three days of this week at his Queen's Park offices.

He was to open a housing development and an industrial plant today and attend two nomination meetings, all in the Toronto area.



He will be back at his desk Friday, but in the evening he will make a helicopter flight to Niagara Falls to attend a nomination meeting, returning to Toronto to participate in the opening of the Canadian Opera season at O'Keefe Centre.

Mr. Davis opens the Brampton fall fair this Saturday, and attends a five-riding picnic at Oshawa in the afternoon.

He will board another helicopter Sunday to open the Grand Prix motor race at Mosport, near Toronto, and perform similar functions later in the afternoon for a horse show at Stratford.

His only public appearance Monday is at a nomination meeting in Peel Perry at 8 p.m.

Guard Riches --Nixon

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday that Ontario should move to "safeguard" its natural resources.

"We have to move to safeguard the resources that we have—recreational, forestry, fishing and mining," he told a news conference.

The Liberal leader, on the second day of the election campaign which he predicts will lead to his becoming premier Oct. 21, said he is "concerned with the amount of recreational land in the province now owned by the Americans."

Mr. Nixon said his own concern was manifested locally a few years ago when Americans were allowed to purchase 12 miles of shoreline in recreational areas north of Sault Ste. Marie.

He said the government "has to have the power of first appeal" on major recreational areas for sale.

"I believe we don't have sufficient access to the shoreline in the southern part of the province," Mr. Nixon said.

He said to get access the government would have to buy those lands.

Mr. Nixon reaffirmed his party's stand for an overall plan for Ontario encompassing the areas of recreation, forestry, industry and mining, but said this would probably take a plan of such scope at least five years might be needed to implement.

Mr. Nixon, who has been campaigning on the decentralization of provincial government authority, said : "It would be necessary to involve local people in all the provincial areas in such a plan."

He said he would be prepared to use "a freeze" in developments of areas, if necessary until a workable plan could be formulated.

French School Study Pledged

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Education Minister Robert Welch announced today a special commission will re-examine legislation providing for French language education with a view to resolving the complaints of Francophones at Sturgeon Falls, Ont.

The Sturgeon Falls secondary school has been beset by demonstrations since the new term started as French-language students and parents pressed demands for physically separate French- and English-language schools.

Mr. Welch issued a statement after meeting earlier in the week with student representatives and members of the Nipissing board of education.

"Examination of the various facts involved in this situation has led me to believe that there would be benefit in re-examining our general provisions for French language instruction, so that not only the issue in Sturgeon Falls might be resolved but also that problems of this kind might be avoided elsewhere in the future," Mr. Welch said.

He said he is establishing a ministerial commission under Dr. Thomas Symond, president of Trent University in Peterborough, "to make recommendations for the improvement of and clarification in the legislation where applicable."

The commission will consider briefs from school boards, interested groups and the general public. It is to report to Mr. Welch in three months.

Students Meet Nixon

NORTH BAY (CP) — About 60 chanting students from the striking Sturgeon Falls high school were on hand Wednesday to greet Liberal Leader Robert Nixon when he arrived for a news conference Wednesday.

The students emphasized they were not here to picket Mr. Nixon, just to bring their problem to his attention. He said he was in sympathy with them.

PCs Have 20-seat Edge Over Rivals in Planes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Progressive Conservatives have a sure 20-seat edge on their opponents for the Oct. 21 provincial election but the margin is in the air, not at the ballot box.

Ross DeGeer, an official in charge of Premier William Davis' tour, said Wednesday the party has leased a 48-seat Viscount turbo-prop for his five-week campaign that begins Tuesday with a rally in Belleville.

The Viscount is larger than the 28-seat DC-3s chartered by Opposition Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party.

The premier will also have more buses and advance men in the Tories' bid for re-election.

Meanwhile, in Timmins, Mr. Lewis called for full disclosure of election expenses and limits on campaign spending.

Mr. Lewis said the NDP central office will spend $228,000 and 117 riding organizations will spend about $400,000 in all.

Mr. DeGeer said a larger plane was necessary for Mr. Davis "because there's just so much interest in the campaign from the media this time."

Two buses and a car will always be waiting for the plane, which is too large to land at Ontario's smaller airports, he said. One bus, which has had several seats removed to accommodate tables and typewriters, will be used by the press. The other, containing a changing room, will be used by Mr. Davis and his staff.

Lewis Wants 150,000 New Houses

SUDBURY (CP) — A New Democratic Party government would make 150,000 housing starts in its first year in office leader Stephen Lewis said Wednesday night.

He told a news conference in this city, where the housing shortage is among the most acute in Ontario, that the NDP does not believe the Progressive Conservative government has sufficiently tapped money available from the Federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

CMHC provides 90 per cent of the mortgage money and the province supplies the remainder.

Mr. Lewis said an NDP government would also raise mortgage money by directing government capital works funds away from fancy office buildings and showplaces.

Retired To Work With Aged

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government plans to sponsor a new program using retired persons who are willing to work with the elderly on a volunteer basis, Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services announced Wednesday.

Plans for the Senior Volunteers in Service program were announced by Mr. Wells as he spoke to the annual dinner of the Ontario Associations of Homes for the Aged.

5 Communists To Seek Seats

TORONTO (CP) — The Communist party announced Wednesday it will enter five candidates in the Ontario election Oct. 21.

Three men will run in Metropolitan Toronto ridings—William Stewart in Davercourt, Jack Sweet in Yorkview and Elizabeth Hill in St. Andrew-St. Patrick.

Dan Stewart will run in a Hamilton riding and John Clout in Lincoln.

The party has not been represented in the Ontario legislature since 1955.

Ann Landers

Ann Recommends A Saliva Test

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The whole world is in one snell-of-a-hess. The only solution is to face up to the facts promptly, without emotion, for the good of all. Here are the rules which must be followed:

ANN LANDERS

1. Everybody over 50 — out. (Except the top 10 per cent of scientists, social workers, writers, musicians and doctors.) You can stay because you're in the top 10 per cent).

2. All criminals — major and minor — out.

3. All handicapped people — out. They would be better off and so would the world. The basic rule should be "only those who are contributing to the welfare of the world should be allowed to live."

4. No medical help for children under six years of age. In this way, only the strong would survive to perpetuate healthy offspring.

5. Bottom 10 per cent — lazy, stupid, etc — out.

6. Sterilize everybody after two children. (Nobody needs more. Some people don't need any.)

7. Abolish cars. We now know that most of the pollution comes from cars. Aside from the pollution menace, too many people have forgotten how to walk.

If these rules seem far out let me assure you that they are not. We are living in perilous times. Drastic measures are required or we are all finished. — ONE WHO WANTS THE GREATEST GOOD FOR THE LARGEST NUMBER.

DEAR ONE: Thank you for letting me know I can stay. And now, I'd like to ask one question. Who is going to define, "stupid, lazy, handicapped, major and minor criminals, writers and musicians?" As for you, have you considered a saliva test? I recommend it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I do not agree with you that "Nutty Al" is appropriately named. How do you figure it? He got his $400 back from the dentist who couldn't get the dentures to fit. And then he picked blindfolded, out of the telephone book, another dentist who made him a perfect set of dentures. He didn't even have to go back for even one adjustment. I wish I was half as smart. Here is what happened to me:

Last year I went to a very reputable dentist for a re-line job. He convinced me that I needed a new set of dentures. This man ruined my old set and the new teeth he made (for $425) fit like a saddle on a sow.

With the help of a nail file and some sandpaper I am managing to wear my old uppers. The lowers he made are O.K. for a few hours at a time, but there are many things I can't eat.

Please don't tell me to go to another dentist and start over again. I know I must do this but that bush in the back yard that grows $425 bills is not producing much this season. I hope you will print this letter. Maybe my dentist will see it and send me a peace offering. — GUMMING IT UP IN BOULDER.

DEAR GUMMM: Don't stand on one foot waiting for that "peace offering." And don't wait for that bush in the back yard, either. Find a dentist who will make you another set of choppers on the chew-now-pay-later plan. Dentistry is no do-it-yourself hobby. You need teeth that fit. And you need 'em now. Move already.

Parents Must Realize Element of Choice Say Social Workers

By DORIS CLARK

We sat and drank coffee and talked, six of us, all social workers. We talked about modern Canadian youth. About drugs. About hippies. About sex behavior.

We talked about the two kinds of social work that are emerging, and about courageous young social workers who are going where rebellious youth is, to do their thing. And while we bemoaned the far-out untrained do-gooders who barge in where angels fear to tread, we had to grant that the new morality took some re-thinking.

And I heard: "If Doris could just help us modernize the parents a little!" The youth counsellors realize that anyone who really cares can't just "stand over here and be away from them" — from the young people who are caught up in it. There is a struggle going on.

Many kids are turned off by the idea of "sex for sex' sake". Young people prefer to be labelled as with it — sensually; yet they cry out for some rules to go by — some reasons for taking, and keeping, possession of themselves. There is an element of choice: and this is what parents have to recognize.

It is a challenge to any parent to cope with the facts of life the way the youngsters are seeing and facts now; and to feed some arguments into the computer for responsibility, integrity, in social behavior. Enough to challenge anyone's value system!

Dear Doris: I'm lonely. At 19 I already have two children, and I live out in the sticks. I resent the way they tie me down.

There isn't the money for me to go anywhere or do anything. It is all tied up in a house and car that we are paying for. I'm bored with reading, jigsaw puzzles, house cleaning and all the rest.

My husband and his friends all have education and make money. I feel like a misfit. Luckily my parents taught me how to appear poised and confident; but inside — what a mess!

My husband says he understands my need to get out but that there's just no way we can afford it. When he is home he either has work to do or he is lost in a book. I guess he doesn't realize how I feel, but God knows I've tried to explain. — Homebound

Dear Homebound: at 19 you are feeling caught — and hopeless. But there have been people, who picked themselves up by their own bootstraps before this.

What would you think about getting a part-time job in a store, to work one or two evenings a week and perhaps all day Saturday? This would give you a challenging diversion and be more fun than you can imagine.

Your husband would be baby sitter — and have a rare opportunity to get to know his own children. If he really understands your need for change, he will help you swing it.

Show him this column.

Confidential to Cooling Off: Could it be that this contradictory husband of yours is discouraged with farming? At 50 he may be exhausted all the time and therefore impotent. No man wants to admit impotence and in this case he avoids the issue by saying he doesn't care any more.

Don't drag along unhappily from day to day. Have a consultation with your family doctor, and start along the road to better understanding and better health for both of you. You have been a long time married and you can build now for the next quarter century.

WEDDING

AITCHISON — BROTHERS

The wedding ceremony was performed at Fantasy Farm, Pottery Rd., Toronto, on Thursday, September 9, 1971 at 7.30 p.m., when Patricia Ann Brothers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Brothers, Toronto, was united in marriage to Alan Robert Aitchison, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Aitchison, Belleville.

Rev. E. Martin officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of ivory Swiss cotton featuring long full sleeves with tight cuffs at the wrists. A matching headband was caught to a shoulder-length veil and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations and roses.

Mrs. Carolyn Mackereth attended her sister wearing a floor-length pink Swiss cotton gown with short sleeves. A pink straw picture hat complemented her gown, and she carried a basket of white carnations and roses.

David Dunford attended the bridegroom.

The wedding reception was held in the Chalet Building at Fantasy Farm following the ceremony which was held outdoors on the terrace by the pool.

On return from the wedding trip to Eastern Canada, the couple will reside at 322 Eglinton Ave. E., Apt. 1701.

St. Andrew's Church Hall Resembles Museum for Annual Antique Show

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

St. Andrew's Church hall resembled a museum on Tuesday afternoon and evening when the Women's Guild presented its fifth annual antique sale and show from 1 to 10 p.m.

Eighteen dealers from Ontario and Quebec displayed their treasures from a bygone era. Silver, glassware and fine china from many stately homes of the past were displayed side by side with sturdy coppersware, old-fashioned kitchen gadgets, bottles and crocks which were every bit the pride and joy of some farm housewife.

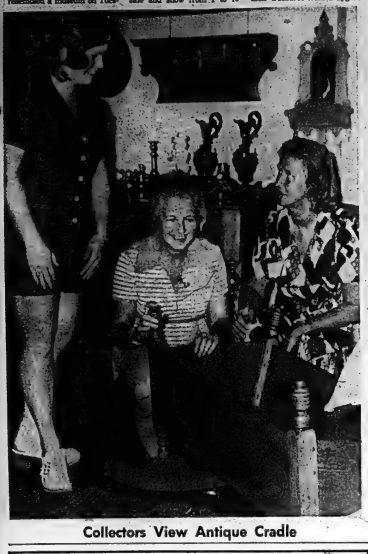
In the Kaye McFarland Antiques display, a number of realistic-looking wooden ducks used as decoys by hunters caught the eye, also an old ice cream mould made of heavy, solid tin.

Among Leeman's antiques, a number of salt shaker tops reproduced from the original dies were noticeable, also a 1750 brass clock. In another room which held contributions from McNish's Antiques, Canniffon and Cedar Hedge Farm Antiques, Melrose, there were a number of primitive kitchen gadgets including a vegetable drainer, several tin jelly moulds and a chopper. Of special interest was a pewter-sized flask used by women of a former generation to carry brandy — presumably for emergencies!

In the display set up by Farm House Antiques of Anteuil, Quebec, an old doll made of porcelain and wood with real hair was noteworthy, also some early Quebec maple sugar moulds in the shape of cocks and beavers and an early Quebec tobacco chopper which resembled a guillotine!

Voorneelde Antiques of Brockville showed among other things, an old butter churn which is thought to be about 85 or 90 years old. The Antique Shoppe of Belleville displayed among their wares, a small pot with a painting called "Cries of London" on the lid, used in the old days for carrying bear's grease which tamed unruly hair before the days of hairspray. There was also a gaudy Welsh spooner (used for holding spoons) and two carved Chinese ivory ornaments.

A small gasoline lantern used by skaters in the late 1800's was seen in the display set up by Magill's Antiques of Oshawa. A wooden spinning wheel used for making flax in the early 18th century was among the articles in Pull's Antiques, Bloomfield. Lamp shades of all shapes and sizes were seen in the display by Phillip's Lamp Shades, Toronto.



Oakbank Farm Antiques of Codrington showed a china piece depicting the old County Court House in Belleville, which most residents of the city would not even remember. Carruther's Antiques of Belleville showed a number of pine furniture pieces. Several copper kettles gleamed on one of the display tables set up by Edward's Attic Antiques of Buttonville while Ontario Cottage Antiques of Millbrook proudly showed off a very rare amber Canadian lamp.

Glass and china pieces dominated the display by House of Charles Antiques, Colborne while Halloway Antiques showed a Communion set used in an old church. This consisted of tiny wine glasses arranged on a wooden base. They also had an old - fashioned travelling desk inlaid with mother - of - pearl.

Upper Canada Antiques of Winchester showed several pieces of silver, china and glassware while Bridge House Antiques of Prescott specialized in glass and fine furniture. Several cranberry glass pieces were eyecatching here, also a dessert set made of opalescent milk glass.

For those who wished to do some reading on the fascinating subject of antiques, the Village Book Store of Toronto had a variety of books at the entrance to the show.

The sale and show was continued Wednesday from 1 to 10 p.m. Tea and refreshments were served in the tea room.

Peach Cobbler Quick to Prepare

By MARY MOORE

Leafing through Mrs. Gillespie's handwritten cookbook for an idea for a seasonal dessert I found her Peach Cobbler. We had the peaches on hand and needed a dessert that did not take too much time to prepare so went to work. Her daughter Iris peeled and sliced the peaches while I beat up the batter in the electric beater.

MRS. GILLESPIE'S PEACH COBBLER

(serves 6)

Filling:
6 med. peaches peeled and sliced
3-3 cup sugar
½ tsp. nutmeg
Batter:
½ cup oil or melted shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup stirred but unsifted cake and pastry flour
2 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1-3 cup milk.

Prepare the peaches first and slice into buttered med. baking dish. Sprinkle with the 2-3 cup sugar and the nutmeg and put them in the oven to warm them through while you mix the batter. (Note: This step may puzzle you but it is done to have a hot base instead of a cold base on which to pour the batter so it will start baking more quickly.)

To make the Batter, into the beater bowl measure the oil (or melted shortening) and the ¼ cup sugar and beat together until light. Beat in egg. Lift beaters. Add flour, baking powder, salt and milk. Lower beaters and beat on "low" until barely mixed scraping down sides of bowl with rubber scraper once. Pour evenly over heated peaches. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 35-40 min. But before removing from oven, with a pointed knife cut and lift a 1" triangle from centre to be sure batter is cooked through. Serve with hono or ice cream or whipped cream or topping. This was declared an all round success.

Dinner Menus

MR. AND MRS. DAVID LESLIE HOUSE

House – Stevens

Westminster United Church was the setting for the August 28 wedding of Sherry Doreen Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lester Stevens of RR 5 Belleville, and David Leslie House, son of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Leslie House of RR 1 Corbyville, Rev. John Bunney conducted the ceremony, while Miss Lynn Johnston played the organ.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown, styled along empire lines of silk chiffon over nylon taffeta, highlighted with Alencon lace trim and featuring a mandarin collar and long full sleeves, cuffed with Alencon lace. A four tiered veil of scalloped silk illusion fell from a cluster of Alencon lace and a cathedral train extended from the back waistline. She carried a bouquet of mixed wild flowers.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Linda Kerruish along with the bridesmaids, Miss Dawn Stevens, sister of the bride, Miss Janice Ansell, Miss Cathy Royes, Mrs. Janet Stock and Miss Maureen Bridge wore yellow and white floral print dresses in midlength over hoops, with short puffed sleeves and lace trimmed midriff. All wore large picture hats trimmed with yellow daisies and carried baskets filled with matching flowers.

Michael O'Brien attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Harry Smith, Bill McMullen, Doug McGregor, Dennis Kerruish and John Stevens, brother of the bride. The ring bearer was John House, brother of the bridegroom.

A garden reception was held on the grounds of the bride's parents' home. The bride's mother received the guests wearing an oyster silk shantung dress with a matching dress and coat of crimolines with a corsage of pink rosebuds completed her ensemble.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother wearing a matching jacket. Matching accessories with a corsage of pink rosebuds completed her ensemble.

For the wedding trip to points north, the bride wore a hooded brown and orange hot pants ensemble with a single yellow rose corsage.

Upon return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. D. House will reside at 2300 Marine Drive in Oakville.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH SCHAMERHORN

Schamerhorn – Amos

Linda-Mary Amos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Amos became the bride of Joseph William Schamerhorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Schamerhorn on September 3, at St. Mark's United Church, Canniton. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. J. Morrison and Rev. E. Schamerhorn, while Mrs. B Farnham provided organ music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by Mr. Ron Schamerhorn, the bride wore a floor length gown with a lace bodice and draped A line skirt, flowing into a chapel length train. A roll collar, long lily point sleeves and a large self-bow at the back of the waistline accented the bodice. Her headpiece was a two tiered crown with guipure lace and petals of peau - de - soie. Attached to it was a shoulder length three tiered nylon illusion scalloped veil. She carried a nosegay of white and purple 'mums.

The maid of honor Miss Linda Carter wore a pale mauve chiffon floor length gown of voile over taffeta. A narrow band of dark mauve enhanced the "empire waistline while her hair was adorned with purple flowers. She carried a nosegay of yellow 'mums.

The bridegroom was attended by his cousin Robert McGregor as best man.

The reception was held at the Sergeants' Mess, Belleville Armories.

The bridegroom's mother wore a pink street length dress of chiffon over taffeta for the occasion. It was trimmed with silver sequins and complemented by cream colored accessories and a corsage of yellow tea roses.

For the wedding trip the couple travelled to Thousand Islands by motorcycle. For her going - away outfit the bride chose a navy blue pant suit. Upon return they will reside at 65 West Street, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of ethereal white extending to the floor in a full sweep. The yoke, high collar and full gathered sleeves were made of a sheer coin - dotted fabric which was set off by an underlay of pale blue taffeta over the rest of the bodice and full skirt. A sash of pale blue gros grain ribbon adorned the high waist. A waist length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a cluster of hand made flowers interspersed with loops of blue ribbon. She carried a bouquet of pale pink sweetheart roses, blue dried flowers, baby's breath, stephanotis and white ribbon.

The maid of honor was Miss Angela Mearns while the bridesmaids were Mrs. Carol Grosjean, Miss Kathy Taylor and Miss Judy Mason sister of the bridegroom. All the bridal attendants were dressed in floor length gowns of batiste with white bodices and skirts of royal blue and white print. All featured wide notched collars and buttons down to the waist. Sashes and bows of royal blue satin adorned the bodices. They carried bouquets of deep pink miniature roses, blue dried flowers and trailing ribbon.

The best man was James Worrell while the ushers were Kimball Scott the bride's brother, Alan Aldridge and James Grosjean.

Club Activities

PRINCE EDWARD — BELLEVILLE LADIES CLUB

Following a two - month summer recess, the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies Club met for the first meeting of the season at the Recreation Centre last week.

President Mrs. F. Henderson opened the meeting and expressed pleasure at seeing so many in attendance, after which she read an appropriate clipping on the swift passing of summer.

Mrs. A. Mitchell read the minutes and reported on various trips made during the summer. Treasurer Mrs. L. Fox gave the financial report. It was noted that a bus trip to Napanee was scheduled for October 18 with the bus to leave the Recreation Centre at 2 p.m.

Mrs. F. Bedell, Mrs. L. Sharpe and Mrs. C. Wood and group were in charge of the program which opened with community singing followed by readings by Mrs. C. Wood and Mrs. E. Wells.

Mrs. Bedell introduced Mrs. Kenneth Bush instructor in liquid embroidering, who showed many articles including table cloths, cushion tops, dresser scarves, Christmas decor and wall panels. She also instructed each of the members with the paintings on book marks which was most interesting.

Thanks was expressed and a gift presented.

Lunch was served by the group in charge and a social time was spent.

Santa Claus Is Being Sabotaged by Uncle Sam at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The dock strike on the U.S. West Coast, dragging on from its summertime beginnings, is sabotaging Santa Claus in Canada.

Quite simply, the 76-day lineup of Pacific ports from San Diego to Seattle means that business is booming beyond control in the port of Vancouver, to the dismay of Canadian importers.

With the flood of ships diverted to Vancouver because of the July 1 U.S. longshoremen's strike—tripling the load on port facilities here— goods from the Orient moving east by rail are being subjected to delays of up to six weeks.

"There are Christmas goods that will never see a Christmas tree," says Stan Garrod, president of the British Columbia Wharf Operators Association.

An Edmonton textile firm has announced 139 workers are being laid off because 300 cases of raw fabric from Japan are sitting at the bottom of the hold of a ship in English Bay.

Department stores across Canada are worried about future inventories, particularly retailers attempting to stock their shelves for Christmas.

"We're talking now of six-week delays," says Ian Mardock, west coast director of the Canadian Importers Association. "Some of our firms are very close to bankruptcy."

Eldon Industries of Toronto, which imports Japanese and Hong Kong toys through Vancouver, said that normally at this time it is at its pre-Christmas peak but now is a month behind.

Mr. Mardock places much of the blame on the national harbors board and the wharf operators and accuses them of not protecting their regular customers.

He says: "We have been trying to get an embargo on American cargo but they (the harbors board) won't act."

But acting port manager Bill Duncan says an embargo "would really close the port down because we could not get ships discharged to take away Canadian exports."

The wharf operators insist they are doing all they can while the importers insist they could do a lot more.

Mr. Duncan said the rules have been applied as strictly as possible, although the deliberate burying of Canadian goods has happened.

New Appeal Is Drafted

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Importers Association, at a special meeting Wednesday, drafted a new appeal to federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson to embargo United States goods at the port of Vancouver. The 648-member association contends that U.S. importers, hit by a strike by longshoremen at all but one West Coast port, have "grabbed up" all shipping space at Vancouver.

This will be the second petition to Mr. Jamieson, asking that U.S. goods be blocked from entering the port.

The strike at U.S. ports began July 1. The importers said incoming ships from Asian ports have goods destined for the U.S. loaded on top, and consequently must be unloaded ahead of merchandise bound for Canadian cities.

Yanks Win Own Titles

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — The 1971 United States open tennis championships now belongs to two American veterans — the first time in 18 years that both titles have stayed at home.

Stan Smith, a 26-year-old U.S. Army private from Pasadena, Calif. took his first open title and the $20,000 first prize Wednesday with a 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 victory over Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia. Billie Jean King, the firecracker daughter from Long Beach, Calif., won her second with a 6-4, 7-6 triumph over Rosemary Casals of San Francisco.

The last Americans to win both titles were Tony Trabert and Doris Hart in 1955.

It was the 27-year-old Mrs. King's game all the way but Smith had to fight back to overcome the Czechoslovak Davis Cup player, who had won the first set.

"I had to change my strategy after the first set," said Smith. "Jan was knocking the ball off right and left, so I decided to serve slower. It seemed to help in the second and the third sets immensely."

For Mrs. King, who won here in 1967, it was her ninth finals victory in 10 attempts this year against Miss Casals. She won $7,500 for her effort.

Ouch!

Billie Jean King grimaced after losing a point to Rosemary Casals in the women's singles finals Wednesday at Forest Hills. Miss King went on to win the game, breaking a 6-6 tie, to become women's singles champion of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Parent Needs Philadelphia Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — It may take a Philadelphia lawyer to solve the dispute between Toronto Maple Leafs and goaltender Bernie Parent.

Stanley Cup champion of Philadelphia says his client has no contract with the National Hockey League club, although Leafs' general manager Jim Gregory and NHL president Clarence Campbell disagree.

Parent has been absent from training camp since it opened six days ago.

Parent was on the second year of a three-year contract when he was traded to Toronto by Philadelphia Flyers last season.

"In my opinion he does not have a third year of a contract," Casper said Wednesday night. "We feel the contract has been rescinded.

"I can't say why it has been rescinded. Certain confidences can't be revealed."

Casper may have formed this opinion from a promise Leafs made to Parent last season to offer him a new contract this year.

Casper's viewpoint that Parent is not on an existing contract is described by the NHL president as "a piece of nonsense."

Parent's lawyer says the

BERNIE PARENT

goalie will accept either a one or two-year contract.

Campbell outlined the situation by telephone from Montreal Wednesday night.

"When Parent was traded to the Leafs he indicated his desire to have an improved contract. The Toronto club offered to accommodate him. They made an offer and he said he'd think it over.

"And he's been thinking it over ever since. Now his lawyer makes the position that this means he is not on an existing contract. Which is a piece of nonsense."

OSHAWA (CP) — California Golden Seals announced from their National Hockey League training camp Wednesday that defenceman Carol Vadnais has been named team captain. Alternate captains named were Bert Marshall, Tom Williams and Wayne Carleton.

* * *

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League have signed left winger Craig Ramsey, their No. 2 amateur draft choice.

Ramsey, 20, played with the Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. He scored 36 goals and collected 76 assists.

East Retains Lacrosse Edge

BRANTFORD (CP) — A strong third period boosted Brantford Warriors to a 10-6 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Mann Cup Canadian lacrosse final Wednesday night.

Defending-champion Salmonbellies have a chance to get back into contention when the series resumes tonight.

* * *

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Windsor Warlocks scored four unanswered goals in the third period to defeat Burnaby Kokanee's 11-9 Wednesday night and take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Canadian Senior B lacrosse finals.

The Warlocks, who are defending Canadian champions, won easily in the series opener, 21-10, but trailed 9-8 midway in the second period of Wednesday's game.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Richmond Roadrunners defeated Peterborough PCOs 18-6 Wednesday night to take a 2-0 lead in the Minto Cup Canadian Junior lacrosse final series.

Richmond led 4-3 after the first period, although outplayed by the Peterborough team. Saved by the goal-tending of Ted Gernasy, the Roadrunners went on to run up a six-goal lead in the second.

Gernasy had to stop only 27 shots in the game, but 15 of them came in the first period.

Padres Stall Dodgers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There won't be any playoff or World Series money for San Diego's Dave Roberts but the Padres' tough left-hander looms as a big man in the National League West pennant race.

Roberts pitched San Diego a 2-1 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night, keeping the Dodgers a game back of the West-leading San Francisco Giants, who lost 4-2 to Cincinnati Reds.

And he did it a day ahead of schedule.

Manager Preston Gomez moved Roberts up a day in his pitching rotation so that his ace lefty will be able to pitch twice in the six games the Padres have left with the Giants.

Roberts' record is only 13-15 but it's with a club that has a 56-93 mark — and his 1.82 earned-run average is second only to New York's Tom Seaver among NL starters.

While the West race remained unchanged, Pittsburgh Pirates took a big step toward the East flag by beating St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 and opening up an 8-game bulge over the second place Cardinals.

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago Cubs sweat New York Mets 8-2 and 3-2, Atlanta Braves topped Houston Astros 4-2 and Montreal Expos edged Philadelphia Phillies 1-0.

"It's no disgrace losing to a guy like him," Los Angeles manager Walt Alston said after Roberts scattered eight hits and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the third inning to snap the Dodgers' winning streak at eight games.

The Padres, beating the Dodgers for only the fourth time in 17 meetings, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Leron Lee and Larry Stahl singled and Lee scored when pitcher Don Sutton threw wild after fielding a bunt.

Stahl homered in the sixth after the Dodgers had tied it in the second on Sutton's RBI infield single.

Pete Rose's run-scoring triple and Lee May's RBI single in the fifth snapped a 1-1 tie and sent the Giants to their third straight loss and 10th in 11 games. The Reds' Jim McGlothlin held the stumbling Giants to six hits, including homers by Willie McCovey and Dick Dietz.

Pittsburgh's Dock Ellis, pitching for the first time in two weeks because of elbow trouble, worked seven innings to run his record to 19-7. Most of his offensive help came in the fourth on Dave Cash's RBI single and Al Oliver's two-run homer.

Hank Aaron's 14th homer in the last 24 games — his 44th of the season and 639th of his career — and Phil Niekro's four-hit pitching highlighted Atlanta's victory over Houston.

Montreal's victory came on the four-hit pitching of Ernie McAnally and Bobby Wine's sacrifice fly following a three-base error by Philadelphia second-baseman Denny Doyle in the eighth inning. The Phillies' Woody Fryman pitched a six-hitter.

Flag First in 40 Years

"Nice little hit there, bud," Charles O. Finley said with a smile, patting Sal Bando on the back.

The hit was anything but little, though, it was big in distance — a two-run homer in the eighth inning — and big in meaning, powering Oakland Athletics to a 3-2 victory over Chicago White Sox Wednesday to give the Athletics the American League West championship.

Actually, Bando didn't give it to them, Kansas City did.

The runner-up Royals, by winning against California, would have held on to a mathematical chance of tying Oakland for the flag particularly after the Athletics lost 7-3 to the White Sox in the second half of their twi-night doubleheader.

But the Royals eliminated themselves from contention while Oakland were halfway through its second game, losing 6-3 to the Angels and giving the Athletics their first title since 1931 when Connie Mack piloted the Philadelphia Athletics to the American League pennant.

"Just winning it, getting it all over with, was a big relief to all of us," Bando said after his blast, which followed Reggie Jackson's double.

"We were trying too hard and not scoring any runs lately," Bando said. The Athletics had lost seven of their previous 12 games. "We were spinning our wheels and standing still."

With 13 games still to go before the Athletics enter the American League playoffs — presumably against Baltimore — Bando said there are two ways of looking at the rest of the season.

"First, it's true we may not stay real sharp mentally. But secondly, it gives us a lot of time to rest up and get our pitching primed and ready."

Jackson threw manager Dick Williams into a shower after the twin-bill then went after Finley, the Athletics' flamboyant owner who bought the club in 1961 and moved them from Kansas City to Oakland in 1968.

But Finley stopped his young outfielder with the remark: "Let's wait'll we win everything — then you can do what you want."

In other American League action, New York Yankees beat Baltimore Orioles 4-2, Boston Red Sox edged Cleveland Indians 8-5, Detroit Tigers topped Washington Senators 4-2 and Minnesota Twins squeezed by Milwaukee Brewers 1-0.

Denny McLain, a 21-game winner with Detroit three years ago before being traded to Washington, became the major league's first 20-game loser this season as his former Tiger team-mates rode homers by Aurelio Rodriguez and Jim Northrup to their triumph over the Senators.

BENDING RULES can't be criticized, when it's for a worthy cause. That must be understood before one can discuss Saturday's Rotary Club softball tournament at the Alemite.

The worthy cause is the Canadian Olympic Association, which District 707 of Rotary International has adopted as a worthy recipient of fundraising projects by its 52 member chapters.

Safety is one reason for slight alterations in normal softball regulations: no players in Saturday's four - team tournament will be permitted to wear spikes.

Expedience is another. A team will not be permitted to send more than nine batters to the plate per inning, presumably to assure that games will be longer than one inning in duration. They are supposed to last five, except in the case of ties.

Trenton and Belleville Rotarians are scheduled to launch the series at 1:30 Saturday at the Alemite, with Cobourg and Picton Rotarians meeting at 3:30. From there the scene shifts to Harry Burns Stadium where Barbecues meet the Cocktails, before the 7:30 championship game back at the Alemite. The general public is invited to attend all games except the Burns park affair.

Losers of the afternoon games will donate $200 to the Canadian Olympic Association. The losing team in the championship game makes a $100 donation, while the winners get off with a $50 contribution. Belleville RotaKlans have offered to double their allocation.

PRICE MORRIS, Canadian and Ontario senior heavyweight weightlifting champion, and Commonwealth and Pan-American Games bronze medallist, will toss out the ceremonial first ball for the tourney. The Frankford strongman who competes for Belleville's Apollo Barbell Club, is an apt choice: he will be a recipient of the tourney proceeds if he qualifies as a member of Canada's team to the 1972 Munich Olympic Games.

Horse field makes the Belleville squad odds-on favorites to capture the title, although they haven't quite settled on their starting lineup.

"No, we haven't picked our pitcher yet," explained games committee chairman Glynn Reynolds. "Not until we have our first practice."

JOHN MULVIHILL made a good run at cracking the Peterborough Petes' OHA Junior A lineup before being named in the club's final cut Wednesday. The Belleville 17-year-old was one of a dozen defencemen in the Petes' camp, including three holdovers from last year's pennant-winning Petes and a number of graduates from the Canada Games champion Peterborough Lions B's.

Mulvihill scored twice in a Tuesday intersquad game, but was also responsible for a successful penalty shot against him by the club's leading down an opposing forward on a breakaway.

Last year's captain of Belleville's Eastern Ontario League Fairways will be a welcome sight back at the local Junior B camp. Mulvihill won the club's rookie award in 1970, and the team's most gentlemanly player honors last season while finishing as the league's second highest point-producing defenceman with eight goals, 25 assists.

OAKLAND SEALS still have three Belleville hockey products working out with their Columbus Jets' International League affiliate at Oshawa. Tom Jury was reported to be the stingiest goalie in Columbus intersquad games, while defencemen Greg Burkett and Mike Healey will know their fate when the first cuts are made from the 44-player turnout this weekend.

CAM WANNAMAKER is finding pacer Easy Jim a bargain at $15,000. The Connecton harness stable owner claimed the six-year-old Dec. 18 at Windsor Raceway. To date in 1971, Easy Jim has a record of 4-9-7 in 38 starts and has earned $6,840. Driver-trainer Rejean Roily is currently running Easy Jim at Vernon Downs, N.Y.

Hockey Poor Get Help

The Quinte Hockey League is hoping to introduce a system this season whereby the rich stay rich, but the poor get richer.

The league is hoping to equalize player talent throughout the four-team set-up by introducing a "draft system for players with OMA experience. Under the system any OHA player who has not been active for the past two years will be eligible to play in the Quinte League.

Last year's fourth - place finishing D C A Transfer (Reid's Dairy this season) will be able to choose four players from common pool. Stinson's will get three choices by virtue of their third-place finish while Central Taxi can pick a pair of draft choices and league champion Belvedere Hotel one.

Another innovation this season is that Junior - age players who don't compete in OHA play will be able to join one of the Quinte Hockey League squads.

The league will operate an 18-game schedule having received ice time Thursday nights at the Belleville Memorial Arena between 8:15-11:54 p.m.

The deadline for entries will coincide with the next organizational meeting to be held Monday, Sept. 27 at the Memorial Arena beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Players interested in competing in the league are asked to call one of the following coaches Bill Vesterfelt, 962-6537 (Belvedere);— Paul Stinson, 968-7418 (Stinsons); Bill Carson, 968-8781 (Central Taxi) or Paul Zelton, 968-4447 (Reid's, Dairy).

Quinte Soccer Plagued by Dropouts

Player shortages have plagued Cup play in the Quinte Soccer League this season with a number of teams being forced to drop out of postseason action.

In the battle for the Belleville Charity Cup, Parsons and Wartworth were forced to drop out giving Bata and Whitley Insurance byes into the second round.

In opening games league champion Quinte Transport blanked the Belleville Falcons 3-0, while Belleville United turned in an identical score over CFB Trenton.

In the only game of the semi-finals to date, Quinte Transport edged Whitley Insurance 3-1. The next semi-final bout is slated for Zwick's Island Sunday at 2 p.m. with Belleville United meeting Bata Braves.

Three teams were unable to compete in the Trenton Challenge Cup round as the Falcons joined Parsons and Wartworth on the sidelines.

CFB Trenton, Whitley Insurance and Bata Braves all received byes into the semi-finals, while in an opening round game Quinte Transport and United played to a 2-2 tie. The game will be re-played at a later date.

Cosy Gals Apply Heat to Weese's

Cosy Grill kept the best on Weese's Flowers with a 5-3 victory last night. The win gives Cosy a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Women's Softball final series.

The winners tallied all their runs in the first two innings, while Cosy pitcher Sandra Claus blanked the league pennant winners for the first four frames. Claus finished with a six-hitter, fanning eight batters and yielding one walk.

Nora Barberstock started for Weese's giving way to Donna Barberstock in the sixth inning. Between them they were touched for 11 hits, while recording one strikeout and not walking a batter.

Marg Reid paced the winners with a homer and triple, while Sheila Ray and Sandra Claus had two hits each. For the losers it was Nora Barberstock and Donna Brant each with a pair of safeties.

Voyageurs Easy Winners

Dickens Voyageurs left little doubt as to who would be this season's Thurlow-Sidney Softball champions, hammering out a 17-6 decision over Crookston to win the final series four games to one.

Norman Lockhart survived 11 hits to record the win, getting one inning of bliless relief from Ralph Sine. For Crookston, Larry Barnard took the loss facing a salvo of 15 hits by the league champs.

Errol Johnston paced the winners with a four-for-four batting performance. Don Bowry added three hits to the attack with Glen Wilman, Bob Ellis, Bill Genereaux and Lockhart getting two hits each. For the losers, Barnard rapped out four hits.

Brakemen All Even

The Belleville Conductors and Brakemen pennant race remained tied at end of their Eastern Ontario Baseball Association final series with Cobourg as they bounced back to take an 8-5 victory to even the count at one game apiece.

Peter Hall birled six-hit ball for Belleville, setting down eight men on strikes and allowing five walks.

Simon Bennett wielded the big bat for the Trainmen with a double and single, while Paul Weeks and Scott Bowers were good for two singles each.

Wrong Team Celebrates Spavital's Birthday

CALGARY (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers threw a party for coach Jim Spavital's 40th birthday Wednesday night—but Calgary Stampeders did the celebrating.

The Bombers blew their chances with six interceptions and injured quarterback Jerry Keeling who came off the Calgary bench early in the second quarter, took advantage of the mistakes for a 20-7 victory which extended the Stampeders' first-place margin to eight points.

Keeling, a right-handed thrower, was expected to be used sparingly because of a heavily-padded left hand covering fractured fingers and stretched tendons. But the 11-year veteran took over with Calgary trailing 7-0 when rookie Jim Lindsey ran into trouble against a determined Winnipeg defence, headed by middle linebacker Mickey Doyle.

Place-kicker Larry Robinson started the Stampeders, now with an 8-1 record, on the comeback trail when he recovered a fumble by Paul Maricle on Winnipeg's 32, a few plays after Keeling came in.

Two plays later, Keeling combined with halfback Rudy Linterman on a 35-yard pass-and-run play for Calgary's first touchdown.

Fullback Hugh McKinnis got the other Calgary touchdown on a two-yard plunge, also in the second quarter when the Stampeders scored 16 unanswered points.

Robinson, who caught the interceptions given up by Winnipeg quarterback Don Jonas, added two converts and a pair of singles off wide field goal attempts.

The remaining Calgary points came on two safeties, given up by Winnipeg punter Jim Thorpe with the Bombers bemmed in their half of the field.

The Bombers, winless in Calgary since the 1965 playoffs, got six points when Ed Williams sprinted up the middle on a 30-yard run. Jones converted.

Calgary coach Jim Donlen surprised all when he inserted Keeling into the lineup.

"I knew he was going to play . . . I just wanted to wait for the right moment. . . . He looked great during the pre-game warmup and was throwing the ball with authority."

Keeling completed 15 of 26 passes for 213 yards while Jones was good on 17 of 46 for 221 yards. Besides Robinson's interceptions, Jones also had passes picked off by Frank Andrunski, Howard Starks, Joe Parsons and Jim Furlong.

Robinson and Andrunski each has six interceptions this year, best in the Canadian Football League.

The setback left the Bombers in a second-place tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders, each with eight points. However, Winnipeg has six defeats in 10 games compared with Saskatchewan's 4-4 record.

Football Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — City council voted Wednesday to hold a plebiscite on whether Toronto should have a multi-million-dollar sports stadium.

Council, which voted 13 to 4 for the plebiscite, did not decide when it would be held. It would be held only if a suitable site and other plans were approved.

Tuesday night, Ald. David Rotenberg said Metropolitan Toronto could have a $45-million domed stadium in time for the 1974 Grey Cup football game and the start of the 1975 baseball season.

Mr. Rotenberg is chairman of a special committee which recommends a federal grant of 50 per cent of the stadium's construction costs. The Ontario government would pay 30 per cent and Metro 20 per cent.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference announced the release of lineman Jim White Wednesday.

At the same time the Lions announced that defensive end Pete Newell has been activated to the roster following a five-day trial. Newell, six-foot-three and 230 pounds, played last season at the University of Michigan and was drafted fifth by Detroit Lions of the National Football League.

B.C. quarterback Tom Wilkinson underwent surgery Tuesday night and has been again placed on the club's injury reserve list. He received a knee injury last month in Sunday's game against Calgary Stampeders after spending 45 days on the injury list.

Head coach Eagle Keys expects to give the starting assignment to rookie quarterback Don Moorhead in this Sunday's game in Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers.

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Ray Jauch is cleaning house and Edmonton Eskimos will have a bunch of new faces in the lineup when they meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in a Western Football Conference game Saturday night.

Jauch's latest move to get Eskimos on the winning track came Wednesday with the release of quarterback Don Trull, who was unable to snap Edmonton out of a losing habit in his second WFC season.

Tuesday, Jauch released defensive halfback Ted Page, offensive halfback Al Namanny and offensive lineman Keith Christiansen.

Jauch's bid to reverse Eskimo fortunes includes wide receiver Bobby Taylor, obtained from Hamilton Tiger-Cats, he also picked up Gene Moore from Hamilton, in exchange for Tuture considerations."

Instant Replay Possible In National Conference

NEW YORK (AP) — With Washington's dreams of glory as broken as Jerry Jurgensen's arm, the Los Angeles roster a patchwork quilt and Detroit's waning strength, 1971 appears likely to prove an instant replay of 1970 in the National Football Conference.

George Allen, who brought a flock of his Rams to Washington and traded away future draft choices to stock the Redskins with proven talent, will be without Jurgensen, his No. 1 weapon, for perhaps half the season, which all but guarantees Dallas Cowboys another Eastern Division championship.

The Rams, under new coach Tommy Prothro from the collegiate ranks at UCLA, have been inconsistent at best—despite a pre-season victory over San Francisco 49ers—and that opens the door to another Western title grab by the 49ers.

And Minnesota—well, the Vikings are, simply, the Vikings standing deep in talent just about everywhere they should breeze to the Central crown while Detroit's Lions, their only challenger last season, fade into the rest of the pack.

Here's how the races look from here:

Eastern Division: 1. Dallas, 2. St. Louis Cardinals, 3. Washington, 4. Philadelphia Eagles, 5. New York Giants.

Central Division: 1. Minnesota, 2. Detroit, 3. Green Bay Packers, 4. Chicago Bears.

Western Division: 1. San Francisco, 2. Los Angeles, 3. Atlanta Falcons, 4. New Orleans Saints.

Give Craig Morton or Roger Staubach the ball for the Cowboys and, with the wealth of talent they'll be quarterbacking and the lack of talent they'll be facing most of the year, Dallas shouldn't even have to look back.

St. Louis, whose inconsistent offence fell on its face through the final month of the 1970 season, will again fall short although new coach Bob Hollway could bring a steadiness to the Cardinals.

Jurgensen will likely come passing to the rescue for the Redskins, not in time to make the revamped club a serious threat but early enough to keep them away from the cellar battle Philadelphia and New York are expected to wage.

The Eagles, who failed to win a pre-season game a year ago and continued ailing most the way in regular play, have pulled a reverse in this season's exhibitions while the Giants have hit the skids—and that's how the bottom of the Eastern pack should finish.

The Vikings' staunch offensive line will have Norm Snead as well as Gary Cuozzo well protected and will again be opening gaping holes for the thundering running game that will have Minnesota running away early.

A porous pass defence and an inconsistent running game will probably keep Detroit well out of solid contention but the Lions are still a long way from falling into the basement scuffle between Green Bay and Chicago.

The Packers, with old Zeke Bratowski and young Scott Hunter vying for the quarterback slot in place of injured Bart Starr, won't be scoring much—but at least they'll have a bit more balance than the Bears.

The 49ers are so well-stocked in talent that Dick Nolan will go with a virtually unchanged squad—unchanged except for maturity. John Brodie will once again be bringing it all together.

It could take quite a few games for the Rams to put their game together and they'll have some trouble keeping ahead of Atlanta's defence-minded Falcons. It'll take more than New Orleans' No. 1 pick, flashy quarterback Archie Manning, a spate of rookies and coach J. D. Roberts starting his first NFL season, to get the Saints going this season.

Dolphins Stand Chance Of Unseating Colts

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Griese is arriving and Earl Morall and Johnny Unitas are going, and on that basis Miami Dolphins stand a strong chance of unseating the defending Super Bowl champion Baltimore Colts in the Eastern Division of the American Football Conference.

The Dolphins, with Bob Griese a mature and consistent quarterback, should edge out the Colts, with the aging Morrall and Unitas in the key position and the latter's effectiveness still questionable because of a severe leg injury suffered during the off-season.

In the other two races, it appears that Cincinnati Bengals should be able to successfully defend their Central Division title against the stronger Houston Oilers and Pittsburgh Steelers and Kansas City Chiefs should be able to take over again in the Western Division from defending champion Oakland Raiders.

Here's the way the races could wind up:

Eastern Division: 1. Miami, 2. Baltimore, 3. New York Jets, 4. Buffalo Bills; 5. New England Patriots;

Central Division: 1. Cincinnati, 2. Houston, 3. Pittsburgh, 4. Cleveland Browns;

Western Division: 1. Kansas City, 2. Oakland, 3. San Diego Chargers, 4. Denver Bronco.

100th Birthday Party A Time to Reminisce

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — A witty, coquette, Mark Dunkley Tuesday accepted one perfect rose from Picton deputy reeve Jamet Bird then joked that she was planning to run away with the husband of a girlhood friend.

Friends agreed to pardon her fickleness since Miss Dunkley, celebrating her 100th birthday at Rest Haven Nursing Home, naturally, was excited.

The silver haired woman, who earned a reputation as one of Prince Edward County's most respected schoolteachers, Tuesday greeted dozens of former pupils who visited her to extend birthday greetings. —

Miss Dunkley taught elementary school classes for 47 years and became a legendary figure at the former Mary Street School, Picton.

She instilled the three R's with enthusiasm and dedication reflected in the reminiscences of former students who attended an open house birthday party held in her honor at Rest Haven.—

Miss Dunkley received her guests in the sitting room of the nursing home, fragrant with bouquets of red roses and chrysanthemums sent by relatives and friends.

The birthday girl wore a bright blue dressing gown for this special occasion and proudly clutched a nosegay of flowers.

"Do you remember me, Mary?", seemed to be the question each visitor asked first as he or she shook hands with the petite teacher.

Few were disappointed, for Miss Dunkley recalled her pupils with amusing anecdotes and memories, sometimes embarrassing, of their grades.

She remembered Leon Hudgin had been the student who had once chosen to bicycle to her Maple Avenue home each morning to take her spaniel dog for a brief run.

Mr. Hudgin chuckled at this recollection and offered a few of his own, including memories of an active Miss Dunkley who once skied and canoed with her pupils.

Mrs. Bert Tully reminded Miss Dunkley of the golf games they once played at Picton golf course.

The teacher nodded in agreement then add: "I...i going to run away with your husband someday."

Both women laughed as they spoke of "the good old days."

Miss Dunkley, who still speaks clearly with perfect grammar, insisted she was "a cross teacher."

"Those of her students present yesterday disagreed with this adjective as they recalled her interest in their studies.

"I had no trouble in keeping order," asserted Miss Dunkley.

"They wouldn't dare do anything when I was teaching or I would stop if they began to get unruly, 'stand still and just look at them. They used to say I would look as if I could stare holes through them," she asserted.

The strap was not used in Miss Dunkley's class to keep order.

"The best way to teach a boy arithmetic is to give him some money," she remarked.

"He'll spend some, keep the rest and learn how to make more," observed the retired teacher.

She noted many of her pupils used to visit her home after classes for extra help in their weaker subjects.

An excellent conversationalist, Miss Dunkley was often asked by neighbors, for help in sewing or subjects she once taught.

She was very different then than teaching is now for we even had to teach gardening and kept a large school garden," she commented.

Mary Dunkley's 100th birthday was remembered by "her children" who so long ago took seats in her classroom to learn their ABCs.

A large vase of roses was sent by the—Women Teachers Association of Prince Edward and a second bouquet arrived with Mayor Margaret Ackerman's best wishes written on its card.

Telegrams and congratulatory letters were received from Prime Minister Trudeau, Robert Stanfield, William Davis; George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings, Queen Elizabeth and John G. Diefenbaker.

A special visit from County warden Allan Anderson highlighted Miss Dunkley's party.

He recalled her brother John Dunkley, an engineer, who had once worked for him.

Miss Dunkley's brother Albert and her sister Elizabeth, who have predeceased her, were also school teachers.

Norris Whitney, M.P., Prince Edward - Lennox also attended the birthday celebration.

Among Miss Dunkley's remaining relatives are a nephew George Dunkley, Picton, a niece, Marilyn Irwin, Frankville; a niece Margaret Dunkley and a nephew Elmer Dunkley, both of Monterey, California and a sister-in-la.r, Mrs. Gladyl Dunkley, Toronto.

A woman who is not concerned with keeping her age a secret, Miss Dunkley surprised last week one inquisitive visitor. When asked if she was really 100 years old she piped up, "Yes, and how did a are you?".

Mary Dunkley Tuesday held class informally as she talked with the grown - up boys and girls she once taught.

The bell rang at 4 p.m. when afternoon open house ended with birthday cake and tea.

An alert Miss Dunkley, who watched as plates of cake were passed among her callers, emphasized "I would like a piece of cake, too."

Springs Trouble OHC Buildings

The Ontario Housing Corporation is having water problems at two of its housing developments in Belleville.

And both problems are as the result of underground springs uncovered during the construction process.

One of the problems is at the new senior citizens' apartment complex on Turnbull Street and the other is at the low-rental family housing town house development on North James.

City council this week asked that OHC have both problems looked into.

New Canadian Firm Enters Field of Gas Lasers

OTTAWA (CP) — A new Canadian company has entered world markets with equipment that can harness power as great as the sun's from a box little bigger than a filing cabinet.

It is part of a Canadian stake in the application of laser beams to the new science of plasma physics which scientists hope will enable electric production from nuclear fusion—the kind of atomic reaction that now is limited to hydrogen bombs.

The company is Lumonics Research Ltd., which opened here last January with $70,000 from the National Research Council and $155,000 from the trade department to produce new gas lasers discovered by the Defence Research Board at Valcartier, Que.

The simple, low-cost instruments produce brief pulses of radiation 100 times greater than any existing gas lasers and are capable of instantly vaporizing any known substance.

In so doing, the temperatures created are greater than those on the sun's surface.

Laser is a name made up of the first letters of the words light amplification by the stimulated emissions of radiation. They are powerful, concentrated beams able to travel such great distances that the United States space program used them to relay information from the Moon directly to earth.

The Lumonics Research firm's laser is based on a type invented by a research team headed by Dr. J. A. Beaulieu, 31, of Quebec City.

Lumonics' first product, an instrument six feet, eight inches by 30 inches by 12 inches, goes on display today at the Electro-Optics Industry trade show in New York.

The company already has a contract worth more than $35,000 to supply a United States corporation working on a classified U.S. government nuclear project.

A. R. Buchanan, Lumonics president, said in an interview he expects the biggest market at the start will be among the 400 research groups in North America working in the field of plasma physics.

A plasma is an electrically-charged gas. With its ability to disintegrate any known substance, gas lasers such as those of Lumonics, in effect, create an instant plasma when they vaporize a target.

Lumonics say their "moderately-priced" machines, at between $5,000 and $10,000 each, produce higher energy pulses than any other available in the world at a comparable price.

Manufacturing Output Slips During July

OTTAWA (CP) — Manufacturing activity slipped off in July with shipments totalling $3.72 billion compared with a revised total of $4.31 billion in June, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The bureau said that seasonally adjusted, the shipments figure in July was down only three-tenths of one per cent from June.

Statistics Stir Wrath Of Hees and Lambert

OTTAWA (CP) — Marcel Lambert, Opposition finance critic, said today the August prices and employment reports show something is radically wrong with the economy.

He said Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister Edgar Benson, and Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford have been "talking through their hat" and "grossly misrepresenting" the situation in claiming that inflation has been contained.

He also said a rise in unemployment in Ontario is distressing, since this province is "the flagship of the economy," looked to by other regions as an indicator of the whole country's economic health.

Mr. Lambert was commenting on reports today from Statistics Canada that the manpower department showing that consumer prices jumped up last month, with the biggest mid-summer increase in food prices in 10 years, and the trend line of unemployment also rose through the numbers of those actually unemployed declined.

NDP Leader David Lewis was not available for immediate comment, but a spokesman said the prices and employment reports are disappointing in view of government assurances that economic situation was improving.

Finance Minister Benson was in London today, attending a meeting of finance ministers of the Western world's 10 leading industrial nations discussing the monetary and trade situation created by President Nixon's new economic policy.

But a finance department official said that the government is "still hopeful" that by the end of the year, the trend of unemployment will go down.

It showed an increase in August to 6.5 per cent of the labor force, a rise from 6.3 in July after it had fallen from 6.4 in June. Mr. Benson has predicted a steadily declining rate of unemployment on the seasonal-adjusted basis watched by economists to about six per cent or less.

George Hees, former trade minister, said the government should cut income taxes by 10 per cent and let wage and price guidelines, backed up by a threat of mandatory wage and price controls if they are not met.

He said consumer prices, in the first eight months of 1971, have risen at an annual rate of just under six per cent a year.

"If allowed to continue unchecked, Canadian products will be further priced out of America can and world markets, with further disastrous effects on employment," Mr. Hees said.

"The government now must introduce price and wage guidelines designed to keep the annual rate of the rise in inflation to no greater than two per cent. To be effective, these guidelines must be backed up by a flat statement by the government that they will be replaced by mandatory price and wage controls if they are not obeyed."

Mr. Hees said management and labor leaders had indicated to him that they would observe guidelines as an alternative to mandatory controls, because mandatory controls would put them in a bureaucratic straight-jacket "from which it might take years to emerge."

He also said a 10-per-cent cut in income taxes would put additional purchasing power in the hands of all Canadians, and this would raise sales, production, and jobs to a satisfactory level.

Mr. Lambert said he was surprised at the increase in food prices since he had detected little reduction in farm product prices during the first flush of harvest this year.

"But as fall's food prices aside, there is also a clear indication that the prime minister and E. J. Benson, Hon. Basford, who have been saying the government has been containing inflation, have been talking through their hat and grossly misrepresenting the situation.

"This is a very acute problem, but the rise in prices hasn't quite the same priority as dealing with unemployment, which is extremely disturbing."

Baldwin Would Impeach Benson, Turner and Lang

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, gave formal notice today of a Commons motions to impeach Finance Minister Edgar Benson, Justice Minister John Turner and Manpower Minister Otto Lang, the minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board.

The motion will not be called immediately.

Mr. Baldwin alleges that the three ministers have refused to pay to the wheat board more than $90 million as required by the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act. The money would then be distributed to Prairie farmers.

The government says the reserves act is being repealed by new legislation, not yet approved by the Commons, which will provide for distribution of $100 million to Prairie farmers.

Mr. Baldwin's motion calls for a special committee of MPs to examine the government's refusal to pay the $90 million and to "draft and recommend the form of the articles of impeachment which lie against these ministers."

No written impeachment procedure exists in the Canadian constitution. Lord Melville in 1805 was the single person impeached in Britain.

Stephaniedores?

Peace Ship Sails for Aleutians

VANCOUVER (CP) — The protest vessel Greenpeace sailed out of Vancouver harbor Wednesday night, planning to get to Amchitka Island "as soon as possible" because of a telephone tip that the United States Atomic Energy Commission has advanced the date of a nuclear test on the island.

Jim Bohlen, one of 12 persons aboard the 86-foot Canadian halibut boat, would say only that the Washington, D.C., source of the tip was a reliable and sympathetic one.

Crew members plan to protest the five-megaton underground blast by cruising off the island's three-mile territorial limit on the day of the test, some time in October.

Ameliasburg Residents Anti Roadside Stands

AMELIASBURG (Special) — Deputy reeve Norman Post told the council meeting here Tuesday that no further action would be taken on the complaints about roadside stands in operation in residential areas until council obtained a legal interpretation of the regulations under the zoning by-law.

In the meantime, a new complaint was registered against Mrs. Stewart Hartley with a stand immediately west of the junction of County Road 3 and the old Picton Road. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lockwood reported their objections with a petition signed by 10 of their neighbors. Mr. Lockwood informed council those who started the petition had assured him they would appear in court to give evidence if a case developed. The Lockwoods live in house next to Mrs. Hartley's place. Mr. Lockwood is proprietor of an upholstering business he operates fro ma building at rear of his home. The area within the limits of the village of Rossmore is zoned R-1.

At the present time, council is of the opinion only residents of areas zoned agricultural are entitled to sell produce grown on their farms from roadside stands. The regulations, however, do not apply to residents in R-1 areas who established retail outlets by the side of the road previous to 1965 when the official plan and zoning was formally approved a spokesman for council pointed out.

Township building inspector Harry Bleeker was appointed to oversee construction of the firehall near Carrying Place. Council asked for written reports on the progress for submission to councillor Don Sothern, chairman of the fire committee, When completed, the fall will provide the township with a second station for the protection of property from fire loss. On Thursday, the footings for the foundation will be poured.

Mr. Bleeker reported he issued permits to cover $461,100 in new construction in August.

Council announced intention to approve 200 feet of new side walk in the village of Redners-ville.

The date of a meeting between council and planning board was set for Monday, Sept. 27.

The meeting last night was conducted by deputy reeve Norman Post, acting for Reeve Russell Thompson, who is attending a Good Roads convention in Vancouver with his wife as a representative of Prince Edward County.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — Mrs. Cora Reid accompanied by her nephew, Mr. Moore and Mrs. Moore of Belleville, flew to Winnipeg recently and from there motored to Killarney, Manitoba, where they visited Mrs. Reid's brother, Mr. Gideon Mosher.

Misses Karen Andrews and Lois Reid were co-hostesses at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Maureen Stewart, an early autumn bride-to-be, at the home of Karen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Andrews, at Shoreline on Seburdy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fetherick were guests of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Jackson and family at Harold, recently when Mrs. Jackson entertained in honor of her husband's birthday.

"An enjoyable anniversary dinner in honor of the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Reid (nee Violet Abernethy) was held recently at the Riviera Inn, at Campbellford. The celebration was planned by Mr. and Mrs. Dunk's family and his mother. Mrs. Alma Dunk, of Campbellford. There were over fifty guests in attendance and many lovely gifts were received.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul McKeown and Kelly spent a weekend recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nell Lowey and family at Goderich and attended the Chariers — Faust wedding at Listowel.

Architect Praises Older Schools

The builders of the early 1800s believed in permanence.

And they did a better job than they realized, for the schools they put up 60 years ago still stand, are capable of today and are capable of renovation to suit them educationally for another 35 years.

Architect Thomas Hovitch reported to the board of education Monday night on a survey of Queen Alexandra public school on Victoria St. east between William and Ann Streets.

It is one of four built at about the same time to similar plans. They are now in need of repair and renovations, or replacement if totally unsuited to modern teaching methods. But Mr. Hovitch said Queen Alexandra is structurally sound and interior changes can make it into a nice school".

His estimated the changes would cost about $540,000, most of the sum eligible for a provincial grant.

To replace the school would cost at least $600,000 "and you would not get the same amount of space; you would have to trim the size of rooms," he said.

By renovating the interior and adding a gymnasium wing at the rear, "you will get a better building for about half the replacement price," Mr. Hovitch told trustees.

The architect presented plans that showed the auditorium and four classrooms on the ground floor at Queen Alex converted into a library-resource centre with four open plan classrooms opening off it. On the second floor, the existing four rooms would be made into two large rooms and the industrial arts and home economics rooms would remain in the renovated basement.

Mr. Hovitch had an added reason for recommending that the Queen Alexandra be renovated.

"This building has built up tradition in its neighborhood," he noted. "That is something that cannot be replaced."

Frankford

Mrs. George Spencer has returned home after spending a week visiting with her son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spencer in Brampton.

Mr. Fred Gardner spent last week in Campville with his aunt and Mrs. A. Darley and family.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Crowds Worse Than Their Members

Thoughts at Large:

The same people applaud a martyr on the stage who would be among the first to persecute him in the flesh.

* * *

The chief object of organized charity is to make itself indispensible by perpetually treating symptoms rather than be effecting a cure.

* * *

Tocqueville's "Democracy in America," written well over a century ago, still remains the best book on U.S. national character and destiny, and should be foremost in any reading list for college students.

* * *

A crowd is always worse than any of its constituent members — and this is true whether the crowd is called a mob, an army, a police force, or a parliament.

* * *

The difference between Alexander the Great and most of his imitators is that they persist in cutting knots that can and should be untied.

* * *

A man has no right to be proud of "being able to make a decision" if at the same time he is ashamed of reversing it when he is wrong.

* * *

There's nothing at all wrong with being an eccentric, so long as one constantly keeps in mind Bertrand Russell's warning that "More cranks take up unfashionable errors than unfashionable truths."

* * *

As long as we continue to look upon education as a "product" rather than as a "process," we will continue to turn out students who are commodities rather than citizens.

Children's feelings cannot be watered by the front door, but only through little slits and crannies too small to admit an adult body.

* * *

The passion for getting ahead is self-defeating, if motivated by the desire to have oneself behind; only the authentic man can genuinely enjoy his achievements or rest comfortably in his success; the man running away from himself can never stop, no matter how far he goes.

* * *

"Liberty" and "equality" are mutually antagonistic states, which can be brought into equilibrium only by "fraternity" — which is the first to go in the conflict between these two implacable enemies. (So that the only possible peacemaker is the logical casualty of the war.)

* * *

Every man has a moral duty to pursue absolute truth for himself, and a social obligation not to try to enforce it upon anybody else.

* * *

When we pronounce the verdict that modern society is "sick," each of us automatically excludes his own particular form of sickness. (Just as the lunatic is perfectly capable of discerning the madness in his fellow - patients while insisting on his own sanity.)

* * *

"Mother-in-law" is a harsh and ugly term for what the French so tactfully call "Bellemere" (Beautiful mother.)

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Collection, gathering in the harvest seems the motif of the year ahead. What you've worked to assemble now comes together well enough to reward you and provide the means for more. Today's natives see the beauty in all things and strive to transmit what they see.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Rapid progress is encouraged, either natural or forced by circumstances. Leave personalities recriminations out altogether.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Setbacks are to be considered temporary at worst and about to be corrected or compensated for.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Long standing, minor annoyances can be dissipated now. Change anything that bothers you, even rivalities, for psychological uplift.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Seek congenial company. In your mind draw an image of healing light around you and your own people.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): From paucity to plenty — you must choose amongst several constructive ventures early. Go ahead with vigor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Proceed boldly, disregard recent discouraging comments, and get something done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Eventually you must take a chance if you are to make the leap from one level to another. This is a good time to try a calculated risk.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Reach back for old friends, well tested formulas, traditional resources to sustain a forward-looking (perhaps experimental) effort to obtain a better life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Returning loans and favors punctually is essential to a good rating. People look to see where you stand. Entertain.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Give yourself full benefit in every promotion or project. Double check for details where it seems you are getting a great deal for relatively little effort.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Interesting information turns out incorrect or wrong. Even discussing it creates the impression you started or approved it. Wait and listen without question or comment.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Special projects require travel to work around newly forming limitations or restrictions. The changes have to be fundamental — tidying surfaces is not enough.

New Tax Bill Is Seen As Threat to Co-ops

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs on both sides of the Commons have criticized sections of the government's tax bill that they say would drive co-operatives out of business.

Andre Fortin (SC—Lotbiniere) and Gordon Blair (L—Grenville-Carleton) attacked the clauses during debate on a Conservative motion that would in effect kill the bill.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the bill neglected demands from the public—and the stated aim of the government—to encourage manufacturing industries rather than extraction of resources.

William Skoreyko (PC—Edmonton East) said that "nothing in this bill counters any of the problems facing the country today."

The two agreed it would do nothing to help Canadian investors replace U.S. investors in Canadian industry.

Mr. Fortin attacked the bill's clauses that would treat co-ops the same way as corporations for tax purposes.

Mr. Blair agreed the proposal was a "flaw" in the bill.

Especially hard-hit would be small fishing and farming communities, which "already were suffering economic hardships."

He said he hoped the government would reconsider the proposals, for the sake of the 1.7-million members of co-operatives in Canada.

But Mr. Blair accused the opposition of trying to take partisan advantage of present economic difficulties by moving the motion to kill the bill.

The motion was "a stall and nothing more than that."

It would create even more uncertainly, already perpetuated by the long tax review.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said the white paper on tax reform had done more damage to the economy than the motion could.

He said the tax review was a grandiose display of reform that had led to "minute housekeeping measures."

It was all an attempt to camouflage a lack of action to solve problems of unemployment and inflation.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said the government made a great show of reforming the tax system, then settled for the least necessary to win the next election.

"Maybe, I'm too much of a socialist, but I believe there should be some principle involved," he added when Liberal MPs cheered at the mention of an election year.

Mr. Peters echoed Mr. Orlikow and Mr. Skoreyko, who called the bill's tax breaks for low-income groups insignificant.

Someone earning $15,000 yearly would pay $84 more, but a $75,000-a-year man would pay $777 less.

Pilots Are Told to Ignore Noise Abatement Procedure

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Air Line Pilots Association has told its members to ignore a department of transport order on noise abatement because pilots should be more interested in safety than the noise created by jets.

Captain C. H. Simpson, association president, said Wednesday the order had asked that a 30-degree turn be made when taking off from Runway 32 at Toronto International Airport.

"It's time the politicians paid some attention to the safety of the travelling public," he said.

He said, for instance, that if a heavily-loaded jet trying to make the turn were to suffer a severe power failure there would be danger of a catastrophe.

Captain Simpson blamed politicians for the turn order because the city had been allowed to expand "right into the flight path."

The association was also critical of the number of hours some pilots have to fly without proper sleep.

One report from the closed session said some pilots had been working for more than 24½ days without sleeping in a bed. They caught a "snooze in the cockpit."

The association has asked the federal government for safeguards to stop some airlines from pushing their pilots too far.

Air Fare Battle Looms

COLOGNE (Reuter) — An air fare battle is looming over the North Atlantic route following a decision by the West German airline Lufthansa to lower its prices and undercut other scheduled carriers.

Lufthansa notified the International Air Transport Association that it wants to slash its New York-Frankfurt round trip off-season economy-class fare to $420, from $536, beginning Feb. 1. The peak fare would drop to $540 from $626.

The proposed changes must be ratified by both the West German and U.S. governments, but IATA officials expect the new fares to be approved.

Almost simultaneously with the Lufthansa announcement, the IATA said in Geneva that airlines would be free to fix any prices they wished from Feb. 1 next year to March 31, 1972.

IATA Director-General Knut Hammarskjold said "there will be very happy times for passengers and very low fares."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Specialist Opposes Removing Tonsils

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Like many parents, my husband and I are confused about what to do about our children's tonsils and adenoids.

Our family doctor says our 4-year-old son and 6-year-old daughter should have them out. My husband agrees. But a nose and throat specialist says there is no reason for them, to come out. I agree.

How does one make up one's mind? If they should get sick on account of me, I'd never forgive myself. — Mrs. F.

* * *

COMMENT: That is a switch. Most people think that throat specialists invariably say "Better have them out" while family doctors are tugging on the reins and saying, "Whoa — keep them in."

It all depends on the doctor and, of course, his opinion. And we all know that doctors sometimes disagree. But when that happens, as in your case, the patient and family become befuddled about whom to believe.

As far as your own problem is concerned, I can speak only in generalities. I suggest you get one more disinterested opinion from a respected nose and throat specialist in your city. Then the vote will be two to one, and you and your husband will probably be able to arrive at an amicable decision.

Years ago, as you probably have heard, the tonsil and adenoid operation used to be more common than it is today. For example, a family of a half-dozen youngsters would be admitted on the same morning and all would have the operation.

Today, doctors do not believe in wholesale removal of tonsils and adenoids. There should be one or more good reasons for the operation. Examples: frequent sore throats, ear complications, obstruction to normal breathing or other evidence that bacteria have settled in the tonsils causing disease elsewhere.

If there is good and sufficient reason, have them out. Otherwise, keep them in.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My daughter who is now 14 has had dark circles under her eyes for at least a half-dozen years. Otherwise she is quite a pretty girl. She has been told to get as much sleep as possible, but it does not seem to help. Isn't there something you can suggest? She is very unhappy about her looks.—Mrs. M.

* * *

COMMENT: I believe that you and other parents in a similar quandary will be interested in something I came across recently in the Annals of Allergy, written by Dr. Meyer B. Marks, Clinical Associate Professor of Pediatrics at University of Miami School of Medicine.

Your daughter's problem may come under a category he calls "Allergic Shiners" which means black eyes due to allergy. I suggest you take this up with an allergist in your community. Meanwhile, I will quote what he writes about management of the condition:

"Treatment of these infraorbital eye shadows is basically that of the management of chronic nasal allergy. History, complete physical examination including X-rays of the paranasal sinuses and chest, skin testing and hyposensitization against offending allergens are important. Environmental and dietary control must be carried out. A visit to the home surroundings often reveals information not otherwise obtained through questioning.

"Elevation of the foot of the bed on blocks, beginning with a height of six inches increased by three inches every three months until an 18 inch height is attained, will aid considerably in improving venous stasis of the involved areas during sleeping hours — oral nasal decongestant often helps."

Many cases have improved under such management, Mrs. M. Perhaps your daughter will improve, too. The cause of allergic shiners may be too often overlooked.

Plant Is Idle At Brantford

BRANTFORD (CP) — Production at the strikebound Texpack Ltd. plant was called off for the second straight day Wednesday because of what a company spokesman described as "criminal acts to persons and property."

The company called off the day's operations after learning that about 300 demonstrators were waiting in Hamilton where buses, said by the company, pick up workers.

Since the strike by 120 members of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers Union began July 16, the company, which manufactures bandages and hospital supplies, has been bringing in workers from the Hamilton area.

On Tuesday, two men were injured during a skirmish. Demonstrators gathered early Wednesday in areas where the buses usually pick up the workers, but the buses did not arrive.

A company representative said the workers will be paid a full day's wages even though they did not work.

Meanwhile, in Toronto, the company and union continued negotiation talks.

Listing Of Voters To Start

TORONTO (CP) — Enumerators will begin calling on every Ontario residence starting next Wednesday to prepare voting lists for the Oct. 21 provincial election, Roderick Lewis, chief election officer, announced Wednesday.

He also said advance polls will be open on Saturday, Oct. 16, and Monday, Oct. 18, from noon to 9 p.m. EDT for those unable to cast ballots on election day.

Polls on election day—a Thursday—will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. EDT.

More than four million voters are expected to cast ballots, including an estimated 400,000 aged 18 to 21 granted the right to vote by an act of the legislature last July.

Qualified voters are those who on election day are 18 years old, Canadian citizens or a British subject and who have lived in Ontario for 12 months prior to the election.

Enumerators who find no one home after two visits will leave a notice of their visit.

Proxy votes were extended this year to include those involved in transportation—a truck driver or airline pilot away from home on election day.

Students and armed forces personnel can also vote by proxy, as well as the physically handicapped or sick who cannot make an appearance at the polls.

Another change for the election next month is the ballot, which will carry no party affiliations, but only the candidate's name.

Director Calls For Involvement

Hastings county's school trustees embarked on the beginning of their fourth school year as a combined board with a warning that they must get out of the "nuts and bolts" of education and involve the community in their work.

In a progress report combined with predictions of things to come in education, director of education, Eric Runacres told the trustees that administration is "10-year oriented in our thinking at the moment".

The county school system had developed "structures that are unique in the province," he said, mentioning the school advisory committees, the principals' cabinet and associated school groups.

The director forecast changes in teaching methods, increased community school projects, fluctuating enrolments, greater financial limitations on educational spending and a demanding society calling for many new things in education.

"We must involve the community in an evaluation of the why, what, and how of education," Mr. Runacres told trustees.

Ten - year enrolment projections and building programs will be coming to the board soon, he said.

Pilot projects, "one way of coping with change", will be brought before trustees for consideration. The director mentioned a pending brief on a work - study program that one school is ready to present.

He said the trustees and public would soon be involved in evaluations of this vocational education programs in county schools, the teacher training programs both at colleges and within county schools, and communication with newspapers in outlying areas.

Family Planning Association Soon to Be Set Up in Quinte

A family planning association will soon become a reality in Hastings and Prince Edward counties as the result of a meeting at the United Community Services offices Tuesday afternoon.

A group of health and social service workers, in consultation with Peggy Barriger, administrative assistant for the Family Planning Federation of Canada, decided there is a "manifest need" for a centre, to make available information on birth control services in the Quinte area.

The association will operate as information and referral service while investigating the feasibility of setting up a birth control clinic, perhaps through the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit.

Mrs. Barriger was invited to the city by Isidore Cooperman of United Community Services after the combined counties' board of health turned down requests from Belleville city council for a family planning clinic. The board said it had no money in the budget for such an operation.

The Family Planning Federation has funds available from a federal grant to help affiliated associates of it under way. Initially, it could give this district, $800, Mrs. Barriger said.

"Every child born should be a wanted child," she said in explaining the purpose of the Family Planning Federation. "Everybody should know that contraceptives are available and where to get them."

The need for an association was revealed during the course of discussion as agency representatives told of services available in the Quinte district that were known only to those working in the health fields.

"I direct a social planning and co-ordinating agency," said Mr. Cooperman, "but I knew nothing about these programs the community doesn't know about them."

The group learned that health unit nurses visit every newborn baby and its mother in the two counties and offer birth control counselling, and also will refer women to a physician if she desires it.

From early March to the end of August, 513 mothers received contraceptive advice from health unit nurses.

There is a vasectomy clinic in the hospital in Picton and doctors will perform vasectomies in Belleville, and their names are on file with the health unit to be supplied on request. Birth control pills and devices can be obtained free of charge from the manufacturing companies for public health clinics offering family planning services.

Cooperman — the shortage of doctors in the area.

"It is difficult to get a doctor in this community, because of the shortage of medical personnel," he said. "Now can counsellors refer people if they can't get an appointment?"

Mrs. Barringer said associations without clinics find it hard to get doctors to take healthy patients for family planning consultations, examinations and prescriptions. She suggested building up a roster of doctors experienced in the field who would take referrals for a week at a time on a rotating basis.

She said all that was necessary to begin a referral service was office space, secretarial help and a telephone answering service. All Family Planning Federation members are volunteers.

Mr. Cooperman said the office space and secretary was available at no cost in the UCS building. He suggested adding Lifeline to contribute a 24-hour-a-day answering service.

The steering committee empowered to organize a Family Planning Association for the 115,000 people in Hastings and Prince Edward is comprised of: Mrs. Eleanor Sisson, Miss Norah Cunningham, Bruce Kerr, Isadore Cooperman, Dr. R. E. Bellamy and Mrs. Josephine Reddick.

Indian Corn Soup On Menu Again

The time is almost at hand again for the annual mass indulgence in the Quinte District's own regional food specialty — Indian corn soup.

The Mohawk brain will be available Saturday at the annual Mohawk Fair—in spite of the destruction by fire earlier this summer of the band's council house.

Lore of the council house posed a problem for the Mohawk Agricultural Society, whose women members serve corn soup and meals throughout the day of the fair. But tents have been donated and set up across the fairground race track to house the hungry crowds.

The Deseronto Lions Club will prepare barbecued chicken meals and corn soup, homemade pie and coffee will be extra.

The fair will open at 1 p.m. Saturday with a parade. A baby show will follow and the Tyendinaga Reserve's Indian dancers will perform. There will be rides for the children, the usual fall fair displays and exhibits and Indian crafts for sale.

'Sources' Say U.S. to Stick to Policy – Hees

WARKWORTH (Staff) — Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward - Hastings MP) told the Northumberland Conservative convention here Tuesday President Richard Nixon has reached a deal with U.S. labor leaders for continuation of his stringent economic measures.

Mr. Hees said he had been told by Washington sources of "good authority" earlier yesterday that part of the price of labor support will be control of business profits and dividend issues.

He said the American 10 per cent import surcharge will continue until the end of 1972, bringing continued serious problems for Canada.

The former minister of trade and commerce also contends the U.S. — Canada auto pact will be revised, making it less favorable to this country.

Money Talks Prove Futile

LONDON (CP) — The 10 leading non-Communist nations appear to have made little progress towards a solution to the month - old international monetary and trade crisis during a two-day emergency meeting here.

The discussions ended Thursday with indications that the countries involved—known as the Group of 10—had done little more than outline two widely-divergent views with little, if any, hint of possible compromise moves.

The meeting was summoned by Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada, this year's group chairman, to discuss the instability created by the United States' move Aug. 15 to suspend the convertibility of the dollar into gold and to impose a 10-per-cent supplementary duty on imports.

The conference ended with Canadian, European, British and Japanese delegates demanding removal of the duty and a general realignment of all major currencies while U.S. representatives insisted they will not move an inch before receiving the concessions they want.

The group meets again in Washington Sept. 26 after a review of the problems by deputy finance ministers from member nations.

At the centre of the controversy is the current staggering deficit in the U.S. balance of payments, now running at an annual rate of 29 billion. This imbalance, which has been growing since the last quarter of 1949, has seriously weakened the dollar.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally argued at the meeting that the deficit is largely due to massive post-war outflows of U.S. external aid, investment, and funds for Western defence.

'Dear Mr. Trudeau: Further to your request for a surcharge exemption. Yours truly . . .'

China Trip Talks Going Well-Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says secret talks on his forthcoming trip to mainland China are "going very well" and he sees promise of a productive session in Peking.

Holding an unannounced news conference Thursday, Nixon told reporters neither he nor Premier Chou En-lai is approaching the historic meeting with "naive, sentimental" ideas.

The president, recognizing ideological differences and isolation of the two countries from each other for nearly a quarter century, said: "We have agreed to discuss the differences. That is all that has been agreed. There are no other conditions."

Former Army Camp Centre Wins Praise

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Authorities at the Prince Edward Heights hospital at Picton today were unable to say whether a new Ontario policy calling for a reduced population of large institutions for the mentally retarded will have any effect on the development of the new Picton institution.

Health Minister Bert Lawrence says that the population of such institutions will be reduced by 60 per cent over the next five years.

The announcement by Mr. Lawrence was made yesterday following publication of a highly critical report of pre-' sent services by Toronto lawyer Walter B. Williston, who said that only new facilities at Picton and Edgar met his concept of a community hospital and that even these partly fail because they are removed from the mainstream of the community.

At Picton today, Robert MacKenzie, administrator at the Prince Edward Heights hospital, said he was aware of the enquiry but had not yet read the report.

He said he was unable to say whether the report might result in any change from development originally proposed for the Picton hospital.

"That will have to be done from the department in Toronto," he said.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Hurricane Edith is churning northeastward out of Mississippi this morning. Although she has lost her hurricane force winds she is still spreading rain over most of the southeastern states. Her motion will continue northeast and Ontario will feel the effects in the continuation of overcast skies and a few rain showers particularly in the south. These will continue into Saturday with a clearing trend late Saturday and into Sunday. Temperatures will remain on the cool side with daytime maximums reaching the mid-to upper-60s in the south. Minimums will stay 50 to 55 across the south.

Police 'Death Squads' Possible in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — The spectre of South American-style vigilante "death squads" to combat attacks on police was raised Thursday by Guy Marcil, president of the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood.

"Nobody wants a 'death squad' similar to the one existing in Brazil, nor vigilante groups, but we're coming to that point," he told a news conference while commenting on the shooting of four Montreal police in five days.

The morale of Montreal policemen had been severely strained by the shootings.

"It hasn't affected them to the point where they won't be able to do their jobs, but from now on, the police will not take any chances. . . ."

Constable Jacques Chatrand, 23, was shot last Friday in the east end of the city and then on Monday, Det.-Sgt. Andre Berthiaume was shot in the abdomen while chasing two holdup suspects in downtown Montreal.

Early Wednesday morning, constables Roland Thibodeau, 32, and Andre Michaud, 23, were shot when they interrupted the rape of a 19-year-old girl in the city's downtown area.

Sgt. Marcil feels that violence in the city is going to get worse unless a stiffer attitude toward crime and criminals is adopted.

Police were not adequately equipped to combat crime in the city.

"In many cases we have men with revolvers shooting it out with bandits armed with machine-guns?"

Meanwhile, Dr. Denis Szabo, head of the University of Montreal's criminology department, said in an interview he believes that police shootings are a vicious circle that only the police can break.

"What has happened is a rupture or breakdown of an unspoken agreement between police and the underworld not to shoot each other."

Former police director Jean-Paul Gilbert, now a criminology professor, said that if the situation continues "there's a danger that police may begin to react very promptly with the use of their revolvers."

Lang Offers to Go to Jail And Opposition Says He Should

OTTAWA (CP)—Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, volunteered to go to jail to help Prairie wheat farmers.

Opposition members agreed that he should, along with other members of the Liberal government.

An debat was the way the great Temporary Wheat Reserves Act debate ended up in the Commons early today.

Special debate on the government's non-compliance with the reserve act's terms had been sought by Conservative and New Democrat MPs since the House came back from a summer recess Sept. 7. They finally got it approved Thursday and they hammered the government in general, and Mr. Lang in particular, for 6½ hours before they let up.

Mr. Lang's contentions that the opposition was trying to "block and filibuster" a government legislation that would help Prairie farmers was greeted with hoots and catcalls. He never challenged the basic opposition contention is that the government was flouting the law in refusing to make payments to the wheat board called for by legislation still on the statute books.

Instead, he said he was ready to take abortions if necessary to aid Prairie farmers.

"I would gladly go to jail in the cause of the Prairie farmer."

Rockefeller Virtually Admits Police Fire Killed Hostages

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — With Gov. Nelson Rockefeller all but confirming that police killed hostages at Attica state prison, a congressional committee planned to come to New York state today for answers on how to prevent a recurrence of the Attica-type riot.

Rockefeller told a news conference Thursday that he thought the "hostages who died of gun wounds were caught in a crossfire" between attacking police forces who converged from four sides on a prison yard held by rebellious convicts Monday. He added: "The prisoners didn't have guns."

As the controversy over the violent end to the prison rebellion that took 40 lives continued, citizens of this western New York village and surrounding communities prepared to hold funerals today for six more of their dead.

It was not known early today whether state officials would delay the burial of any or all of the six for whom funerals were to be held today. The interment of two other hostages for whom funerals have already been conducted has been delayed pending a further examination of the bodies.

Autopsies on the nine hostages who were killed Monday disclosed that the victims had died of gunshot wounds, not of throat slashes as had been reported earlier.

Two special pathologists were called in by the state to conduct further post-mortems, and that led to the delay in burying two of the hostages.

The state, meanwhile, revised downward to 40 the number of known dead in the rebellion that erupted a week ago Thursday.

Deputy State Attorney-General Robert E. Fischer told a news conference here that 30, not 32 convicts, died during the four-day revolt. Nine prison-employes hostages were killed when police attacked, and one guard had died earlier from head wounds suffered on the rebel's first day.

In Washington, Representative Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.), chairman of the House of Representatives select committee on crime, scheduled a meeting with Rockefeller at his New York City offices, then a trip to Attica to speak to convicts. The committee is considering prison reform legislation.

In commenting on Monday's violent end to the prisoner rebellion, Rockefeller said that under the circumstances it was "extraordinary" that another 28 hostages were saved.

NDP Candidate Alan Deacon

Quinte English Teacher To Carry NDP Banner

A secondary school English teacher will carry the NDP banner into the Quinte riding election battle.

Alan J. Deacon, 29, will be nominated Sunday night as candidate for Quinte. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in Eugene's Hall on Pine St.

Mr. Deacon graduated from the University of Toronto as a mature student in 1967, receiving a bachelor's degree in English and archaeology. He has taught English at Quinte Secondary School in Belleville for a year.

Past president of the Scarborough East NDP Association, he is the professional development chairman for Hastings division of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation. He is a sports fan and participant, especially in hockey, tennis and badminton.

As a resident on the Bay of Quinte, Mr. Deacon is particularly concerned with pollution on this body of water, as well as other Ontario waters. One of his interests is helping people with problems coping with the "future shock" society.

Professionally he has a special concern for children with learning disabilities and with the techniques of teaching this group of students.

Mr. Deacon's campaign manager will be Ian Reilly, a former candidate in the riding.

Mr. Deacon's birthday is Oct. 21, election day, and "my best birthday present will be Dr. Potter's concession," he said in announcing his candidacy.

The NDP expects to pick up a good percentage of the youth vote, said Jean Harney, a former candidate for the federal NDP leadership. Mr. Harney will be the speaker at the Quinte NDP nomination meeting.

Traditionally he said, first-time voters mark their ballots in same way their parents always did.

"But this is a whole new electorate," he said of the 18 to 21 - year - olds now eligible to vote for the first time this year. "This is a completely new political element, and young people are very important — they want change and are tiring of waiting for it."

Art Cockerill, a professional engineer from Port Hope, has already been contacted to contest the riding for Northumberland for the NDP.

Bryan Bonner of Consaby, a barrel sander at Belleville, will be NDP standard bearer for Prince Edward - Hastings riding. He was unsuccessful in '68.

S. Mr. Bonner is an operating engineer in a plant at Millhaven.

The NDP has said it will run candidates in all Ontario's 117 ridings, a record for a three - way fight in most districts.

BROCKVILLE — Canadian National Railway officers met with Brockville municipal and provincial government officials to advise them of the company's intention of operating certain trains through the community, thus eliminating stopovers for crew changes.

G. A. Van de Water, manager of the railway's Kingston Area, with headquarters in Belleville, said that union officials had been informally advised of the plans and that official notification to employees would be issued shortly. The plan is targeted for April implementation.

Rail service to the community, both freight and passenger, would not be affected, he said.

Mr. Van de Water noted that although the "run through" plan would have the advantage of increasing community at work assignments from Brockville to Montreal, Canadian Pacific officials say that relatively few people would actually move.

"We foresee a number of mutually acceptable terms which will minimize the adverse effects on employees and the community," he said.

Present operational procedures require that the railway stop most of its Montreal-Toronto trains at Belleville and Belleville to change engine crews. The run-through proposal would eliminate Brockville's crew change.

Present operational procedures require that the railway stop most of its Montreal-Toronto trains at Belleville and Belleville to change engine crews.

The run-through proposal would eliminate Brockville's crew change point for 13 trains per day each way.

Mr. Van de Water said that the necessary negotiations with railway employees concerned are still to be negotiated with the labor organizations involved are the United Transportation Union and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The CN executive said the installation of the plan would be made in compliance with the terms of the National Transportation Act and that the company would follow the guidelines established by Mr. Justice Freedman, and by him was commissioned by the federal government to study and report on the implications of run-through.

The plan will reduce by one the number of stopovers of trains and improve passenger train service between the two cities, Mr. Van de Water said. "This will enable us not only to improve productivity but also completely position the railway to achieve maximum benefits in the very active Montreal-Toronto market but will also permit a much more effective use of equipment," he said.

Although terms of the agreement are still to be negotiated, the CN officials said its labor-saver a number of very definite benefits to employees. He noted that employees assigned to these trains would have fewer trips per month to perform without loss of earnings.

Service Clubs Play Big Volunteer Role

The service clubs of Belleville here always provided a pool of experienced executives and professional men, ready to exercise their skills for general community benefit.

A case in point is the Kiwanis Club. The Belleville and Quinte Clubs have a combined membership of about 125, all offering service to the community and especially to young people.

Frank G. Cosgrove is such a member. Retired and granddaughter-injured from loss of sight, his enthusiasm for service remains undampened. He has served the community as school trustee, his church as warden, his lodge in its highest offices and the Kiwanis through a quarter-century of many capacities, including the presidency. When the president-elect resigned to head a committee to advise on Volunteer Week, Mr. Cosgrove was his choice.

Take, also, George Brown of the Quinte Kiwanis Club, who "has had anything but smooth sailing" but through its troubles", years George has sat flagging and in his year as president, the club responded in membership and strength. Next year will see George Brown as Lieut.-Gov. for the Loyalist Division of Kiwanis.

Dick Lambers is another member who has never aspired to public notice or club office. His photographer's eye has given him a discernment that has reacted to the benefit of community service on many occasions, particularly in the Kiwanis collaboration with the conservation authority. For six years he was chairman of the committee that serviced the Travelogue series, inaugurated in 1953. It provided entertainment for the club's benefactors and needed money for service, work.

Missing Plane Mystery Deepens

TRENTON (Staff) — A Stirling family will take legal action against the man who borrowed their plane for a trip to Quebec but took it to the United States, maybe even Cuba, without returning it.

Harvey Conrad, 38, of Trenton, a Simpsons-Sears employee and president of the town's Lake Ontario Society, had been loaned a Cessna Skyhawk owned by Lyle La Rocque of Stirling for a short trip to the Gaspesian coast Sept. 2. Conrad had planned to visit his brother and bring back a load of wood.

He departed Oak Hills Flying Club and followed the St. Lawrence Valley along the Canadian coast until he reached the Montreal suburb of Dorion but the plane, with only about 37,000, then diverted from its path to Quebec tiderator and headed for the United States.

Reported missing en route to Gaspe, the Canadian Armed Forces conducted a 36-hour search for the missing plane.

Conrad, Trenton and Ottawa but called this off when a report from Trenton man, Marvin Bedgerow, 19, told police at Nepanee the plane had checked through U.S. Customs and Immigration at Ogdensburg, N.Y., on Sept. 3.

Bedgerow, a parolee and friend of Conrad on the flight, told police that Conrad wanted to fly the light plane to Cuba but he did not want to go as he hitchhiked back to Canada.

Neither police nor the armed forces have seen the Skyhawk went after leaving New York State, if it did go to Cuba. Members of Belleville detachment OPP spokesmen said once charges are laid a province-wide search will be mounted. For Canadian Search and Rescue officials the case is closed until such in the hands of American authorities and the provincial police.

Friends of Conrad, who was always active in community affairs, are baffled by the missing plane story. He left a note for his wife, but has given him worth several thousand dollars.

The Le Riviera say Conrad had been a very good friend and had helped them a lot. Conrad planned move to the area this year from Bramption. He had borrowed the plane many times before.

Trenton Aircraft To Have Big Job

TRENTON (Staff) — The largest military exercise in at least four years will be under way across the country before the end of September with CFB Trenton being very much involved.

Operation Dragon Jump will involve Canadian Armed Forces from six provinces in a test of Canada's ability to fill its NATO northern flank commitment.

Rather than shifting troops to Norway, as would be the case in an emergency, the exercise will involve personnel of the ACE Mobile Force and an Air-Sea Transportable Group (Canadian) NB for manoeuvers.

Of the 5,000 men participating in the three-week Dragon Jump, 2,000 troops with 200 vehicles will move from Fredericton to Trenton to be airlifted to the Meaford exercise area.

Trenton's 436 Hercules Squadron is expected to conduct more than 100 flights during the exercise, with additional Hercules aircraft from Edmonton, Buffalo from 424 Squadron here will be moved to Gagetown for light transport and support duties.

The exercise will be headed by Lt.-Gen. Gilles Turcotte, Commander of Mobile Command, as the armed forces rehearse their role of shifting a battalion to NATO easily by air and following this up with further air and sea transport until the commitment has a united brigade group size.

Volunteer Displays Now Open

The arena show, free to the public, will continue until 9 p.m. tonight, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Thirty-two booths will highlight the community work of volunteer organizations.

Special attractions will be a skydiving demonstration by the Apollo Club parachutists at 7 p.m. Friday and 1.30 p.m. Saturday and a judo demonstration by Jim Driscoll and a group of boys from the Y at 3.30 p.m. Saturday.

On Saturday morning and afternoon Don Foster's Clown Band will be in attendance to provide music.

The arena exhibition will conclude the series of events marking Volunteer Recognition Week.

National Ballet Here October 19

"The National Ballet is returning to Belleville after three years," said Wally Russell, general manager of the company who visited the city on Wednesday to lay the groundwork for the 20th anniversary tour of the National Ballet, of which, in its 19 show at Centennial School auditorium is a part.

Both Mr. Russell and David Crean, public relations officer of the National Ballet company, met members of the local branch of the Ballet Guild and discussed ways and means of getting the whole community involved in the project.

The tour is part of the coming - of - age celebration of one of the most famous ballet companies in North America," stressed Mr. Russell. "We want as many people as possible to get this opportunity of seeing a live performance."

Mr. Crean pointed out that the program will be well-balanced mixture of traditional and contemporary ballet and should appeal to those who are already enthusiastic fans and to those who will be seeing live ballet for the first time. Mr. Russell was confident that even those who had never seen a ballet before and have no particular interest in it would be "converted" after they see the show.

The program includes excerpts from Swan Lake, Giselle and the Sleeping Beauty, as well as three new ballets. Fandango, in which the dancers do some singing. Autumn Song and Eh!, choreographed by the company's artistic director, Celia Franca. Mr. Crean commented that Eh! was a "delightful piece" that will be performed for the first time in Canada in Belleville.

"Eh! is a lot of fun," said Mr. Russell. "People would pass by at Ontario Place, wondering what was going on and then stay and watch the whole performance." He said that these people were not necessarily "highbrow" or sophisticated but they enjoyed all the same.

Tickets for the October 19 performance in Belleville are priced at $3.50 and $2.50. All seats will be reserved and students and senior citizens can get tickets for half price. Tickets will shortly be available at Shoppette, Ed Thomas store and at Quinte Mall.

Appeal for Mortage Money Successful

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Following a serious shortage of mortgage money which earlier in the year effectively stalled residential construction in the area, the green light is again on for housing starts in Belleville.

A month ago, at the request of the Quinte Home Builders, Mayor J. Russell Scott convened a meeting at city hall with local bank heads and mortgage lending firms to attempt to obtain more mortgage money for home building.

The response was encouraging, almost beyond belief.

"The pressure is off," reported Mayor Scott this week. "The response was tremendous and Belleville will get all the mortgage money needs — and more."

As result, up to $20 million more in mortgage money will be available for Belleville, according to the mayor.

He said the replies were "terrific", with lending institutions expressing great confidence in the future of Belleville.

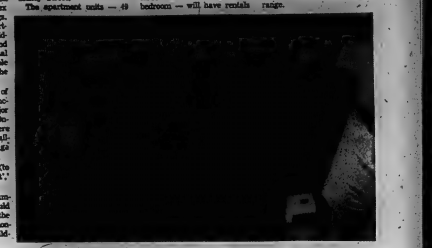
"All the banks came through," said Mayor Scott, "also Montreal Trust which handles mortgage funds for Metropolitan Life, and CMHC.

The additional mortgage money will be available for almost all types of housing construction — single family residences, speculative housing, for apartments and condominiums, as well as for financing the purchase of older homes.

The only type of housing construction on which the lenders did not give the full green light was the smaller 11-plex type of apartment buildings.

The same shortage of mortgage money for home building developed last year and Mayor Scott through personal approach to lenders was able to obtain more funds for the city.

Maurice Rollins, head of Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd., one of the major homebuilders in Eastern Ontario, said local builders were "quite happy" about the availability of additional mortgage funds for Belleville.



"Mayor Scott's appeal (to the lenders) has borne fruit', he said.

Mr. Rollins said single family home construction would get a big boost from the availability of additional money, as would apartment buildings.

"Apartments are needed in Belleville," he said. "I don't think there is a single apartment available."

Mr. Rollins said his firm was now commencing development of seven 11 - unit two storey "back to - back" apartment buildings in Tracey Park, on the extension of Tracey Street and west of Sidney Street.

The apartment units — 49 three - bedroom and 23 two - bedroom — will have rentals starting in the $140 a month range.

Hong Kong Students Arrive

Classes began at Albert College yesterday for the 114th term and the largest group of foreign students will be from Hong Kong. On arrival at the Belleville station, enroute to the college, two students from Hong Kong, Stephen and Henry Chen are met by David Woo of Toronto and assistant headmaster J. H. McKay. Members of the college staff also met incoming trains to greet the new students and accompany them to the college.

Liberal Wants Sand Inquiry

PICTON (Staff) — Barry Kong, Liberal candidate for Prince Edward - Lennox riding has called for a public inquiry into sand quarrying from the Sandbanks Provincial Park by the Lake Ontario Cement Company.

At a press conference in Napanee last night Mr. Young stated: "Put aside for the moment almost divergent views between Lake Ontario Cement Company and the government of Ontario as to the problem and the justifications for reaching settlement in my opinion makes it absolutely essential that a public inquiry be held immediately into a aspects of situation which led to 1958 settlement reached by the late Kelso Roberts on behalf of the provincial government and Robert McLean on behalf of the Lake Ontario Cement Company. I call on the government of Ontario to immediately institute such an inquiry."

The Liberal candidate said his investigation of the situation has been directed toward answering two basic questions; first, how did the present quarrying situation arise? and secondly, what can be done to remedy the situation? to resolve conflict between the two "the environmental" and of one hand and company and its needs for concrete raw material on the other?

Mr. Young said about 235 full time workers are employed by the Lake Ontario Cement Company in Prince Edward and added he considers it as a responsibility of the people and of the government of Ontario not just residents of this riding to resolve the current dispute in a manner that will protect and if possible expand the number of those employed.

He remarked that the dunes theoretically, if not practically, are owned by the people of Ontario and therefore in his opinion the burden and cost of their preservation must be borne by the entire province and not by Prince Edward County.

Mr. Young suggested the following five-point program to resolve the present conflict:

He stated the province should immediately notify the Lake Ontario Cement Company that it, the province, presently intends to insist that the company find an alternate source of supply of raw material for its cement operation.

The Ontario government should provide the cement company immediately with such scientific and other assistance as the company may require in terms of locating and testing alternate sources of supply of raw material.

He advocated the provincial government request Lake Ontario Cement begin immediately to prepare cost estimates on the use of alternate sources of supply of raw materials including estimates of the increased capital costs of any change over and estimates of any increase in normal operating costs which would result from this change-over.

Mr. Young also urged that the Ontario government immediately notify Lake Ontario Cement Company of the government's intention to assist the company financially through a forgiveable loan and or other procedure, to cover

Course Available Real Estate

The Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards is conjunction with Loyalist College, Belleville is presenting a course on property management the week of September 27 to October 1, 1971. at least the capital cost of a change over to an alternate source of supply of raw material.

"This loan, in my personal opinion, should roughly equal the reasonable cost to the company of any such change over," he said.

The provincial government and the cement company should jointly agree that at the latest the change over to an alternate source of supply should be completed within five years.

He said his limited investigation of this issue has left with the impression that press reports this far have misused the term negotiation to determine the reasons for the ultimate swap of land for leased land between Lake Ontario Cement Company and the crown.

Mr. Young said "leasing of land" the objective of my investigation has been to determine what was the present situation existed.

"It is almost as if the government and the company were in fact negotiating a settlement of totally different problems and to me it is incredible that there is such a divergence of views on the problem that supposedly was settled by way of the company's quit claim to the dunes and the Crown's lease to the company."

Candidate Says Cement Company Quarrying Shifted by Province

PICTON (Staff) — The Lake Ontario Cement Company could have and would have continued to quarry its original lands at Sandbanks Provincial Park with the permission of the provincial government.

Barry Young, Liberal candidate for the riding of Prince Edward - Lennox said at a news conference in Napanee last night that he had obtained this information from Bruce Price, operations manager of the company in Prince Edward and Robert McLean, former company president.

Quarrying is now carried out from a 16-acre site leased to the company by the crown until the year 2041.

Mr. McLean, in 1958, reached a settlement of the issue with the late Kelso Roberts, acting for the provincial government.

Press reports have stated Lake Ontario Cement Company's original land was successfully relocated by government employees making quarrying operations impossible on the land parcel in question.

Mr. Young said he learned the provincial government's reforestation of the cement company's original land occurred on a continuing basis after 1922 and "was certainly complete insofar as grown trees are concerned prior to the time that the property was purchased by the company".

"From the company's point of view, I understand that reforestation occurred in or about the years 1964 to 1967," he added.

Harold Carleton, Parks Supervisor, the Ontario department of Lands and Forests, Tweed, told Mr. Young that in his opinion any reforestation was hardly accidental, since it is part of a continuing effort to stabilize the dunes in the south end of the peninsula.

He remarked to Mr. Young during the candidate's investigation, the stabilization was carried out by the Crown on private lands with the active consent and participation of the owners.

"It follows then, that Lake Ontario Cement Company must have been aware of the reforestation efforts prior to the purchase of the lands in 1958," suggested Mr. Young.

Bruce Price earlier informed Mr. Young the cement company would have continued to quarry from the reforested land parcel. It was higher and gave no ground water problems, contained more quarry able sand, had vary access, and by reason of reforestation occurring in order to the south, didn't raise the problem of blowing sand and incurred instability.

Harold Carleton indicated to Mr. Young that the company could not have quarried the original lands after reforestation and said the company took the official position that it would be difficult to quarry sand in view of very deep tree roots and branches.

Mr. Carleton also remarked the company, in negotiations with the Crown advanced a legal argument claiming ownership of accreted land lying in front of its original parcel and extending easterly along what is now the Sandbanks property on West Lake. It was this claim plus the question of accidental reforestation which motivated the Crown to reach settlement with the Lake Ontario Cement Company.

The company claimed the accreted sand only after the Crown refused to permit it to quarry its own land.

Mr. Young noted, "Finally, in response to my question of whether the Crown would like Lake Ontario Cement Company out of the Sandbanks area, and whether the company would itself like to be out of the Sandbanks area, I received a resounding "Yes" from both Mr. Carleton and Mr. Price.

Water Shortage Hits Point Anne

Householders in the village of Point Anne have been having a night-time water shortage in recent weeks.

The reason — heavier water usage than the filtration plant is designed to handle.

A plant official said that householders had been asked to voluntarily reduce Water usage but daily use continued at a higher level than the filtration beds could handle. So the night-time cutoff was ordered to allow a supply of filtered water to build up.

In case of a fire emergency during cutoff periods, the filtration plant could be bypassed to use raw water directly from the bay.

The City Cannot Wait

There is a lot of food for thought in the words spoken by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation area chairman Jack Raine when he addressed the Quinte Homebuilders Association Wednesday night.

Mr. Raine said other provinces are building homes for wage earners in the $6,500-$7,000 bracket and he could see no reason why it could be done in Ontario.

He challenged the builders to do so and said there was plenty of money available from Central Mortgage. The builders countered that before it could be done there would have to be relaxation of subdivision controls allowing more flexibility in lot frontages and the services now required.

The builders argued that city council was not acting quickly enough to their submissions asking for such changes in the zoning bylaws.

The situation obviously requires a fresh approach. Central Mortgage says it has the money, the builders say they can do the job. The holdup is placed with city council and zoning.

Zoning is a monumental nut to crack. Despite the furore over the location of apartment buildings in the community, council has not done much more than inch to an answer. As it stands now, consultants are being hired to prepare an official plan for Belleville. It will come as some surprise in this corner if this plan arrives at the Ontario Municipal Board this side of 1 months from now.

In the meantime the single family residence owners are complaining bitterly that the zoning bylaw allows apartment buildings in too many areas of the city. The builders are arguing the zoning bylaw is so restrictive they cannot build single family dwellings cheaply enough to service the need.

Obviously neither zoning conundrum is going to be solved through the official plan method for the best part of two years.

It reduces the problem right back to where it was two years ago — beginning.

The answer is simple: amend the present zoning bylaws to place some controls on apartment buildings and to relax the single family residence restrictions.

Community Spirit

Sometimes it becomes apparent that there are more things happening in this community than we are prone to recognize.

This philosophical reflection was brought to light once again this week with the news item that the Hastings County board of education was honoring its volunteers.

On this occasion the volunteers so recognized were 14 women of this community who conducted a preschool enrichment project as a pilot program last year.

The interesting aspect was that the community volunteers paired with students from Loyalist College's early childhood development course, are working in the area in community involvement. From pre-schooler to student to parent, from school board to community college — an excellent example of co-operation.

It is indicative of the progressive nature of the Hastings County board of education. When one travels around the province and realizes that some other boards are just talking about alternative programs, our board is already undertaking. you come back to the community feeling more than a little bit happier with education in Hastings.

It is also a perfect example of how Loyalist College is fulfilling its primary role — that of being a community college and initiating courses and projects that fill voids in this area.

May there be many more such ventures.

Anyone For New Zealand?

The spirit of adventure is still with us — at least some of us. Ernest Downey, his wife Frances, their son Bryan and his wife Valerie left the Quinte area Wednesday for New Zealand . . . . by trimaran.

It is a resolute task the four have set themselves, with the prospect of sailing across the Pacific in their 43 - foot tri - hulled boat one that would either excite you or leave you chilled.

For the Donmeys it is obviously the former as they set out to fashion a new life in the country the older Mr. Domney left 29 years ago.

The name of their vessel is the Temerai, in Maori meaning good omen. Their choice of name is a topical one. May they have the best of luck.

Smoke in Youth Report Started with Committee Itself

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Now that the smoke is beginning to lift from the controversial report of the Committee on Youth, the Rand is not all that high.

That there was so much smoke — the report's smoking of marijuana and hashish, the report recommended be federally legalized — was the committee's own fault.

It was the committee itself — and not, as the chairman David Hunter implied, the press, and so, the public — that put the emphasis on "pot" and "hash".

And having touched his match of recommendation to the let-us-legalize - cannabis controversy, Chairman Hunter fanned the flame with the suggestion that could be these "soft" drugs might find distribution (like booze and beer) through government - operated or controlled shops.

You know, you are a kid of 18, and the Government, lipt us wildly suppose — but it is not repeat NOT, going to happen- bee gone for the legalization of pot.

So you go to the government, sides and instead of buying your "six pack" of beer or ale for the Saturday night rock, you pick up a deck of grass.

Neat, huh?

Making the report sound even more controversial than it was — and it got a lot of people all steamed up — was Chairman Hunter's failure t deny that his marijuana recommendation had been based on what was termed, gently, "personal experience."

"Your question is quite impertinent," he snapped with a curling edge of anger.

But neither he, a 25-year-old former Toronto student leader; Vincent Kelly, 23 - year - old founder of Yorkville's hippie village bar and a chartier director

Did the Committee talk — and its work was mostly questionof rowdy-doodey Rochdale College; nor Pierre Bourdon, 28-year-old youth organizer, took the questie a word further with any sort of answer, much less a disclaimer.

The Hunter, on State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's Youth Committee for a year and a half at $20 much a day and expenses, looked more the rising young candidates for the corporate boardroom than social activators and jobbiters of generation polarization.

Their suits looked new, their hair was Trudeau-stylishly long back of the neck, all had modish sideburns and two of the three were wokie shirts.

So now their report has been researched, written, published and distributed at an initially estimated $500,000 cost to your taxes. The all governmental projects and programs it almost has to undergo a "corrective" roller marker and concept for a few rumbles and wrangles in Parliament, will be gathering dust on the archives shelves.

But Chairman Hunter is staying on another month or two, to look after the mail and answer questions, he says, under an extension of his contract being worked out with State Secretary Pelletier.

What mail?

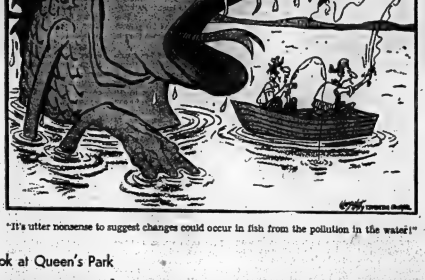
Like a "mountain" of reaction, he reports, most of it favorable, or at least, not exactly hostile.

And what questions?

The obvious ones which must follow his warning that today's youth will be "very high expectations better be given what it wants or all hell will break loose."

The most obvious question then:

Is all of young people — only to the alienated, the uptight and disenchanted?



The answer:

"By no means. We saw everyone, the hippies and the straights, the born-losers and the hard-hats."

And what is a "straight" to the Committee on Youth?

"It's a kid," says Chairman Hunter, "who may or may not have a diploma or a degree but definitely does not have a job.

"Our archetypical kid is in Newfoundland. He is busy trying to scare up a few dollars he does not have time for raising hell and anyway he is not interested.

"It's utter nonsense to suggest changes could occur in fish from the pollution in the water!"

Election Boils Down to the Best Leader

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — As of the start of the campaign the province's political leaders are in agreement on one point about this election. In their minds the main question is who is best qualified and suited to lead Ontario in the next span of years.

Premier William Davis, Liberal leader Robert Nixon and New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis all stressed this in their opening statements and interviews.

Mr. Davis said "It is especially a time when the people of Ontario require leadership in the management of their affairs in which they feel they can have confidence".

This was his key statement.

And it was the central theme of the other leaders. All submitted times were trying and that capacity to lead was the most significant question.

Which means that in this election the personal quality of leadership will probably far out-rank party platforms and promises in the campaigning and possibly in the final results.

So it would appear the main emphasis of the campaign promises will be thin.

On the province - wide level three leaders and three parties trying to sell the public on their credibility.

On the local level three parties trying to convince the voters that their candidate is the best man to listen to them, interpret them and represent them.

In other words, it shapes up at this stage as dominantly a people and personal election rather than an issue election.

This is borne out by the first policy statements of the two opposition parties (The government, of course, runs on its record and doesn't make policy statements).

Mr. Nixon said that the four key questions on which his party would fight the election were jobs, decentralization of government and local autonomy, the environment, and confederation.

Mr. Lewis named five questions: creation of jobs, protection in the cost-of-living, tax reform, environmental protections and regaining control of the economy.

These are not questions, with the possible exception of jobs when unemployment gets worse which it will soon, that will excite the general public.

They are, however, matters in which most people have a fairly lively interest.

As such they will probably be most important not in influencing the election in themselves and what the various parties promise to do about them, but as testing stones from which the public can judge, from the discussion about them, how the respective leaders would handle them, and from them the other affairs of the province.

Death Penalty: Debate Continues

Brockville Recorder and Times

The temporary suspension of the death penalty for non-capital murder has had little or no effect on the number of murders during the five year trial period. Indeed the rate of murder has increased and there are again calls for the restoration of the death penalty. It is not likely the federal government will heed the call, however, when the five - year trial period ends in 1972. It didn't four years ago.

The Canadian Bar Association has added its voice to those who are against the extension of the ban. Meeting in Banff last week the country's legal profession defeated, 67 to 51, a move to ask the federal justice department to extend the ban for another five years when the trial period ends December 1972. The defeated resolution also asked that the new trial period eliminate hanging for capital murder. Under the present legislation capital murder involves the killing of a policeman or prison guard while on duty. Policemen have been killed during the current trial period but the convicted murderers have had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment by the federal cabinet.

There is a pretty good indication of the government's attitude towards the death penalty. At least, the cabinet is against it although Parliament favors it in a free vote in the House of Commons four years ago a majority favored retaining capital punishment. Despite this, the government decided on the five - year trial period, with, it is fully expected, the extinction of abolishing it for all time.

It's a pretty safe bet that a referendum at this time, prior to the end of the five - year trial period, would find the public would favor retention of the death penalty for murder. It is the ultimate crime and it should have the ultimate penalty, if there is any deterrent effect in punishment. And we believe there is.

Hi-Jinks

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

In last night's Intelligencer I read about a pretty good indication of the government's attitude towards the death penalty.

The rope-ladder picture certainly looked to me as if some idiot had dreamed it up and the young student with the vertebrae broken in his back will be reminded of the fun for a long time; also his parents.

Some time ago a similar but seemingly less dangerous initiation was written up at Sir George Williams, when a young student died as a result of the fun. I think from then on initiations were curtailed; I hope they still are.

Surely the president or faculty at Loyalist could have forestalled events as dangerous as described in your newspaper.

Dr. Clark's Mind-Bender For The Successful Politician!

The Globe and Mail

Just when we had become accustomed to the idea that mood-adjusting drugs were a threat to society and the world, the president of the American Psychological Association, Dr. Kenneth Clark, has offered us a completely different idea. He suggests the development of a drug to be administered to successful politicians for the public abuse of power in public office.

The proposal is based upon recent studies of electrical and chemical control of the brain, which suggest that we might be close to stabilizing and making dominant the moral and ethical propensities of man. Thus we might be able to subordinate, if not eliminate his negative behavioral tendencies.

Dr. Clark has proposed using criminals for the testing of any such drugs. Our more sensitive politicians will wonder just what is an appropriate about the criminal element as a testing ground for a drug aimed at politicians. Quite possibly our more sensitive criminals will be equally disturbed by this high - handed suggestion that them with another class of person.

But no matter. The important thing at this stage is that difficult details will have to be worked out before we can begin restrain power - hungry politicians can be put to work. Dr. Clark says it is for successful politicians, but at what point does one acknowledge success in a democratic system? Election to Parliament? Appointment to a Cabinet post? As leader of the Opposition? Or is it to be reserved for the man at the top?

Railway Inquiry Would Make Safety Three-way Responsibility

OTTAWA (CP) — A year-long railway safety inquiry ended Thursday with general agreement that responsibility for regulation be removed from the companies and delegated to a tripartite body of labor, rail management and government.

In summation of evidence before the Canadian transport commission's railway transport committee, Jack Walter, representing the Canadian Railway Labor Association, said the railways had abdicated their responsibility for the safety of their employees and the public.

"The railways have been a self-policing industry and a change in this regard is long overdue."

He said Canadian railway companies have accepted the standards issued by the Association of American Railroads, but since the AAR is a commercial organization set up to facilitate interline operations, their equipment specifications do not adequately consider safety.

Establishment of safety procedures and the interpretation of government regulations had too long been left to management and labor, said Mr. Walter.

"Surely when it comes to safety the unions shouldn't have to wave the strike threat."

He called on the railway transport committee to assume an active role in interpreting the uniform code of operating rules—the government regulations setting down standard practices to be used in controlling rail operations.

While the commission always has had official authority in this area they had in practice delegated rule interpretation to the railways themselves.

The labor representative was harsher in criticizing the safety attitude of Canadian Pacific than of government - owned Canadian National Railways.

CP Rail was repeatedly faulted throughout his argument for inadequate attention to signal maintenance, equipment reliability and consideration of workers' complaints.

CNR was praised for its current cab-design research while CP Rail would "shelter its crews' with canvas sheets" if that was the way locomotives arrived from the manufacturer.

Mr. Walter called for a greatly-expanded force of transport commission inspectors to check on railway compliance with safety standards.

Without outlining the details of his proposal, Mr. Walter advocated a factual group of workers and management, working with the transport commission to regulating rail safety matters.

During brief replies to Mr. Walter's five-hour long dissertation legal counsels for both railways supported the call for a three-way supervisory board.

Committee Chairman D. H. Jones closed the safety inquiry by thanking all participants for thorough and co-operative work but he had special praise for the labor association's contribution.

Court Ousts Lortie

MONTREAL (CP) — Screaming "vive le Quebec libre" and "Nous Vaincrons;" Bernard Lortie was hustled out of the Court of Queen's Bench Thursday during his trial for the kidnapping of Pierre Laporte last October.

Mr. Justice Jean-Paul Bergeron ordered Lortie's removal so that testimony could continue uninterrupted.

Attorney-General Will Hear Labor Charges Against Police

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Lawrence has agreed to meet today with union leaders to discuss charges of police harassment in the violence-marked strike at Terpack Ltd. of Brantford which began eight weeks ago.

The meeting was disclosed Thursday to about 300 placard-carrying workers from seven Ontario cities, who staged a peaceful protest march in front of Queen's Park in support of the 150 Terpack workers, most of them women.

R. Kent Rowley, president of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Union which represents the Brantford workers, told cheering workers that Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence and Labor Minister Gordon Carton had also been invited to attend the meeting.

The workers at Terpack, a United States subsidiary and largest supplier of medical bandages to Ontario hospitals with sales of more than $450 million a year, are seeking an increase in the current average hourly wage of $1.93.

More than 100 charges have been laid against 80 persons as the result of violence that followed an injunction limiting picketing outside the plant.

Mr. Rowley said in an interview Thursday the union will ask the attorney-general to have the charges withdrawn and a directive issued to provincial police to refrain from what he described as harassment of workers on picket duty.

He charged that the police were using rough tactics to "intimidate workers."

Strikebreakers Not Illegal: Lawrence

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Lawrence said Thursday night companies can be penalized for using strikebreakers, but the minister's office later retracted the statement.

Mr. Lawrence was grilled on a current strike at the Terpack Ltd. plant in Brantford during a discussion with about 300 students at the University of Toronto, part of a three-day student orientation festival.

He termed strikebreaking a "highly reprehensible labor practice" and said Ontario labor laws provide ways of preventing strikebreakers from entering a plant without physical obstruction.

He said he was uncertain of the exact provision of the legislation but was sure it was there.

Later, he told reporters that "under the Ontario Labor Relations Act there is a section which can penalize companies for using strikebreakers."

This was the statement his office later retracted in telephone calls to news media.

Teenagers on Welfare Use Rent-a-baby Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — City welfare director Walter Boyd has cut off social assistance payments to most persons under the age of 19, charging that many young applicants simply want to "shack up, blow grass and generally dig the scene at taxpayer expense."

Mr. Boyd took the action through a directive to the city welfare staff to remove all 16- and 17-year-olds and most 18-year-olds from the assistance rolls. He said about 250 persons are affected.

Mr. Boyd said his department had encountered a number of schemes used by young people to gain assistance to get increased payments.

One involved a rent-a-baby operation where couples pretended to have a child to get more money.

"Everybody that came in had the child dressed differently, but the kid was eight months old and it got to the point where he was recognizing the social workers."

Phosphates Back

WASHINGTON (CP) — A United States reversal of policy in urging American housewives to return to the use of phosphate detergents comes as a blow to Canada—U.S. efforts to clean up the Great Lakes.

The reason for the surprise announcement Wednesday was that the new substitutes for phosphates in detergents—including caustic soda and the chemical NTA—are harmful to humans.

UCW Attend Bay of Quinte Conference at Camp Quin-Mo-Lac

Camp Quin-Mo-Lac facilities were taxed to capacity as 172 United Church Women assembled for a weekend of study, fellowship and fun from all parts of the Bay of Quinte Conference on Sept. 10, 11 and 12. Twenty-four came from Belleville Presbyterial. Presentations of various types were used to carry out the theme Trends in the Church. Part Two, An element of surprise permeated the program as each presbyterial participated in a do-it-yourself item for the weekend. The first venture by Cobourg Presbyterial consisted of Ice-Breaker. The members of the dust in musical copa performed from a stage of one bench plus two chairs to introduce the activities. Renfrew Presbyterial followed in quick succession with Effective Christian Communication. This involved a quiz in which all ventured their communication level. A film preceded the evening social hour.

The stewardship trend was ably dealt with by Mrs. Margaret Lawson, finance chairman of the Board of women. She said we need to know what we started from; where we are now and where we are going. Under the first heading the early missionary work was recalled, then the concepts of the UCW as it was formulated, some of which we are only now attaining. Mrs. Lawson urged wider use of all resources at hand. In looking at the future she emphasized that total stewardship is time, talent and treasure. This would involve program, leadership and social action. Each part depends on the other; no part stands alone. At the close Mrs. Lawson fielded questions from the group.

Saturday afternoon saw the camp divided into their working groups of eight as Lindsay Presbyterial presented their Venture, "what it takes into the new church". Each group discussed and filled in their own sheets using these heads; religious practices and what they mean to us; what we would miss and what we would re-establish if all Christian operation disappeared; what we would take into the new Church and what the goals of the new church would be.

A very effective women's Lib march and tea - burning demonstrations got Oshawa Presbyterial off to a good start in their Venture on "the status of women". A panel of four discussed in depth such topics as: the roles of the sexes higher education for girls; jobs for women; problems of an elderly widow and of a young deserted mother of five children. Recommendations of the Status of Women Report and how they would affect these areas were given. The women then broke into groups for further discussion.

The introduction of the new study on Africa was timely. Peterborough Presbyterial presented this in its Venture called "Mission Africa". Mrs. Hopkins as leader described this large continent as to surface, climate, wild life, etc. Other members showed articles they had collected such as posters, letters, miniature animals and articles made by Africans.

"Building a worship service", was the theme of Kingston Presbyterial in their Venture. Each member described a phase of the worship: call, music, prayer, etc. Participants should remember they are not performers but channels through which God sends a message. The group then presented a beautiful worship on the theme, wonder of Our Father's world. Recorded music and slides were used effectively as background.

Rev. George Ansbury conducted three sessions which dealt with the revelance of I Corinthians 13 in connection with its relationship to every day living. Other aspects of the "face to face" presentation enabled the group to study leadership, communication, goal setting, trust participation, the expression of feelings and evaluation. Sharing the insights of the study group highlighed procedure in each session.

The summary of the weekend was given on Sunday morning by Belleville Presbyterial. This was in the form of a skit and ably conducted by president Mrs. Fran Spear.

Music was a delightful interlude of the weekend under the direction of Mrs. Irene Hagerman, assisted by Mrs. Maude Harrison at the piano or accordion. Entertaining skits around the camp fire contributed to the fun of the weekend.

MRS. DIANE KORT (nee Flesch), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Flesch, RR4, Belleville, graduated on August 27 from the Hotel Dieu Hospital School of Nursing Kingston. Mrs. Kort, who is a graduate of Moira Secondary School, Belleville, plans to remain on staff of Hotel Dieu Hospital.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES A. ANDERSON

Anderson – Aitken

A former pastor at Christ Church, Belleville Rev. David Hawkins, officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in that church when Lynda Ann Aitken daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Aitken, Foxboro, became the bride of James Alfred Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Anderson of Belleville. John Withers church organist provided traditional wedding music.

For her wedding, the bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length gown of dotted Swiss material enhanced with bishop sleeves adorned with lace trim with matching lace at the collar. She wore a shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of American Beauty red roses.

Doris Ann Walker and Sandra Aitken attended the bride and wore gowns styled similarly to hers but in blue shade. Each carried a bouquet of blue tinted mums.

A garden reception was held at the home of bride's parents where Mrs. Aitken received the guests wearing a mauve lace over taffeta street length dress with accordion pleated sleeves, white accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. Assisting, the bridegroom's mother wore a blue crimplene coat dress and a corsage of lalliman sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip to points north, the bride chose a brown and beige crimplene dress with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

On return Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside at Waterloo, Ontario.

Prior to her recent wedding Mrs. Robert Cretney (nee Catherine Nicholson) was honored at several showers by the members of Brookview Bible Chapel of Thorold South Gospel Chapel; of Scottlea Gospel Chapel; of Ridgeville Bible Chapel; of Niagara Falls Gospel Hall; by Mrs. James Bethune; Mrs. Robert Reyburn; Miss Louise Funk; Mrs. Stewart Jones and Mrs. Harry Gale.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fletcher of Halifax, Nova Scotia, are pictured following their recent marriage in Nappan United Church, Nappan, Nova Scotia. The bride is the former Alice Bertha Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Reid of Nappan, Nova Scotia. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher of Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT CRETNEY

Cretney – Nicholson

Brockville Bible chapel, St. Catharines was the setting for the September 4 wedding of Catherine Jean Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Boyd Nicholson of St. Catharines and of Robert Stephen Cretney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cretney of Belleville. Mr. William Robertson and Mr. J. B. Nicholson were the officiating clergymen while Mrs. Ronald Hawkins played organ music. Appropriate nuptial selections were sung by Jack Averell and Douglas Jones.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length princess line gown of satin with a scoop neckline and a self-attached train of aztron sheer falling from the waist. A coronet held in place her shoulder-length veil trimmed with organza lace. Her bouquet was a cascade of miniature carnations, mauve orchids and white stephanotis.

The matron of honor Mrs. James Bethune wore a mauve floor-length gown of ottoman with a purple sash. Her hair was adorned with flowers and she carried a mauve and purple cascade bouquet with purple ribbon trailing down to the floor.

Dressed identically to the matron of honor were the bridesmaids Miss Gayle Siglelow, Miss Louis Funk, Mrs. Stewart Jones and Mrs. Robert Reyburn.

The best man was Terrance Cretney. Guests were ushered by J. Boyd Nicholson junior, William Nicholson, Stewart Jones and Bernard Hawkins.

The reception was held at Queenston Heights, Queenston. Greeting guests was the bride's mother in a purple crimplene ensemble with a purple hat and a mauve orchid corsage.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a turquoise and gold dress of Indian silk with a matching hood and a corsage of gold roses.

For the wedding trip to Bermuda the bride left in a pink ensemble with a matching pink orchid corsage. Upon return the couple will reside in St. Catharines.

Hostess Plays Important Role at Party

By DORIS CLARK

Conversation lagged. The man who travelled for the Canadian government was asked a few more questions about places he had been, opportunities for advancement, even the weather in distant regions. Silence again.

This was a room full of friendly people, yet each had come from home by all of his own concerns and the transition to sociable conversation called for painful effort.

The hostess came to the rescue. From her private SOS pantry she drew one of the makings of a game of charades: little slips of paper containing jury definitions, song titles, witty sayings. Gave one to each guest.

Soon the room was full of talk and laughter, as each person took a turn at acting out his assignment and the others shouted their responses to his clues.

Such are the saving properties of a good game. Try it, next time!

* * *

Dear Doris: I am 17 and in grade 11. I like this boy who is several months older. He works, but his parents are strictnes and his older brother is married but divorced. Therefore my parents hate this boy.

My parents tell me that if I ever go with him not to come back. They think he is wild and good for nothing. If I ever get a chance to go with him, I know I'll go because I love him too much to refuse. Why are my parents so prejudiced against him?

When I saw him last Saturday, he said "hi" and nothing! That's all we did; when my parents found out they almost threw a fit. I got hit for it. To tell the truth I get beat up pretty good, just for voicing my opinion and defending guys like him.

But if he'll ever love me, I'll go to him without delay, so help me! — No Way

Dear No Way: Some folks use pretty primitive methods of driving their point home, don't they? But if your mother and father were a little less forceful, would you listen to them at all?

Let's face it. Shirtless parents have a way of reproducing their kind — and already one of their boys has shown an inability to make marriage work. We don't want you among those disillusioned mates!

You'd better learn a little more about men before using that "love" so desperately. Play the field, much as it hurts.

* * *

Dear Doris: Please tell me if there is anything else that can take away or make laughlines less noticeable. I also have lines across the bridge of my nose and around my eyes, although I put eye cream on and moisturizing lotions under make-up. — Lisa.

Dear Lisa: How nice that you have laugh lines! A photographer once pointed out to me that if he were to remove all the facial lines from a photograph, its character would vanish too.

But complexions do tend to dry out as we age and deepen the lines. Besides heaping a severe suppression and avoiding frowning, creams and lotions help.

And here at la Vega exercise to keep the face flexible: They call it the Lion. I expect you are supposed to look like one, because you kneel on the floor, hands on thighs, palms down. Then open your fingers and slide them forward until tips touch floor. Then head forward, buttocks off the heels, arms straight.

Now for a fierce look: Open your eyes as wide as possible; stick your tongue out as far as it will go, trying to touch tip of your chin with it. Then roar—like a lion (optional). Hold position for 15 seconds, relax and repeat twice. All of which will make you feel sufficiently ridiculous to encourage laugh lines instead of frown wrinkles!

We now have some understanding of why passers-by do as they do. Write to Doris about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Medical Care Discussed At QMSA Meet

Thirty - eight physicians attended the first QMSA dinner meeting held at the Quinte Hotel. Rigaining was given by Mrs. Ruth Cunningham and after dinner, the meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Diane Maxwell.

Members were reminded of meeting protocol, and topics re DRESP and comparison of medical care in other countries were discussed.

The next meeting will be at Education Hall BGH 10 October at 8 p.m. when presentation of committee reports and election of officers will be held. It is also the QMSA's sixth birthday.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Butter Tarts with Coconut

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: Here is a tart recipe my mother made up . . . everybody pounces on them when I serve them . . . — Annette I.

ANSWER: To introduce my new secretary to you I asked her to test your tart recipe. Her name is Maureen and she is a good cook and splendid helper. The tarts she turned out were pounced on here too and I recommend them to readers.

ANNETTE'S BUTTER TARTS (eighteen 2¾")

1 cup brown sugar (lightly packed)
3 tbsps. soft butter
½ cup milk
¼ cup corn syrup
½ tsp. vanilla
1 egg
Coconut (see below)

Cream sugar and butter then beat in remaining ingredients except coconut. Line 18 2¾" tart tins (I used non-stick tins) to facilitate removal) with your best pastry. Sprinkle bottoms of each with ½ tsp. coconut. Half fill each with mixture. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 15 min. or until pastry edges are tinged with gold. Let rest in tins until cool. Thank you Annette.

LETTER: This low - cholesterol topping tastes like marshmallow and I am using the recipe . . . Mrs. Marion D.

ANSWER: Thank you Marion. We found we had to whip it for 15 minutes.

WHIPPED TOPPING
(Courtesy Marion D.)

¼ cup cold water
1-3 -cup bet quality fresh skim milk powder
1 tbsp. cold water (second amount)
½ tsp. plain gelatine
1 tbsp. soft butter
½ tsp. vanilla
2 tsps. lemon juice
Combine first child in braier bowl the ¼ cup water and skim milk powder. Meanwhile in measuring cup soak gelatine in the 1 tbsp. cold water. Place over hot water until dissolved. Cool to room temperature. Add to milk mixture and beat with electric beater until stiff enough to hold in peaks. Add sugar, lemon juice and vanilla and continue beating until stiffer.

Excellent for molasses and those on no-fat diets.

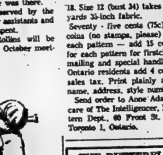
UCW MEETINGS

ST. ANDREW'S UCW
Unit 3

Mrs. McCoy was hostess for the September meeting of St. Andrew's United Church Women, Unit 3. Madge. Mrs. G. Holland opened the meeting with the reading of a poem.



The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll call "a craft made by Indians" was answered by eight members and four children.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. A. McCoy. It was moved by Mrs. F. Stein and seconded by Mrs. A. McCoy that they have a bazaar and bake sale at Cooper School on October 20th.

Mrs. G. Holmes announced that the next meeting which will be the "general meeting" will be held at Cooper School on October 4th at 8 p.m. Hostesses were chosen for this meeting.

The next meeting of this Unit will be at Mrs. R. Rollins' with Mrs. G. Graham and L. Graham assistants. Mrs. G. Graham was in charge of the Study Book and the Worship Service. The study book re: "Indian Canadians" was very interesting and the ladies had a good discussion on this. Mrs. Graham read the Scripture — Galatfhns 5:1315; 25, 26.

She was assisted by members present in several readings. The meeting closed with Mizpah Benediction. Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

Weather Lowers Attendance

TWEED — Despite the poor weather Denbigh Fair was enjoyed by those in attendance, gate receipts were down, of course. Especially good, the horse drawing events attracted many competitors. Exhibits in the school sections were good, there were not as many exhibits as in some years in the adult sections. The wool and syrup (maple) displays were bigger than last year.

Cloyce and Denbigh Women's Institute branches displayed five place mats. A booth to sell handsome goods, crafts and baking was shared by the Lutheran Church, United Church and the Women's Institute.

As usual the dinner and supper meals were very good and much enjoyed.

Ann Landers

Many People Wait For Parents to Die

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It seems that a good many people are waiting around for their parents to die and leave them something. I know this sounds terrible but it's true.

My husband and I have six children. We plan to send them all through college and professional school, if they want to go. This will take a great deal of money. If we continue to live carefully, however, we can do it.

I am an only child. My parents are what you might call "very comfortable."

This is what I have told them, and I mean it from the bottom of my heart: "I don't care if you leave me a dime. If possible, just don't have any left. Then you both to have one heck of a time. You've worked hard and you deserve to have fun."

I'm pleased to see they are taking my advice. — ANY-WHERE U.S.A.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANYWHERE: Thanks for a good letter. I hope the decadent few who wrote the next one reads yours and learns something.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My father is 65 years old. He married a very plain widow last year when Mama died. This woman came from nowhere and she had nothing when Dad married her. (Got even a decent cut for coat.)

Today she has more clothes than I have. She also has a big diamond ring, a luxury apartment, and they are going on a trip to the Orient in December.

Mama worked with Dad in business. Everything he has he owes to her. She was the brains of the family. It kills me to see him spending all this money on his second wife. My brother and I feel that he is really spending our money because Mom worked harder for it than Dad did and we are sure she would have preferred that we have it. At the rate he is going we won't leave us five cents. Is this fair? I'd like your opinion. — LEFT OUT.

DEAR LEFT: Apparently your mother left everything to your father. If so, you must assume that that's the way she wanted it. And since it's his money he can spend it any way he wants to.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was intrigued by the letter from the woman begging for relief for at least a million Misfortunates who are hopelessly trapped by the larcenous glamorizers called "social showers." Your Landers Law was wonderful — no shower per bride, to be given by the bridesmaids: limit of $3 for a gift.

I hope it catches on, but I am not very optimistic. A friend of mine told me just yesterday that she had been invited to the ninth shower for the same bride. Sickening.

I have just received an invitation to my third fiancée shower. At the last one I attended, the bride received 15 hallslips. Isn't this ridiculous? Keep hammering away, Ann. Some day's your column is the "only" thing in the paper that makes sense. — SKEWERED ON SHOWERS.

DEAR SKEW: Hammering away won't do it. The only thing that will work is for women such as you to pass the word in your own communities. If enough level-headed ladies band together and boycott these tea table rubberlegs, people will stop giving them.

Rise in Jobless Predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — Stephen Lewis predicted Thursday that 317,000 persons will be unemployed in Ontario by mid-winter and called on the Ontario government to "end the tax holiday to corporations" and use the resulting $75 million to start an emergency employment program.

"If they don't do it in the next few weeks it will never happen," the Ontario New Democratic Party leader said.

Figures released by Statistics Canada earlier showed that 340,000 were unemployed in the province in August.

An NDP government, he said, would save $75 million by ending a five-per-cent tax credit to corporations purchasing new machinery and equipment.

The tax credit was announced April 26 in the budget by Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough who said it would stimulate the economy. The credit was expected to cost the government about $125 million.

Mr. Lewis said the unemployment figures prove that the $125 million "handout" has been a colossal failure.

"That gift to the corporations hasn't yet resulted in one job in Ontario," he said, a dismal record for a government that pretends "a certain sophistication" in business accounting and management.

"Ninety per cent of the machinery and equipment, for which the exemptions were applied, they intended to purchase anyway," he said.

An NDP government would use the money to get an early start on municipal projects that have been shelved, such as construction on 150,000 housing units, increase assistance to municipalities and industry for waste-treatment facilities and support extension of services in recreation, mental health, public health, day-care centres, and senior citizens' care.

The 33-year-old leader was speaking at a news conference in the campaign headquarters of Michael Cassidy, NDP candidate in Ottawa Centre.

He estimated that 75,000 jobs could be created through his program, 10 times the number created in a government winter works scheme to cut down and remove diseased elm trees beside highways last winter.

Mr. Lewis said the most dramatic job expansion in the next 18 years will be in services to people in the areas of day care, counselling of the unemployed and care of the aged—"those most neglected by this government."

The NDP holds none of the six seats in Ottawa—five are held by Progressive Conservatives, one by a Liberal.

Private Member's Role Diminished

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon hit out Thursday night at the Progressive Conservative government's attitude toward legislature backbenchers and at the absenteeism of Tory members in the house.

Mr. Nixon told a crowd of about 800 at a nomination meeting that "whether it was concerted Conservative policy or inadvertence," the private member's role in the legislature has declined.

This, he said, was the most serious failing of the government in the last 19 years.

He criticized all parties for allowing too much absenteeism in the house, but was particularly critical of the Conservatives.

"When a vote is called, the bells summoning members to the chamber could ring "40 minutes, 20 minutes or up to two hours — I don't know what the record is.

"They ring while the Conservative whip calls up to summon members, breaks up euchre games, to get the party members in.

"I must say it is impressive when those blue government seats fill up with the well-fed forms of government members but in eastern Ontario who have never been in a real election fight until now."

"They stand up when the vote is taken, bang their desks as if right has triumphed once again and they don't even know what they're voting for.

Rivals' Proposals Expensive: Davis

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Thursday provincial corporation taxes would have to be increased by 18 points, making it the highest of any Canadian province to pay for only one plank of the spending programs endorsed by opposition parties.

"That's the dollar impact," Mr. Davis said in similar, side-by-side speeches delivered at two area nomination conventions.

The other impact was unemployment. "I can't think of a more effective way of putting men out of work."

Mr. Davis referred specifically to proposals for a premium-free medical-health care program by "one of the opposition parties," an apparent reference to the New Democratic Party, which he said would add 18 points to corporation taxes. The NDP has suggested part of the revenue loss from eliminating premiums could be recovered from a higher tax on corporations.

Mr. Davis, who says his campaign for the Oct. 21 provincial election doesn't start until next week, was in fine campaign form as he attacked the opposition for "auctioning off" the economy," trading opportunities for growth.

"Let me ask you, is this the time for the government to embark on a spending spree from which the certain consequence is an increase in taxation, adding to the present burdens already borne by those who earn wages and those who create wages?"

Mr. Davis appeared at the plush, 1,116-seat Seneca College auditorium, which was about half-filled, in the north-end York Mills riding to support Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales, re-nominated by acclamation.

He made a quick 20-mile-dash by car across the city to attend the convention at Huron recreation arena in Mississauga, west of here, that re-nominated incumbent Doug Kennedy in Peel South. About 1,700 persons filled 700 chairs and the bleacher section to cheer Mr. Davis who vowed to "tell the people of Ontario how it is."

Shulman And Ben Pleased

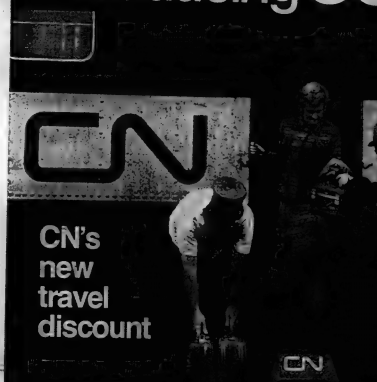
TORONTO (CP) — Opposition critics endorsed an Ontario government report released Thursday that criticized large government-run institutions for the mentally retarded and called for smaller self-sufficient facilities that are more a part of the community.

Dr. Morton Shulman of the New Democratic Party and George Ben, a Liberal critic, both said they were pleased with the report but indicated the report was late in coming.

The report, prepared by Toronto lawyer Walter Williston, said institutional living for the retarded is dull, monotonous and impersonal. Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said the existing institutions should be eliminated within five years.

United Church Supports Davis

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church of Canada supports Premier William Davis's decision not to extend government grants to Ontario's separate schools beyond Grade 10, the secretary of the church's general council, Rev. Ernest Long, said Thursday.



"We believe that the churches and our religious convictions should be drawing both adults and youth together in our global village and not building walls which separate them," he said in a letter to the premier.

"We believe that the public school system is a great unifier in our society and that no one is being discriminated against when the system is operating at maximum efficiency."

The letter was sent to Mr. Davis Thursday to clarify the stand of the United Church "in view of a statement also made today by Archbishop Philip Pocock," chairman of the Roman Catholic bishops of Ontario.

He told a news conference that the decision against extension of aid to separate schools is discriminatory" against Roman Catholic students and creates an additional financial burden on parents who wish their children to continue in separate schools.

Archbishop Pocock said that some of the 70 Roman Catholic high schools in Ontario may be forced to close because of lack of money.

Direct Distance Dialing Latest Chapter in Bell Story

When George Hees, MP for Prince Edward - Hastings greeted Sylvester Mirus, of Belleville...Nova Scotia, this afternoon, he made local history, Mr. Hees, speaking from the Four Seasons Motor Hotel, had dialled Mr. Mirus's number directly from Belleville, Ontario.

Beginning Sunday, all Bell Canada subscribers in the Quinte area will be able to do the same thing, as Lee Grills, MP, Hastings, proved in a direct - dialled call to Rev. Henry Maloney in Bancroft during the inaugural ceremony.

Direct dialling arrives Sunday in Bancroft, Belleville, Cardiff, Frankford, Wooler, Maynooth and Trenton and on Sunday, November 11, will be extended to Arden, Bloomfield, Brighton, Coe Hill, Gilmour, Madoc, Marmora, Norwood, Stirling, Thurlow, Tweed and Wellington.

Bell's history in Belleville and area is one of constant growth from the latter part of the last century to the present. From hand - cranked sets to touch-tone instruments that now become available.

* * *

When telephone service first came to Belleville in 1881 the daring young gentleman and installers of the day were dashing around on high wheeler bicycles with sets draped like wreaths around their necks.

Perhaps it was interest in these hardy young men that first prompted S. R. Balkwill, an insurance man, to investigate the possibility of telephone service to Belleville. Whatever prompted him, however, Mr. Balkwill became the first agent of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada in his community when an exchange was set up in the back room of his insurance office on Bridge Street. The switchboard which provided services was a small one, primitive by today's standadds which could serve up to 50 lines.

Two Rubber Phones

In 1880 W. H. and J. L. Bigar had leased two rubber hand telephones from Professor Alexander Melville Bell, father of the inventor. A year earlier Trenton's first phones were ordered by Gilmour and Company for use between their offices in Trenton and Harbour.

When R. A. Choquette entered the company as messenger boy, and later operator, in 1882, Belleville's population had risen to 9,000 with the prosperous farming district surrounding the town and the numerous small manufacturing industries within its boundaries combining to make it a thriving and expanding provincial centre.

An article in the Bell company's magazine, The Blue Bell, some years later gives us a vivid picture of working conditions in this first exchange:

"It was an eventful day in the Choquette family when young R. A. was chosen as the first operator of Belleville's young but growing exchange of 73 subscribers. For this he was paid $8 a month) working 72 hours a week."

In the same year W. M. Wilde succeeded Mr. Balkwill as telephone agent and the telephone office was moved to a new location on Campbell Street.

29 Subscribers

The first available list of telephone subscribers for the exchange is dated the following year, November 1883. This issue of the well-worn Eastern Ontario directory lists 29 subscribers for Belleville and 10 for Trenton.

The next name to figure prominently in telephone history in Belleville is that of C. W. Stringer, who was agent, and later local manager from 1884 until 1900. Managerial duties in the early days of service were much less restricted than they are today. Mr. Stringer's job, for example, included unloading poles, installing telephones, handling all company correspondence and reports originating in his area, and even personally delivering dynamite to line foremen at work on the road.

Perilous Meeting

Mr. Stringer later recalled, "I remember one day I was taking a case of dynamite to the foreman on the Picton line and we met one of those new steam threshing engines and for half a mile it was just a question of whether the dynamite would reach the foreman or I and the team of horses would go skyward in an explosion, as the roads in those days was not as smooth as today."

By the mid-eighties, service was not yet continuous and calls were restricted to 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays, 9 to 4 p.m. on Sundays and 10 a.m. to noon as well as 2 to 4 p.m. on holidays.

John Francis Gardner joined Mr. Choquette and Mr. Stringer at the Belleville office in 1885 as messenger and operator. Once he had mastered the intricacies of the switchboard and installation procedure, Mr. Gardner was able to recount as a typical day at the exchange of the rate-fighting one when he set out on his bicycle, "one of those high things with a 54-inch front wheel and an 18-inch back wheel" with his inspector's bag over one shoulder and a telephone set on his back. Travelling on his bike, he "could chase trouble and repair subscribers' sets with the greatest of ease". In the same year, a line was completed from Picton to Trenton through Wellen's Bay, Wellington, West Point and Bloomfield, making Trenton an important point on the Montreal-Detroit line.

With the beginning of 24-hour service in Belleville in 1886, the exchange took its place among the important telephone centres in Ontario. The informal atmosphere prevailing along the Kingston - Belleville route gave way to a more formal one and the Sunday evening "Musicals" during which operators all along the line were entertained by fellow workers, were stopped to leave the circuits open for more useful, if less entertaining, use of the telephone.

The following year a new long distance line was proposed between these two centres and at the turn of the century the Kingston - Belleville line was made metallic with 67 miles of copper wire strung between the two points.

Earlier, in 1880, a line of poles was proposed between Toronto and Belleville, to make this centre a prominent point of contact on the proposed Montreal - Toronto metallic circuit.

Copper Circuit

By the late 1890s the new line was completed to the point where the company was able to advise subscribers that it was now possible to telephone over the "new copper metallic circuit long distance line" to Toronto, Ottawa, London, Quebec, Hamilton, Sherbrooke, and intermediate points".

It was the same time that telephone numbers were first assigned to Trenton subscribers. Before, operators had to memorize the line location and number of rings for each customer. Subscribers called in and asked for Joe Smith or John Doe and if the same line inquired about the sick, asked the time of day, and hours of church services.

By June 1898, the Belleville office had been moved again, this time to more spacious quarters on Bridge Street.

The turn of the century saw more than 250 subscribers listed in the Bell directory under Belleville. The newest thing in telephoning was the "long-distance" telephone, which was rapidly replacing the Blake telephone in subscribers' homes and offices.

Three-box Phone

The Blake set, a three-box instrument with the mouthpiece in the centre box, the battery for the talking current in the large bottom box and the magneto generator in the small top box, from which the receiver also hung, had been used since the earliest days of telephone service. The new set, however, had an improved transmitter that enabled telephone users to speak easily over longer distances.

Construction Crew in Front of Pinnacle Street Office in 1928

By 1899 three Belleville subscribers had asterisks beside their name in the directory to indicate that they had these new sets. They were Abbott, Mitchell, Iron and Steel Co. of Ontario, 319 Front; Bell, Jos., Private Office, 30 Bridge St.; and Mathison, E., Private Office, the Deaf and Dumb Institute.

The turn of the century saw a new local manager appointed for Belleville. When Mr. Stringer left to take up another position with the Company, E. H. Farrow was appointed to head the Belleville exchange. When he arrived to take over at the office, Mr. Farrow was met by a staff of seven. Miss Lizzie Dunn was then chief operator, assisted by Misses Wilson and Brennan and night operator Miss Faull. Beechwood McMurray and E. Roe were the switchboard men and Frank Caron, lineman.
